House Insists On $50 Pay For Services, Returns Bill

Rankin Seeks Senate Record Vote; Managers Told To Stand Firm

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

By an overwhelming vote of 332 to 31, the House yesterday demanded an increase from $21 to $50 a month in basic pay to enlisted men in the Nation's armed services.

The pay bill, carrying a $42 monthly basic pay allotment, was sent back to conference with instructions to managers to stand by original House insistence on a $50 minimum.

The recommittal motion was offered by Representative Rankin (Democrat) of Mississippi, original sponsor of the steeper pay increase, who said he was insisting the amendment go to a Senate record vote.

House Vote About the Same

"If the bill comes back without the increase we will recommit it again," he told reporters. "But if the Senate has a roll call vote, they'll take the increase."

Senate conferees on the bill were not so certain. One of the Senate managers predicted the Senate Conference Committee would refuse to budge from its stand for a $42 minimum, and that the Senate will support its conferees.

Yesterday's vote showed very little shift from the original House count of 332 to 28, when Rankin first offered his amendment to pay $50 to privates and apprentice seamen and $54 to first-class privates and second-class seamen. The Senate approved $42 and $48 respectively for the two grades.

Other Provisions Not Involved

Not involved in the controversy were other provisions of the conference report raising the salaries of noncommissioned and commissioned officers in the lower brackets and increasing subsistence allowances generally.

Men now entering the service receive $21 a month but after four months their pay jumps to $30, and after one year to $40. The conference compromise would pay them $42 to start, and the Rankin amendment $8 more.

No plans had been arranged for another conference last night and it seemed unlikely that any increase could become law before July 1. June 1 falls on Monday. Under terms of the bill, increases would not become effective until the first day of the calendar month follow-

House Group Hears Criticism Of Sales Tax

The Treasury last night fired its opening cannonade against mounting Congressional sentiment for a sales tax as the House Ways and Means Committee held its first extraordinary night session.

Randolph Paul, tax adviser to Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, opposed the three varied forms of the tax, the Federal retail sales levy, the manufacturers' excise tax and the wholesale tax.

Accompanying Paul before the committee, which has a two billion dollar revenue shortage in its bill and is flirting with the sales tax to make up the deficiency, was James W. Martin, professor of economics at the University of Kentucky and a Treasury tax consultant. Martin, who has studied operation of the sales tax in several States and in Canada, presented a practical study of the three principle plans, without personal commitments.

Earlier the committee added another 300 million dollars to the amount of revenue it may have to make up if it is to reach the Treasury's $3,700,000,000 over-all revenue goal, by refusing to accept any increases in estate and gift tax rates.

Rejected by the committee without a record vote were Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's recommendations for a sharp increase in estate tax rates from the present 3 to 77 per cent spread, to an 8 to 80 per cent range. Morgenthau wanted gift taxes correspondingly hiked, but the committee held to present rates.

Murray Walks Out Of Miners' Session

By Joseph A. Loftus
Associated Press Staff Writer

Philip Murray walked out of a meeting of the United Mine Workers' policy committee yesterday in protest against accusations that the C. I. O. leadership was guilty of sabotage and treason to labor.

District 50 of the mine union made the accusations in a resolution, which said Murray, as C. I. O. president, refused to take any action to prevent a campaign of "abuse, insult, injury, intimidation and slander" against the organization efforts of the district. It did not mention him as vice president of the U. M. W. No action was taken immediately on the resolution. The District 50 membership includes dairy farmers, coke, gas, chemical and cosmetic workers.

Murray said he told the closed meeting the resolution was "an extraordinary procedure that did not conform to the principles of common decency." He said the place to lodge charges against him as C. I. O. president or against other C. I. O. union officers was before the C. I. O. executive board. He invited such action at the board meeting next week.

An official spokesman for the miners said the accusations in the resolution did not constitute formal charges of a constitutional nature and that the policy committee's position was advisory. The executive board, the ruling authority between conventions, may or may not accept the committee's advice. It was said officially the committee probably would act on the resolution, or on another one containing substantially the same subject matter, before adjournment.

Witnesses disclosed that Murray, in protesting the accusations and defending himself before leaving the hall, engaged in an interchange with John L. Lewis, president of the U. M. W., on the question of Murray's continuing in three positions, vice president of the miners, president of C. I. O., and president

Hoffman to Go Before Agents Jury Again

Agrees to Testify Today; Postoffice Probes Winrod Monthly

By Dillard Stokes
Post Staff Writer

Representative Clare E. Hoffman agreed late yesterday to testify again today before the special grand jury on Axis agents—which is near the climax of a probe of the subversive groups which handled thousands of copies of Hoffman's "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech.

Hoffman, who has been on the witness stand three times already, promised to be at Judiciary Square at 2 p. m.

There were other sensational developments yesterday in Attorney General Biddle's cleanup of the propagandists of defeat and disunity. These included:

1. The Postoffice Department started a review of Gerald Winrod's monthly magazine, Defender, to determine whether a "contest" run by the Wichita, Kans., Nazi sympathizer comes within the lottery laws.

2. Trial of two men for conspiracy with Japanese agents and violating the Foreign Agents Act neared its end before Justice T. Alan Goldsborough. The case may go to the jury today.

3. Special Prosecutors William Power Maloney and John T. M. Reddan spent hours examining a mystery witness, whose name they kept secret. Maloney said the man brought sensational evidence.

4. Called before the grand jury, to testify this morning, was the "coordinator" of a bloc of the subversive enterprises under investigation—H. Victor Broenstepp, one of the lawyers for the Silver Shirter, William Dudley Pelley, who faces sedition charges in Indianapolis.

Hoffman had the Government Printing Office turn out 145,000 copies of the "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech, which he made in the House

Jones Charges Political Bias In Rubber Quiz

Outburst Follows Series of 'I Don't Know' to Questions

By Robert De Vore
Post Staff Writer

Secretary of Commerce Jesse Jones snapped out an accusation of political bias yesterday during examination on the rubber situation before the House Interstate Commerce Committee.

Jones faced searching committee inquiry for about an hour. Most of the questions were asked by Representative Wolverton of New Jersey, ranking Republican on the committee. Most of the Secretary's answers were:

"I don't know."

Virtually the only new light the Secretary shed on the rubber problem was that:

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, of which he is the head, is ready to buy and reclaim scrap rubber, and that a completed program for building up stocks from supplies of used rubber would be announced in a few days.

Earlier in the day the War Production Board announced its decision to raise the country's capacity for production of synthetic rubber by allocating in 1943 200 million gallons of grain distilled alcohol for the 1943 manufacture of butadiene, synthetic rubber raw ma-

6 Ships Lost; Patrol Sinks 3d U-Boat

4th Axis Raider Reported Seized As Sea Warfare Reaches New Fury

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

Submarine warfare throughout Western Hemisphere waters reached new heights of fury yesterday, as the sinking of six more merchant ships was announced, a third Axis U-boat was declared destroyed and a fourth undersea prowler was reported without confirmation to have been captured.

News dispatches from St. Lucia in the British West Indies said that American naval patrol authorities had announced the sinking of an Axis sub off the French island of Martinique—believed to be the raider which attacked the U. S. destroyer Blakeley in Martinique waters Monday.

The International News Service said that Ensign Edward B. Binning of New York City had bombed and sunk the enemy craft about 10 miles from the northern end of Martinique while on moonlight patrol.

Quoting an official announcement from American naval authorities at St. Lucia, the dispatch said that the plane's bombs ended a long and grim hunt which started when the Blakeley was torpedoed but man-

The second-class seaman, reportedly only 17 years old, was the only man lost aboard the ship itself, but 19 crew members in a lifeboat were sucked under and lost. Twenty-two men were rescued.

Reds Hurl Back Nazi Flank Attack

Russia Gains in South And at Kharkov; Vast Battle Raging A[illegible]g 80-Mile Front

By the Associated Press

Moscow (Thursday), May 28. Russian troops battling on the Kharkov-Barvenkova fronts were reported today to have beaten their way forward in both areas after killing 4500 more Germans and capturing large quantities of equipment.

The midnight Soviet communique announced that the Red army had consolidated its gains before Kharkov while defeating fierce Nazi attacks in the Izyum-Barvenkova sector 80 miles to the south.

Fording Attempt Broken

A supplementary communique said 1400 Germans had been slain "in the Izyum direction," by the men of one rifle unit, and that in another sector the Germans were in retreat after having failed to ford a river—an attempt that was broken up by Soviet artillery firing at short range.

The Germans lost 1000 dead in that river action, and Soviet cavalrymen stabbing 40 miles behind the German lines in another area slew 2100 Germans.

Eighty-two German planes were declared destroyed in Tuesday's fighting, while Soviet losses were listed as 23 craft.

Front dispatches had said earlier that the Red army, backed up against a river in the Izyum-Barvenkova area, had counter-attacked in a daring stroke that considerably lessened the Nazi flanking threat there.

Vast Field of Combat

Intimating that the Kharkov and Barvenkova battlefronts now had become practically one vast field of combat, Maj. Gen. Nikolai Zhuravlev, a military reviewer, said all the fighting was "closely bound up from the operational point of view."

He declared the German failure to break through in the Izyum-Barvenkova area, despite a tremendous massing of tanks, was proof that the Nazis no longer enjoyed their former superiority in armament.

Already, in these initial operations of spring, the Germans have been forced to use 30 per cent of the tanks and armored cars they have on the Russian front, he declared.

All Soviet accounts stressed the number of tanks the Germans were employing (without mentioning an over-all estimate) and the numbers the Russians were destroying.

As a typical incident, Red Star, the army paper, said the Germans

Terrible Reprisal Likely

Prague Assassin Wings Nazis' Master Ax-Man

By the Associated Press

London, May 27.—Reinhard Heydrich, acting Reich's protector of Bohemia and Moravia and Gestapo purge master for Nazi-conquered territory, has been wounded in an assassination attempt in Prague and the threat of swift and terrible reprisal executions hung heavy tonight over old Czecho-Slovakia.

One Berlin broadcast said Heydrich's wound was not expected to prove fatal but gave no other intimation of the seriousness of his condition. Another said the attack occurred at 1 p. m. today on the Prague-Berlin highway but within the limits of Greater Prague.

The Reuters news agency heard the Vichy radio say late tonight that Heydrich's condition was grave.

Whoever fired the shot, which Czech circles here feared would touch off an unprecedented wholesale slaughter of their countrymen, apparently escaped. The German radio said a reward of 10 million crowns (worth $235,000 at the last quoted exchange rates a year ago) would be paid for his capture.

Martial law was clamped on the whole country immediately under which Karl Hermann Frank, Heydrich's deputy, announced:

"No civilian is permitted to leave his house between 9 p. m. tonight and 6 a. m. tomorrow.

"All public bars, cinemas, theaters and public entertainments will be closed, and all transport stopped.

"Anyone found on the streets during those hours and who does not stop when called upon to do so will be shot immediately."

A later announcement said:

"Whoever hopes to hide the guilty persons or who gives them any kind of help or security, or secretly withholds any knowledge of the

Rommel Opens Tank Attack on British Flank

Battle Raging All Along Libyan Line In New Offensive

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Egypt, May 27.—Strong Axis tank columns thrown forward in an effort to flank the southernmost point of the British Libyan triangle based on Tobruk and Ain el Gazala were engaged tonight by British armored forces in action so heavy as to indicate that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel may have opened a major offensive.

The first indication that Rommel was again on the march eastward, unfavorable though the season is for broad operations because of the intense heat, was given in the regular communique of the British imperial command which noted that his forces "including tanks in some strength" were advancing.

Then, in a subsequent special communique, British G. H. Q. thus disclosed that the fiercest action in some weeks had quickly developed:

10,000 Slain; Tigers Active, Hint Lessening Of Foe's Air Power

BULLETIN

Tokyo (From Japanese Broadcasts), May 28 (AP).—A Domei dispatch from a Japanese base in Central China reported today the fall to Japanese forces of Kinhwa, capital of the seaboard province of Chekiang.

By the Associated Press

Chungking, May 27—The Japanese army of 100,000 which launched the offensive in seaboard Chekiang Province has been decimated, having lost 15,300 in casualties, at least 10,000 of them dead, and still has not been able to take Kinhwa, the provincial capital, the Chinese reported tonight.

At the same time, Chinese advices from the backdoor battlegrounds of Burma and Yunnan Province painted a more favorable picture. The American Flying Tigers were reported still hammering Japanese troops, who now apparently had been stripped of effective air protection, and Chinese troops reported new successes.

About 1500 Japanese were killed when they advanced through a Chinese mine field, exploding 70 or 80 of the buried mines, the communique added, and only about 200 of the Japanese who later succeeded in entering the suburb of Kwangkitow managed to escape from a Chinese bayonet charge.

The situation of Kinhwa was still precarious, however, with fighting continuing to rage on three sides of the city.

An enemy unit also was reported repulsed east of Lanchi, 15 miles

In one of the most drastic steps yet taken by any war agency, the War Man Power Commission last night decided to freeze essential workers in critical war industries in their present jobs.

The action was taken to prevent the continuance of widespread "pirating" of workers through the offering of higher wages or other incentives, to lure them from one essential position to another.

Must Approve Shifts

Following its regular weekly meeting, the commission directed Chairman Paul V. McNutt to prepare a policy statement designed to prevent such pirating in the future.

Commission officials explained that this would be done through the designation of the United States Employment Service as the sole hiring agent for specified war industries which are considered critical.

A spokesman said that under the restriction, essential war workers "will be unable to change from one war plant to another without approval of the Federal Employment Service."

Pirating has been most prevalent, it was explained, in the aircraft, shipbuilding and ordnance industries, and among former workers in the automobile industry, now completely converted to war production.

No Legal Machinery

Agricultural workers will not be included in the freezing operation, which will be confined to a specific list of war industries where the practice is said to have been widespread.

Under the procedure as outlined by a commission spokesman, an essential worker in, for instance, the aircraft industry, could be hired by any of the industries listed only

Big U. S. Planes Taking Arms From India to China

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

More than a score of big American transport planes are engaged in carrying war supplies to the Chinese from India, taking the place of the Burma road, which has been cut by the Japanese and over which war supplies destined to the Chungking government have been passing for upwards of four years since Japan blockaded the sea coast of China.

The planes make two round trips daily between India and China and it is understood that the supplies now transported by this means exceed the amount previously shipped over the Burma road. The trip is also made with a great deal more precision and certainty since travel over the Burma road was difficult and frequently hazardous due to Japanese bombings.

The distance can be covered in from four to five hours so that the same planes can make two trips each daily.

CHAPTER XXV

Fort Riley, Kans., May 27.—Don't expect the average American soldier to believe the M. P. is trained to be his best friend.

In the soldier's eye the M. P. is just another cop, of which there are too many in his life anyway. If you take the word of Private Doaks for it, the M. P. is the most superfluous appendage of the Army.

Private Doaks knows nothing, of course, of the duties the M. P. undertakes beyond walking through certain attractive sections of town wearing a blue brassard and swinging a club. Nor can he know anything of the rigorous and all-embracing course of training through which the Army now puts its military police to fit them for a ticklish and exacting job.

ANDREWS

Much of the odium which attaches to the military policeman is hangover from the first World War when M. P.'s too often were selected for size rather than brains and turned loose, with no training, to interfere with a man's enjoyment of his leave. Things will be different this time.

On this Cavalry post the provost marshal general of the Army has established the first Military Police Replacement Training Center and Officer Candidate School in the Army's history. Its purpose is to train men for the diversified tasks the modern M. P. must be prepared to perform.

Today he is not just a cop detailed to interfere with a soldier's fun. Insofar as he does patrol cities swarming with soldiers, his first consideration is to keep them out of trouble, to prevent them

1000 Swamp WAAC Quarters Seeking Officers' Training

Armed with high hopes and pink application forms, approximately 1000 women emerged from their invasion of the Army recruiting office at Eleventh Street and New York Avenue yesterday intent on seeking officers' training in the new Women's Army Auxiliary Corps.

Although there are only 60 vacancies for the Washington area, the tremendous rush for forms on the opening day nearly swamped Capt. Frank S. Sloan and his small staff of assistants. Enlistments for the officers' training close June 4.

So many applied in the early morning hours that Captain Sloan found himself without a single pink blank for prospective candidates at the height of the noon onslaught. Many were disappointed by the 45-minute wait that resulted, and the station was kept open for more than an hour after its customary 5 p. m. closing time so that all could be accommodated.

Mrs. Edith Nourse Rogers, Massachusetts Representative who presented the bill in Congress, was on hand to watch the long line and to chat with would-be candidates, many of whom had corresponded with her by telephone and mail since the WAAC was first discussed.

"This enthusiasm and genuine patriotism is most heartening for me," Mrs. Rogers said. "I believe that only a few people suspected just what sort of feeling would exist about the WAAC, so that I'm more than gratified at this big turn-out.

Gen. Somervell in England

Early Invasion of Reich Seen In Parley of U. S., British Chiefs

By the Associated Press

London, May 27.—Two of the chiefs of the United States Army's three commands conferred with their British counterparts tonight and informed observers believed that plans for an invasion of the continent as well as a vast air assault on Germany were being advanced.

The arrival today of Lieut. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commanding general of the United States Army service of supply, virtually completed a war council which these observers declared is the "prelude to a vast increase of American ground forces to give the Allies immediate, overwhelming local superiority in men and equipment for an invasion of the continent."

It was understood that the conferences may also be concerned with such world-wide coordinating efforts as a joint smash at the Japanese from India and blocking of an Axis offensive in Africa.

Somervell's arrival followed the appearance yesterday of Lieut. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, chief of the United States Army air forces. This left only Lieut. Gen. Lesley J. McNair, commander of the ground forces, out of the circle, but the presence of Maj. Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, head of the operations divisions, seemed to assure that land as well as air plans were afoot.

Also present was Maj. Gen. Mark W. Clark, chief of staff of the Army ground forces; Rear Admiral John H. Towers, chief of naval aeronautics, and Brig. Gens. Leroy Lutes,

War Sidelights

R.A.F. Eagles Shoot Down 2 Nazi Planes

An Airport in England, May 27 (INS).—Members of the American Eagle Squadron of the R. A. F. shot down at least two and perhaps four German Focke-Wulf 109 fighter planes, damaged two more and presumably destroyed two minesweepers in a spirited air battle today.

There were no American losses as the Eagles lured the Nazis into a trap, then proceeded to polish them off.

The action occurred off the Dutch coast, and was considered one of the most successful days of the war for the Eagle fliers.

Pilot Officer William Daley of Amarillo, Tex., scored his third kill of the war, and also participated in the attack on a 1000-ton minesweeper, which was blown up. Sergt. Pilot Fred Vance of Norfolk, Va., who took part in the minesweeper attack, also downed a Focke-Wulf.

Barry Mahon of Santa Barbara, Calif.; GeneFetrow of Los Angeles and Sergt. Pilot Bill Kelly of Saratoga, N. Y., dove down onto a 2000-ton mnesweeper oblivious to terrific antiaircraft fire from a protecting destroyer. Presumably, the fliers reported, this minesweeper was destroyed by the ferocity of the attack.

Both Mahon and Fetrow also claimed klls, while Vance, who at one tme was set upon by five German planes, reported damaging two enemy craft.

Another Nazi 'Resigns'

London, May 27 (INS).—Adolf Hitler has removed another high-ranking German government official, State Secretary for Railways Kleinmann, the Swiss radio reported tonight.

Kleinmann, whose main job was to direct movement of troops and military supplies, was declared to have "resigned" for "reasons of health"—a familiar Nazi formula for getting rid of officials falling out of Hitler's favor.

To succeed Kleinmann the Nazi fuehrer appointed Dr. Gansburger, up to now chief of the German railway administration in eastern Europe, including the occupied areas of Russia.

Kleinmann's ouster followed by a few days the removal from office of German Agriculture Minister R. Walther Darre.

Battles Way Back To Australia From New Guinea Wilds

By Tom Yarbrough
Associated Press Staff Writer

An Allied Operational Base, Australia, May 27.—Tattered and shaggy but grinning broadly, an American bomber crew has returned to this base after being forced down in the swampy wilds of New Guinea and lost from headquarters for a record span of 45 days.

It was a day of glad homecoming all around, for at the same time came an American fighter pilot who had been out 26 days.

Several bomber crews have made their way back to base after being lost many days among the native tribes, but this outfit, headed by Pilot Louis W. Ford, 22, of Los Angeles, set the record of nearly seven weeks in the bush.

The entire crew suffered from malaria and tropical ulcers, but they found friends along the way and generally were in good shape when they pulled in.

The other members of the crew are Lieut. John H. Disbro, 21, Defiance, Ohio, Lieut. Edward S. Ashley, San Antonio, Tex., and Private J. E. Ochs, Lancaster, Pa., J. A. Roberts, Kingston, Pa., Robert Long, Centerburg, Ohio, and W. F. Loranger, Saginaw, Mich.

Life o' Reilly Now

Today these men were reveling in the pleasures of cleanly cooked food, American cigarettes and conversation with people they can understand.

The hero of the second homecoming is Fighter Pilot Arthur E. Andres, 23, of Newton, Mass. Out on his first combat mission over Lae and Salamaua, New Guinea ports, he was nipped by Japanese Zero fighters but he kept scrapping so long that he ran out of gasoline some distance from Lae—and a greater distance from his home base.

He crash-landed on a beach 30-feet wide, pitted his stamina and ingenuity against hardships galore for nearly a month and arrived here to find this compensation: Fifteen letters and two pictures from his wife, Barabara, and promotion to the rank of first lieutenant.

When I met him at his camp he said:

"This may be where all the bombs are falling, but it's like heaven to me. I'm just waiting to get up in the air. I want to learn to fly again. They tell me I'm going up tomorrow."

Like a Movie

The experiences of Pilot Ford's bomber crew were like something out of a movie. Here is his story:

"We got what we went after at Rabaul but antiaircraft fire crippled us and we cleared out on only one engine. We lost gasoline and our hydraulic system was knocked out, but by coaxing the plane and urging her along—sometimes less than 100 feet above water—we got her over land which we figured wasn't occupied by the Japanese.

"We came down a few miles inland on a marsh. The only clear spot we could find had a tree in the middle. The field was covered with cane grass, which is pretty good for skidding.

"We hit going more than 100 miles an hour, skidded about 100 yards and wrapped a wing around the tree.

"Before we started down I said 'here we go, boys, and good luck. All set.' And down we came. Nobody was hurt."

They got out and started sloshing around in the swamp water, but they gave up trying to make the coast until the next day.

An allied plane tried to drop food to them, but it missed so widely they couldn't get it, and they had only the limited rations carried from their own plane.

Found Native Canoe

Ford, Disbro and Long struck out the next morning, leaving orders for the other four to come on alone if they didn't return in three days. They waded waist-deep through swamp water and pushed through 12-foot cane grass to a river, soon found a native outrigger canoe and made a coastal village by dark that night.

Disbro picked up the story here:

"At first the natives scared us and we scared them. Each of us had a pistol and a knife, but we didn't need them.

"The natives were very friendly, and they stood around laughing. They gave us pawpaws and cocoanuts, and they did their best to take care of us for eight days.

"They had spears and war clubs, but they never tried to use them on us.

"A party of natives went with Ford back to the plane and after getting some instruments he blew it up and brought the rest of the crew to join us.

"On the eighth day a Church of England missionary and an Australian government man came by and picked us up. On the way to the next village a Japanese bomber spotted us and dropped 15 bombs but failed to hit us."

The crew spent three weeks in that village waiting for help to take them another step along the road back, existing on a diet mostly of fruits and rice.

For diverson they wore out a deck of playing cards supplied by the missionary, and then went out and shot two 15-foot pythons, one of which had a whole cat in its stomach.

There were only four mosquito bars, so they took turns using them. The others used tents made from parachutes which kept the mosquitos out but didn't let in enough air.

A boat came along and they had to spend two weeks in a second village before coming here.

The crew agreed on one thing: What they hated most in all that time was not being able to brush their teeth.

Long had many an anxious moment around April 20, in addition to his other woes, because the stork was due in his home about then and he doesn't know yet whether it was a boy or a girl.

Free French Seek Fuller Recognition

Copyright, 1942, New York Tribune, Inc.

London, May 27.—The Free French are tired of being called upon merely for cannon fodder and victims for firing squads, and fuller recognition of the role of "Fighting France by the United Nations is necessary for the utmost mobilization of Frenchmen all over the world against Adolf Hitler, Gen. Charles DeGaulle declared in an extraordinarily blunt press interview this afternoon.

The general did not mention the State Department of the United States, but his forthright observations on the treatment accorded the fighting French were aimed clearly at Washington. Recently, according to reliable reports in diplomatic circles here, Undersecretary of States Sumner Welles had gone so far even as to attempt to organize a new "Free French committee" in Washington, offering DeGaulle, who from the fall of France has led French resistance, a position on the proposed committee subordinate to Johnny-come-latelies of doubtful antecedents.

The time has arrived, said DeGaulle, for France to be represented in the council of her allies. The case of Martinique, he said, raised the question of representation of the general interests of France among the democracies. In the past such cases have been solved either unilaterally by a foreign power allied with Free France, or by an allied power dealing with Pierre Laval, which is to say, Hitler. This situation, he said, was not to the best interests of France.

The one question that interests "La France Combattante," is to bring all Frenchmen into the war on the side of the Allies. He said his national committee therefore would naturally welcome any Frenchman, and best of all, any leader of Frenchmen to its cause. This would apply, he said, to Admiral Robert, the Vichy French authority in Martinique, with whom the United States has been carrying on negotiations.

Recent dispatches from America, he said, indicate that the United States regards the fighting French exclusively as a military organization, and the view apparently is taken in America that since the fighting French are not interested in politics, they are not qualified to represent the general interests of France.

The general pointed out that fighting France was administering important territories and acting as trustee of the French protectorate of the Levant and therefore must necessarily be more than a mere military organization.

Now I'm anxious to see if the same thing is going on in other parts of the country."

Later investigation showed that it was going on elsewhere. Centrally located recruiting stations all over the Nation reported a similar rush.

Meanwhile two hard-working sergeants in the Washington office were kept busy with a steady stream of questions.

PRECEDENT SHATTERED—Laughing Eyes wants to be a warrior. The 29-year-old Creek Indian woman, a graduate of Haskel Institute, appeared in full tribal regalia yesterday in New York City as she applied for enlistment in the WAACs

"Does this bind me to anything?" most of the candidates inquired before they would sign a roster. Assured that the list was for reference purposes only, they usually signed without a murmur.

"Do you want to see my birth certificate?" several asked shyly as they were handed their blanks. To that, too, the answer was no. Proof of date and time of birth is all that is required when applications are sent in.

"Should we enlist through the Washington corps area or through our home town stations?" many girls wanted to know. They were told that all local applications should be sent to the Army recruiting station at Baltimore, with June 4 as the deadline.

"Captain, I'm so anxious to join the WAACs that I'll even wear those cotton stockings!" one pretty Government girl confided.

Mrs. Rogers, who shook hands with all of those who recognized her, observed that "the difficulty will be in the process of eliminating them, instead of in finding good prospects. With these long lists we should get women of extremely good qualifications."

By a strange coincidence, the enlistment of men into the regular Army reached a peak yesterday that remained officers of the post-Pearl Harbor period.

"We have no reason to suppose that the influx of ladies could have anything to do with it, but isn't it odd?" one officer mused.

An unofficial and incomplete poll of recruiting offices throughout the country on the number of applicants—actual count in some places and estimated count in others where definite figures were unavailable—yielded a total of 13,208.

southeast of coastal Ain el Gazala and southwest of coastal Tobruk.) Early this morning the enemy was being engaged by our armored forces. No details of the fighting are yet available."

From other sources, however, it was learned that a fierce battle was raging along a line running south from Ain El Gazala.

The Nazis struck first at British positions near the Bir Hacheim water hole about 50 miles below the coast, their tanks being met by heavy fire from British armored vehicles and antitank guns.

Rommel's forces were so disposed that he might thrust either northward or southward, in the kind of running warfare illustrated by last winter's campaign.

German air strength, which did not appear to have been greatly reinforced of late, seemed to be about 100 per cent concentrated on the British forward and rear positions.

The Royal Air Force sprang quickly into the skies to sweep the battle lines, pound the German airdromes at Tmimi and Martuba and attack the German supply lines moving up to the front. In the first phases of this action at least three German Junker planes were shot down.

Rommel's ultimate intentions caused intense speculation in London, where a military commentator declared that the Nazis had undoubtedly loosed "an offensive of some sort," but added it was too early to tell much more about it.

There was some conjecture in London that Rommel actually was aiming at Egypt, at Iraq beyond and thus at the backdoor of the Russian Caucasus, although the difficulties and hazards of such a campaign at this season would be enormous.

There also was a possibility that all he was now doing was intended to serve as a screen for an attack on British-held Syria via the island of Cyprus.

Some in London believed that Rommel was advancing with three armored divisions, two German and one Italian, but they pointed out, too, that the British tank brigades now had been rested and reequipped with American tanks since the battles of last autumn.

The British position was seen as generally better than that of last fall, considering the fresh troops and material poured into great bases built by Britain and the United States since the last campaign.

Mikado Hears Jap Premier's Boasts

Diet Is Told Nipponese Will Fight Until U. S. Influence Is Crushed

(Dispatches from enemy countries are published with the warning that they frequently contain misleading information intended for propaganda purposes.)

By the Associated Press

Tokyo (from Japanese broadcasts), May 27.—Japan's Parliament, in a special session formally opened by Emperor Hirohito, was told by Premier General Hideki Tojo today that Japan would stay in the fight "until the influence of Britain and America and their dreams of world domination" were wiped out.

"Japan will do her utmost to contribute her share as the partner of Germany and Italy," he declared.

Emperor Hirohito, in one of his rare appearances, was in the Parliament building for 15 minutes for the reading of an imperial rescript expressing profound satisfaction at the success of Japanese expeditionary forces.

General Tojo, in his capacity as Premier and War Minister, and Shigenori Togo, as Foreign Minister, outlined Japan's position on the fighting and diplomatic fronts, with particular reference to Soviet Russia, India and Australia.

Of Russia, Foreign Minister Togo said:

"Relations between Japan and the Soviet Union have undergone no change even after the outbreak of war in greater East Asia."

He added that Russia recently reiterated its intention to continue to observe the Japanese-Soviet neutrality pact.

"With the progress of the war," the Foreign Minister said, "enemy countries will, I presume, intensify their efforts to alienate Japan and the Soviet Union, but there is no chance for such intrigues to bear fruit so long as the Soviet Union firmly maintains the attitude mentioned."

"Since all outpost bases of the British empire for defense of India are in the possession of Japan, the golden opportunity is offered to the Indian people to rise and obtain their liberty . . .

India "Spiritually Independent"

"The unsuccessful negotiations by Sir Stafford Cripps proved that spiritually India already is independent from Great Britain, but as long as British and American troops remain in India Japan is inflexibly determined to annihilate them."

He expressed hope that the Indians would eject the foreign troops.

Otherwise Japanese troops would have to move against the British and Americans there, he said.

"To our regret it is unavoidable that in the course of such a campaign the innocent Indian people also would be made acquainted with the horrors of war."

Premier Tojo described Australia as the "orphan in the Pacific" and said she was "now helplessly expecting Japan's attack after the battle in the Coral Sea wiped away naval units put up for the defense of Australia . . ."

Australia, he declared, must reconsider her attitude toward Japan or suffer the consequences.

The premier told the Diet "there is no cause for apprehension regarding the future supply of food for the people no matter how long the war is going to last."

He reported that although retreating defense forces on the islands of the Netherlands Indies and in Burma had destroyed large sections of oil fields, the work of repair and reconstruction was under way.

As war minister, Tojo reported that the Japanese army has taken control of an area two and a half times the size of the Japanese Empire.

He said Japanese military forces had captured 290,000 troops and shot down or destroyed about 1800 enemy aircraft.

He placed Japan's losses up to April 30 at 9000 officers and men killed and 20,000 wounded.

Home Defenses Stronger

He concluded his report with an announcement that antiaircraft defenses in the Japanese homeland had been strengthened.

The opening session of the Diet, the second since Pearl Harbor, coincided with the annual Navy Day, the anniversary of the 1905 Battle of Tsushima, in which the Japanese under Admiral Togo destroyed the Russian fleet.

Dispatches from the Philippines said Japanese warships observed the day with a naval show in Manila Bay.

Admiral Shigetaro Shimada, navy minister, told the Diet that "naval operations up to the middle of March placed practically all key enemy points in the southwestern Pacific in the hands of Japan."

He said that since the middle of March Japan has achieved spectacular naval victories in the Indian Ocean and Coral Sea.

Army to Train Larger Group Of Glider Pilots

Expansion of the glider pilot training program of the Army Air Forces, with large numbers of students to be instructed at 27 schools beginning June 1 was announced yesterday by the War Department.

The number of students was not disclosed, but training in light motor driven planes will be given at 18 civil aeronautics schools located in the Middle West, and elementary and advance training in gliders at nine Army schools.

The glider pilots will be authorized to wear the Army Air Force wings with glider insignia imposed. Army officers and enlisted men, between the ages of 18-36, will be eligible.

After four weeks of instruction in light planes with emphasis on "dead stick" landings the students will get a week of elementary training in small, two place gliders followed by a week of training in large cargo type gliders.

Applicants will be accepted if they are graduates of the CAA civil pilot training schools, holders of CAA private pilots certificates which had not lapsed prior to January 1, 1941, former aviation cadets with 50 or more hours of training, or those who have participated in at least 200 glider flights.

Father of Six Gets Army Duty Near Home

Pendleton, Oreg., May 27 (AP).—Louis Tartaglione, 27-year-old selectee, has been transferred by Adj. Gen. James H. Ulio from Pendleton Field to a unit near his home in Brooklyn, Col. Frank W. Wright, base commander, reported today.

Application for Tartaglione's discharge from the Army because of dependents is being made, Colonel Wright said. His case drew wide attention earlier in the week because of Mrs. Tartaglione's appeal to President Roosevelt, in which she asserted her husband was the father of six dependent children.

D. C. Man Goes To Sea Again After Sinking

Barry O'Conner, Washington artist of 1426 M Street Northwest, left here last night to sail on a new ship after two days at home following the torpedoing of a cargo vessel he was aboard in the Gulf of Mexico.

O'CONNER

Formerly a football star at Mount St. Joseph's School in Maryland, O'Conner, referring to the sinking, said it seemed to him "that the whole Gulf sprang up into our faces" when the submarine, without warning, fired its "fish."

His first thought was to sound an alarm bell. Everything that occurred then was crammed into three minutes, the time it took for his ship to sink. One man, in the engine room, had been injured and the explosion caused a mast to fall on a life boat occupied by 19 men, upsetting the boat. The 19 perished. Then, rowing from the suction, O'Conner and the others in his boat saw the submarine coming to the surface. It drove at them, fast, and everyone, O'Conner remembered, thought it meant to ram them. But it veered off.

Sub Stays on Surface

Germans had come out on the submarine's deck and it developed that four or five of them spoke English well. They asked what ship they had sunk and what cargo it carried. One of them called "I'm sorry, boys, but this is war."

O'Conner's boat picked up two crewmen off an overturned boat; took one from a raft and four out of the water. The submarine's crew took the second mate and a seaman aboard, dressed a wound on the mate's head and put them back on the raft.

The submarine was on the surface about 45 minutes and retired, on the surface, O'Conner said. Then, having taken everybody they could see out of the water, O'Conner and the others rigged a sail and set out. They rationed the boat's provisions of water and food and 30 hours later were picked up. The rescuer, which they vaguely spotted on the horizon, later said it didn't see the flares they fired but spotted them by the small sail.

There were 22 men in O'Conner's boat. They were landed at New Orleans. "I just want to say that everyone is willing to go back to sea," O'Conner said. "Nobody got excited. When we took the seamen off the raft one of them said: "I'm very glad to see you again, O'Conner, I remembered then that I owed him $4."

O'Conner worked in the studio of George Lohr in Washington, and is the son of Charles S. O'Conner, who was formerly with the Washington Star as a staff artist.

Weygand Reported Opposing Cessions

By the Associated Press

Bern, Switzerland, May 27.—Italy's new demands for territory from France have produced an upsurge of anticollaborationist sentiment in that country in which the veteran military leader, Gen. Maxime Weygand is taking an active part, it was reported authoritatively tonight.

General Weygand, it was reported, has plunged into discussions in an effort to prevent the handing over of Tunisia or other French territory to Italy, thereby disclosing that important anticollaborationist feeling still exists in Vichy.

The temper of at least some sections of the French public is sharp, a fact brought out clearly today at Beziers, in Unoccupied France, where Allied sympathizers broke up a parade of French Fascists in a street battle involving about 1500 persons.

With these developments, the Vichy government was reported postponing its decision on the Italian demands, hesitating to accede to the Axis under the circumstances.

One Jap Plane Blasted, 6 More Are Damaged

By International News Service

United Nations Headquarters, Australia (Thursday), May 28. One Japanese plane was destroyed and six more damaged when 15 enemy aircraft attempted to raid the airdrome at Port Moresby, New Guinea, General MacArthur's headquarters announced today.

One United Nations plane was missing after the battle yesterday, the communique added.

The enemy attacked again in the night, it was reported, but without effect.

Trial Procedure Outlined

Canberra, Australia, May 27 (AP). Prime Minister John Curtin announced today that a special new regulation provided that United States Naval or military courts should have jurisdiction over members of American forces in Australia accused of violating commonwealth law if their commanding officers so desired.

This regulation, under which the cases would cease to be subject to jurisdiction of the criminal courts in Australia upon transfer to the military or Naval courts, was disclosed in the House of Representatives.

It was issued following the detention of an American soldier on charges of murder in the apparently associated deaths of three women in Melbourne.

For trial purposes, the American service courts are given the same power of summoning civilian witnesses as are military courts of the commonwealth.

Enemy Scouts Reported Moving Toward India Port

Calcutta, India, May 27 (AP).—Lieut. Gen. Sir Noel Beresford-Peirse, commander of British forces defending the Ganges Delta, announced today that enemy scouting parties were reported moving from the west Burma port of Akyab toward Chittagong, on the Indian side of the border.

The general said small groups of native Burmese levies, officered by Japanese, were attempting to test the defenses of India's northeastern coastal area. He added that Chittagong, 220 miles east of Calcutta and the most easterly important Indian harbor on the Bay of Bengal, was now garrisoned by first-line troops.

British Bombs Kill Seven in Raid On Sicilian City

Rome (from Italian broadcasts), May 27 (AP).—Two waves of British bombers dropped high explosives and incendiaries last night upon Messina, Sicily, damaging the cathedral, Royal University and various dwellings, the high command reported today.

Seven persons were killed and 26 injured, the communique said. Seven sailors were officially listed among the injured.

"Clearing of debris is in progress," the high command said. "One aircraft was hit by antiaircraft fire and fell into the sea. The behavior of the population was calm and disciplined."

attacked one village and the Izyum-Barvenkova area for five hours, losing 18 tanks and 200 other motor vehicles and failing to take the objective.

A similar attack at another point cost the Germans 12 tanks.

Tass, official Soviet news agency, said big tank battles were in progress at many points, one having lasted two days.

On the Arctic front, nearly 2000 miles north of the warm Ukraine, the Russians reported their coastal artillery smashed up 11 underground shelters and many other winter quarters where the Nazis were assembling fresh troops.

Red Fleet, Russian navy paper which gave this report, said also that six German planes were destroyed and six damaged in an attempt to raid Murmansk, vital Arctic port of entry for supplies from the United States and Britain.

A Red navy spokesman said the recent destruction of two German destroyers and five large transports in the Arctic brought to more than 500,000 the tonnage of Nazi ships sunk in those waters since the war began.

In the comparatively quiet central areas, deadly local conflicts continued. Red Star said the Russians improved their positions in the Kalinin (northwest) sector after wiping out 200 of 500 attacking Nazis.

A government announcement said 300 of a German elite division were killed in two days of fighting for an important height on the northwest front.

On the western sector, Red Star said two columns of troops on a highway were dispersed by artillery.

In German-occupied areas of Smolensk and Orel Provinces, Red Star said guerilla warfare was assuming the proportions of "a people's rebellion against the Fascist ensalvers" and predicted that the hour was near when "guerilla regiments will be converted into guerilla divisions and armies."

It said these guerillas were gathering equipment that the Germans dropped in the snow when they were forced to retreat last winter.

Reds Encircled South Of Kharkov, Nazis Say

Berlin (From German Broadcasts) May 27 (AP).—The German high command reported rapid progress today toward annihilation of Soviet armies it said were encircled south of Kharkov.

"After fresh and fruitless attempts to break out," the communique said, "the power of resistance of the enemy, who so far has fought stubbornly, was broken."

Two large merchant ships at Murmansk were set afire in new German air raids on that far northern Russian port, the high command said.

It reported also that bombers, continuing an attack on a heavily guarded convoy between Iceland and North Cape, sank a second 8000-ton merchant [illegible] and set three other ships afire.

crime will be executed."

Some broadcasts said the entire family of any such persons also would be put to death.

A Czech government source here expressed grave fears that "the shooting of Heydrich will result in mass executions of innocent people on a scale unprecedented—even in this war."

Czech circles here expressed the belief that the shooting either was in protest to Heydrich's order conscription Czech youths for war service on the Russian front or against his announcement last night that there would be a reorganization of the administrative set-up in Bohemia and Moravia. This was interpreted as an indication that Adolf Hitler had decided to incorporate the protectorate within the Reich proper.

Within two weeks after Heydrich came to Bohemia and Moravia last September as protector, charged with putting down unrest, 250 Czechs had died before German firing squads.

For the blood bath he gave in surgent elements there Heydrich won, at 38, the special rank of general in the security police.

His authority apparently was broadened later. Less than two weeks ago he was sent to France, where he set up a stronger Gestapo organization and conferred with German occupation authorities and Paris police chiefs.

He went from there to the Netherlands, where his brief visit was reported to signal hard new repressive measures.

400 Poles Reported Slain By Nazis in Reprisal

London, May 27 (INS).—A Reuters dispatch from Stockholm today reported that 400 Poles, dwelling in what was formerly the Polish-owned part of Lithuania, had been shot by Nazi executioners in reprisal for the killing of two German soldiers.

An official Rome communique, broadcast by the Italian radio, admitted an outbreak of armed rebellion in the Fascist puppet state of Croatia. Bloody fighting was stated to have flared up Tuesday near the Croatian border town of Zara between "a group of rebels" and Italian carabinieri (military police). The prefect (district police governor) of Zara and "several Italian soldiers" were killed when the rebels "attacked with intense rifle and machine gun fire and hand grenades," the Rome radio admitted.

In Greece an Axis troop transport was reported dynamited, with 40 Axis soldiers killed and 100 wounded.

In Bulgaria the execution of 68 Bulgarian soldiers for pro-Russian "propaganda" was reported.

In Norway the Germans were reported to have completed plans for the wholesale evacuation of the entire population of the Norwegian coastal areas due to a Nazi fear of invasion.

Early Invasion Of Reich Is Seen

Charles P. Gross and William C. Lee, who accompanied Somervell.

This congregation of detail men followed closely upon the recent visit of Chief of Staff Gen. George C. Marshall.

One source, emphasizing indications that American and British efforts were not being concentrated on air operations alone, said:

"Because the technical transport problems are more simple, the American air effort will start first, but when the time comes we are going to be ready to hit on land just as hard or harder than we do in the air."

The determination of the United Nations to marshal in Britain armies large enough to outnumber the Nazis, observers said, was evidenced by the recent arrival of the largest American convoy of the war, and by the more recent arrival of a second but smaller contingent of Canadian troops.

Arnold went to American headquarters today for what was reported to be a discussion of the technical problems of placing American bombers and fighters in operation.

He was understood to be working out with the R. A. F. the type of American planes best suited and most needed for operations on this front. By way of example, it was pointed out that the American air force is well supplied with dive bombers, in which the British are lacking but which are vital in clearing the path of ground troops for invasion and for attacks on enemy shipping.

Sub Surrender Reported

The pilot, Lieut. Elwood Chase of Andover, Mass., dropped his depth bombs and called other Army and Navy bombers, the I. N. S. declared. Thunderous explosions from their pattern of depth charges attracted huge crowds to watch the first naval action at Martinique in more than a century, it was said.

The search continued until Ensign Binning's bombs sank the sub, it was declared.

Unconfirmed reports from various Brazil ports, meanwhile said that an Italian submarine had surrendered to Brazilian authorities. The craft, described as the "Pamplona," presumably had been damaged.

Some of the dispatches said the craft had surrendered at Fortaleza, and others that it was at Natal. The reports were not confirmed by authorities at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil's capital.

The reports of additional sinkings of Allied and neutral merchant ships ranged from North Atlantic waters to the Caribbean.

Swedish Vessel Torpedoed

The American Swedish news agency in New York quoted an announcement of the Swedish foreign office that the Swedish steamer Tolken, a ship of 4470 gross tons, had been torpedoed and sunk. Its crew of 34 was rescued and taken to a Canadian port.

Two more ships—a medium-sized British ship and a small Greek vessel—were torpedoed and sunk in a Canada-bound convoy, the Navy Department announced. Survivors were landed at an American East Coast port, it was said, and all aboard the British vessel—72 crewmen and 10 passengers—were saved.

The Navy announced at the same time that an unarmed New England fishing trawler had been sunk by shellfire from an enemy U-boat. One of the vessel's crew of 21 was killed when some 70 shots were fired, many at very close range.

Less than half of the shots struck the trawler, however, and the survivors, when interviewed at Boston, were contemptuous of the submarine's marksmanship.

U. S. Ship Sunk in Gulf

Late yesterday, the Navy announced that a medium sized United States merchant vessel had been torpedoed in the Gulf of Mexico and that survivors were landed at a Gulf Coast port.

The sixth ship on yesterday's announced list of sinkings was the 1417-ton freighter Flora, of the Royal Dutch Netherlands Line, opating between New York and Curacao. Aneta, the Netherlands news agency, announced late yesterday that the vessel had been sunk in the Caribbean.

It was the fourth ship of this Dutch line to be sunk in recent weeks, a situation that has affected the Dutch West Indies food supply. The situation is not "dangerous," Aneta said, but "meatless days" have had to be introduced.

Meanwhile, there were these other developments in the submarine war war situation:

The Senate passed and sent to the House legislation increasing the authorized size of the Navy's blimp force from 48 to 72 craft, to combat the U-boat menace. A number of the non-rigid lighter-than-air craft are now in service and have proved very effective for submarine patrol.

Heavy deliveries under the old 48-ship program are expected this summer.

Senator Walsh, chairman of the Senate Naval Affairs Committee, said after a closed session of the group at which reports were received from the Navy on the U-boat situation, that operations now being put into effect will "increasingly check" the menace.

Rear Admiral Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier, said in New York that enemy subs are in for even more trouble than they are now getting from the Navy. He told the Associated Press that a large fleet of private craft able to mount guns and carry depth charges has been recruited, and that while he couldn't announce subs sunk, "some very good shots have been made."

Notice in Post Helps 2 Soldiers Keep Ratings

A short notice in The Post on May 13 placed two soldiers back in good standing at th eA. P. Hill Military Reservation at Fredericksburg, Va.

On May 12 a letter from Sergt. Robert Lowell had requested aid in finding an unidentified woman who directed three soldiers on a Washington trolley car. Finding her, Lowell said, would keep two of them from being disrated.

After The Post used a story to this effect, it learned from Lowell that "although we did not locate the person we were seeking, we have cleared up our trouble and are in good standing in our company. We wish to thank you for the help you have given us."

WPB Bars Freezing Of Store Inventories

Method Sought for Disposition Of Retail Stocks Gradually

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

The War Production Board has vetoed proposals to "freeze" retail inventories or to force drastic dumping of excess retail stocks, it was learned yesterday from authorized sources.

Instead, the WPB is seeking a procedure by which retail outlets will be encouraged to dispose of excess stocks in a gradual manner. It will issue an order subsequently to hold stores to low working supplies of salable goods.

Under no circumstances, it was indicated, will over-stocked stores be forced immediately to dump their inventories, or denied the opportunity to make purchases in lines in which they are short, even though they may be overbought in other lines.

Industry Assured

It was fear of this contingency, created by an inital draft of an inventory control order, which provoked widespread protest recently from the retail trade. WPB Chief Donald M. Nelson assured the industry on Tuesday that any order was still several weeks away, and would assure "orderly" liquidation of inventories, rather than forced dumping.

From high WPB sources, however, it was learned that no method has been developed yet which will prevent over-buying but at the same time will not paralyze the retail industry by freezing stocks or purchases.

Nelson is known to be sympathetic to the major objective of the proposed order—prevention of large retail firms with 'long purses" buying up all available supplies, with the result that the smaller merchant would be unable to restock his inventories in the future.

Inventories Now High

Figures in WPB hands indicate that a trend in this direction has reached alarming proportions. Retail inventories are high and are increasing. They stand at about seven billion dollars now, or more than one billion dollars in excess of retail stocks a year ago. Retail sales, which are now high, are expected to decrease swiftly as various WPB limitation orders take effect. This decline will serve further to broaden the disparity in inventories.

Charts also show that inventories are far out of line with sales and that the biggest stores of the country have increased inventories over last year in far greater proportion than the smaller stores.

Thus WPB economists believe that the big stores, which are the more powerful buyers, are well on the way to absorbing too large a percentage of the goods available. If this trend continues they are convinced that thousands of small reail stores will be forced out of business.

Census Data Cited

Recent Census Bureau data show that from December, 1940, to December, 1941, the largest stores increased inventories by 28 per cent, while the stores with the lowest volume of business raised their stocks by only 7 per cent, which may even be a decline in view of increases in dollar prices.

WPB experts also fear that if hoarding starts among some retail dealers, it must necessarily spread to all, since none can stand aside and watch competitors consume all available supplies.

To reverse the trend, the WPB will probably insist that within a specified length of time, three to six months, perhaps, all stores reduce their inventories to some reasonable figure, by letting their normal sales pull down stocks. After this date is reached, stores with excess inventories may be forbidden further purchases in the lines in which they are overstocked, but probably there will not be restrictions in other lines where inventories are normal or low.

Bonuses Aided U. S., Executive Says

By the Associated Press

James F. Lincoln, president of a company handling millions of dollars of war contracts, testified yesterday that his system of incentive bonuses for employes, ranging as high as $50,000 a year, had saved the Government 35 million dollars through increased worker efficiency and reduced costs.

He flatly denied that he had installed the system in an attempt to evade excess profits taxes, and told the House Naval Committee that he had conceived the idea of stimulating cooperation after hearing President Roosevelt's "great speech on the abundant life" in 1933.

His statement came after Edmund Toland, committee counsel, contended that the Lincoln Electric Co. of Cleveland, Ohio, which Lincoln heads, would have paid $4,438,910 more in taxes for the period 1939-41, inclusive, were it not for bonuses totaling two million dollars in 1941 and establishment of a one million dollar trust fund. The company turns out electrodes and welding equipment.

Shows Copies of Checks

Earlier in the day, Toland introduced photostatic copies of checks showing bonus payments running from $3000 to $5000 for $30 and $45 a week employes and from $10,000 to $50,000 for officials and higher-salaried executives.

Lincoln, head of the company and president of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, said that he had started the bonus system in 1934 with "my tongue in my cheek," but discovered it worked so well in sparking the "genius" of his employes and cutting costs that the company was able to outsell its competitors.

He reported that the wages of his employes were kept low purposely so that the company could "skate through a tough period without going broke," but said the extra compensation through bonuses made his employes better paid than those of other companies doing similar work.

Chairman Vinson (Democrat), Georgia, commended Lincoln for cutting costs and increasing efficiency through the bonus system, but expressed belief that some of the payments were "out of line" and that a "ceiling" should be raised over bonuses "because they have the effect of evading the corporate taxes."

Figures Challenged

Lincoln challenged figures introduced by Toland, purporting to show wide differences between the factory cost and the selling price of company products, and said that they failed to include the bonuses, administration, overhead, and overtime expenses, and that the actual profit was close to 10 per cent.

Lincoln offered as "justification" for his own compensation of $71,179 in 1939 $74,448 in 1940, $59,689 in 1941 and $72,073 for this year the reasons that he was "smart enough, had the foresight, and had the ability" to get the right men for his employes and weld them together as a loyal, hardworking unit.

Toland told the committee that the company, in the period between 1934 and 1941 inclusive, had paid out $5,143,234 in bonuses, and, during the same period, $2,681,562 to its officials and employes.

He explained the 1 million dollar trust fund established at the end of 1941 by saying that it was for termination salaries for employes who would lose their jobs after the war work.

Guard Rescues Woman in Leap From Bridge

A 30-year-old woman was saved from drowning in the Eastern Branch of the Anacostia River late yesterday by a District defense guard who pulled her from the water after she leaped from the Benning Bridge.

C. G. Thomas, a guard at the bridge near the Benning power plant, saw the woman, identified as Mrs. Eileen Histon, 30, of 3348 Baker Street Northeast, jump from the span, a distance of 30 feet. The guard managed to reach the woman, who landed just a few feet off shore.

Eleventh Precinct police took her to Gallinger Hospital, where examination disclosed she had also swallowed a quantity of caustic cleaning compound. She said this had occurred at her home, about 3 blocks from the bridge.

She stated also she was despondent because of domestic affairs.

Honor Memorial Day Working To Make Arms, Nelson Asks

War Production Chief Donald M. Nelson yesterday urged management and labor in war factories to forego the usual Memorial Day holiday, on grounds that the most appropriate way to honor America's dead is to continue production to defend America.

If any holiday in a war plant has been scheduled, it should be canceled, he said, because "we cannot afford a lag in war production" due to a shutdown.

The text of the statement follows:

"Memorial Day is set aside as a day to honor the memory of American soldiers and sailors who have fallen fighting for their country.

"In ordinary times we celebrate it as a holiday, and the very act of suspending the normal routine and enjoying a holiday is in itself a fitting tribute to the memory of men who died to win peace and happiness for their country.

"But this is a time of grave emergency. We can honor our heroic dead only by showing that we are as determined as they were to defend our country without counting the cost to ourselves. We cannot honor them by taking a holiday.

"The best way to celebrate Memorial Day in 1942, therefore, is to make it a day of full-time production in every factory which is making war goods or essential articles for civilian use.

"If a holiday has been scheduled in any war plant where Memorial Day operation is possible, that holiday should be canceled. This is a responsibility which rests equally on management and on labor.

"We cannot afford a lag in war production due to Memorial Day shutdowns.

"We must honor the dead by doing all we can to sustain the living who are carrying on the fight for freedom all around the world."

New Shortages Face U. S., Says Henderson

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—The Nation is past the first stage of its war production problem, Price Administrator Leon Henderson said today, but he added that it is now facing shortages of power, fuel reserves, transportation facilities and trained labor.

"I believe it will not be possible to ration everything," he told the concluding session of the National Association of Purchasing Agents' international convention. "We are many, many moons away from a complete system or rationing all goods."

Henderson said that while the Nation was on the down grade in the production of consumer goods, its war production was reaching new heights.

"The veins of our transportation system are slowing up," Henderson said. "We're getting to priorities not in steel, copper and rubber but in flat cars and tank cars. The whole production mechanism is geared to go up, specialized for the making of planes, tanks, guns and ammunition, but a paralysis in some sections in transportation may not make it mobile."

Cites Political Angle

The price administrator said "no major industry has fallen because of excessively high wage rates brought about by collective bargaining. I see the necessity for strong peoples, strong organizations, rather than those that are muscle bound and tied."

Henderson observed that "this is a political year; the next few months are bound to be colored with the great intensity with which this country applies itself in selecting its representatvies," and added:

"It is highly likely that we will have some minor crises because this is a political year."

David Ginsburg, general counsel of the Office of Price Administration, told the convention that "as goods grow scarce because of war, consumer rationing will necessarily be extended from tires and automobiles and sugar and gasoline to other fields."

He said that soon 80 per cent or more of the housing accommodations in this country would become subject to rent regulations.

Enforcement Policy

Discussing the OPA enforcement policy, Ginsburg said it was "designed not as a belligerent threat," but as a considered word of reassurance to the great rank and file of buyers and sellers in this country who are, we know, the beneficiaries and supporters of our program."

Ginsburg said there were three essential conditions to effective enforcement. The first job, he added, "is to bring home the fact that these regulations are necessary for the national safety and welfare, that it is a series crime to violate them, and that there is nothing clever or smart in being able to frustrate their purpose without punishment."

In addition, he added, there must be wholehearted cooperation of business and consumer groups and the administration of the enforcement program must be local.

Rep. Hoffman Agrees to Testify Again Today in Agents Probe

on two days last January.

Nearly two months ago The Post discovered that these copies were being distributed and sold by some of those who had been summoned in the grand jury investigation of seditious papers and organizations. Apparently these people had thousands of copies at their disposal.

Charles B. Hudson, Omaha, Nebr., mailed out copies with his anti-British, Jew-baiting bulletin, "America in Danger," and sent them along with a seditious postcard.

David Baxter, chancellor of the "Socis," sent the speech out to members of his secret band, along with a special bulletin warning his followers to accumulate arms. The hidden Soci leaders say a revolution is imminent and that they will seize control when it comes.

Hoffman's secretary, Helen Boyer, was summoned April 2 and four times after that. She is due to go to the grand jury room for the sixth time at 10 a. m. today.

Working on Another Address

Her boss seems in for a busy day. He told The Post yesterday that he was working on another address to the House on a point of "personal privilege," which he might give shortly after noon today. The first time he was summoned, he deferred his testimony until after he had spoken in the House on a point of "privilege." On that occasion he explained, as he has several times since, that the grand jury investigation was a "smear" and that he did not really call the President "a Judas" in his "Roosevelt is a Judas" speech, which has the subtitle, "A Judas."

Winrod, a Hitler admirer of long standing, was one of those who received a bale of the Hoffman speech. Summoned from Wichita, Winrod was before the grand jurors at intervals for several weeks.

Postal authorities Tuesday turned ther attention to a prize contest Winrod has been running in his magazine, The Defender.

The contest involves 50 questions, of which 30 have been published. Contestants were invited to select the "best and most appropriate answer" to each question from about half a dozen published with it.

Each contestant must send "5 cents for each question answered," a total cost of $2.50 to those wishing to be eligible to win th egrand prize of $500—which doubles to $1000 if the lucky winner has sent along $1 worth of new subscriptions.

Some of the questions were matters of history, like: "What President was a tailor?" But these were some of the others:

"Why is Winrod not a pro-Nazi?"

"Why was the press not free before December 7, 1941?"

"What caused the Civil War?"

Since historians, economists and prosecutors differ on all these points, it was suggested that entrants were, in effect, being invited to guess what view would be taken by the judges Winrod selected.

Jurors Excused

With his jurors excused, Justice Goldsborough listened most of yesterday to legal arguments concerning Frederick Vincent Williams and David Warren Ryder, who are on trial for conspiring with the Japanese agent, Ralph Townsend, and five Japanese to evade the Foreign Agent Act in the broadcasting of Japanese propaganda.

Ryder's lawyer, Elisha Hanson, told the justice yesterday that newspaper reports of the trial had been harmful to the defense and asked that the jurors be told not to read the papers. Attorney Samuel F. Beach yesterday renewed his motion that Williams be freed. Justice Goldsborough refused.

Both defense counsel and special prosecutors Albert E. Arent and Arthur B. Caldwell expect to make their closing arguments today.

Pelley's lawyer, Broenstrepp, was located after a wide search and ordered to come before the special grand jury on Axis agents today. Prosecutor Maloney said the man often had used the names of Lieut. Gen. Victor Cherup-Spiridovich and Duke St. Zeba.

His activities under both names have been evident in investigations of the defeatist papers which have been under the scrutiny of the grand jury.

Among those in contact with Broenstrepp were Ellis O. Jones, head of the National Copperheads who is now held on the West Coast for sedition; the closely integrated Chicago group of pro-Nazi agitators; William Kullgren, editor of the Beacon Light, which predicts death for American officials; Court Asher, Muncie, Ind., whose paper, The X-Ray, faces a postal ban for sedition; and Elmer J. Garner, Wichita, Kans., Jew-baiter, whose Publicity has been barred from the mails for sedition.

U. S. Will Freeze War Plant Jobs

through the United States Employment Service.

There is no legal method of forcing a man to stay on his present job, it was explained, but under this system he could only get a new job by going through the Employment Service. The Employment Service could refer the man back to his old job if, after investigation, it was found that he was needed there, thus freezing him in his present occupation.

Enforcement of the new policy, it was explained by Fowler Harper, deputy administrator of the commission could be by any one of four methods, none of which has been definitely decided upon as yet.

First, he said, enforcement could be through clauses contained in new and renegotiated war contracts. Second, moral and public persuasion could be brought to bear. Third, industry-wide agreements could be negotiated, and, as a last resort, the commission could ask Congress for legislative authority.

"There will be no legal compulsion to take a job to which a man is referred by the employment service," Harper declared.

System of Priorities

He pointed out, however, that the employment service would set up a system of priorities for labor supplies, and, when a man came looking for a job, would immediately know where he was most needed and refer him to that plant.

Harper said that the commission will carefully consider the formal statement of policy which will be drawn up by McNutt during the coming week. He pointed out that the final language and conditions of the statement will have to be passed upon by the commission, which only settled on the broad principle today.

In the case of an employe of one company being transferred to another firm because of a more vital need in the second plant, Harper said that the policy statement will contain machinery for adequate protection of all seniority and other rights of the worker.

The commission is also preparing a list of essential activities and occupations in agriculture, shipbuilding, boat building and repairs. This list will be used for guidance of selective service boards throughout the Nation as to what industries are essential and what occupations within these industries are essential.

Big Increase In Jobs

The list will be broken down into critical occupations, essential occupations, etc., for use in granting occupational deferments from military service.

Meanwhile, the commission yesterday reported that job placements in April totaled 605,200 reflecting great expansion in the war and food production programs.

The total represents an increase of 19 per cent over the March figure, and a gain of 24 per cent over April of last year.

Jobs filled throughout the country included 554,800 in factories, shipyards and offices, and 50,600 on farms.

"The volume of industrial and commercial placements has increased steadily under the impetus of the war program, with almost 1,800,000 jobs filled during the first four months of this year," Chairman McNutt declared. "April non-agricultural placements were 25 per cent higher than in the same month of last year, and almost double the number in April, 1940."

The increase in farm placements was heartening to agricultural observers here, who have been seriously concerned over the shortage of farm labor brought about by calls to the Army and migration to defense plant work.

Jesse Jones Charges Political Bias at House Rubber Quiz

The announcement was a victory for farm Senators. For several weeks a Senate Agriculture Subcommittee headed by Senator Gillette (Democrat) of Iowa, has striven by means of public investigation to demonstrate that large amounts of the country's surplus farm products may be used to manufacture alcohol from which, its witnesses testified, butadiene may be quickly produced.

Consumption of 136 million bushels of grain in 1943 currently is contemplated by the WPB industrial alcohol program. The emphasis, for the present, is on corn, "but a large increase in the use of wheat for alcohol production is being arranged," it was announced.

As expected, the new production goals for alcohol mean that distillation of whisky and spirits will be stopped, except for a small portion of the beverage industry. Ninety per cent of the Nation's output of spirits will be halted by the end of the year by the conversion of liquor-making facilities to the production of high-proof industrial alcohol. Beverage stills are expected to produce 240 million of next year's goal of 540 million gallons.

Jones testified before the House committee in monotones barely audible save to committeemen. He pitched his voice only slightly higher when he accused Wolverton of giving his questions a political slant.

Jones had no answer for about a dozen questions on particulars of the rubber program. Finally Wolverton asked him the name of the president of the Rubber Reserve Co. Jones said Howard J. Klosner, spelled out the name for the committee stenographer, and added:

"He (Klosner) is a man of your political faith and I'll get him over here. Maybe you will have more confidence in him."

When Wolverton expressed resentment at the implication of politics, Jonese remarked that "this is a political year," and asserted his right to draw a "political inference."

Wolverton flushed and asserted that Republicans were just as patriotic as anyone else; that the rubber shortage was "entirely too serious a matter for the inference to be given that this is a political question because this is a political year."

There were more words, and Jones replied: "I don't care what you think about it."

Jones disclosed that the RFC, the War Production Board and the Office of Price Administration will have ready in "a very few days" a price, collection and reclaiming plan for scrap rubber. Private companies, he said, are reclaiming about 26,000 tons a month from scrap supplies that total between 800,000 and one million tons.

"We hope to build that up to 35,000 tons a month," he said. "We've got to have a price to compensate the people for bringing it in."

Paul C. Cabot, deputy chief of WPB's Bureau of Industrial Conservation, told the committee that the entire scrap salvage amounted to 14,000 tons a month during January and February. He said the experience with alumnium collection has convinced WPB that any collection campaign must involve all waste materials at once and that "you can't ask people to save materials that are not needed."

Price Ceiling Covers Trip to Pearly Gates

Price Administrator Leon Henderson ruled yesterday that charges for funeral services were covered by the universal price ceiling, which means that the prices can be no higher than the March figures.

Henderson held that, since the services of a funeral director and his staff were performed in connection with the sale of a commodity—the casket—the price ceiling applies.

Business Subsidies Rejected by Senate

Proposal Is Sent Back to Committee; RFC Power Passed

The Senate yesterday rejected unanimously Administration-sought authority to pay Government subsidies to that segment of American business which is threatened with being trapped between rising production costs and price ceilings.

Specifically, the Senate recommitted the proposal to its Banking and Currency Committee for further study.

It acted, after two days of controversy, at the suggestion of Majority Leader Barkley, who determined by a canvass of the Senate that attachment of the subsidy authority to a measure authorizing a five-billion-dollar increase in Reconstruction Finance Corp. borrowing power meant certain recommittal for the entire bill.

Sees "Some Confusion"

Barkley, observing "some confusion and considerable controversy," proposed that the increased borrowing authority, already approved by the House, be separated from Senate committee amendments to authorize the RFC to make payments "in conjunction with the production, processing or distribution of any article or commodity" whenever subsidies might be necessary to continued production or distribution of commodities on which price ceilings have been fixed.

The Senate approved the suggestion without dissent and then quickly passed the new RFC borrowing authorization and sent it to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

The proposal for business subsidies was called by Senator Wheeler (Democrat) of Montana a prelude to Government ownership of industry.

Barkley announced his decision to abandon the proposition after Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat) of Wyoming served notice that he would move to recommit and quickly received declarations of support from Minority Leader McNary and other leading Senators.

Anti-Inflation Move

The subsidy authority was sought by the Administration as a new anti-inflation measure. The Banking Committee amendments not only would have granted the authority to the RFC, but would have increased the borrowing power of the Commodity Credit Corporation by one billion dollars for the same purpose. Exercise of the authority was to have been at the request of Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

Senator Brown (Democrat) of Michigan, floor manager of the bill for the committee, said its purpose was to give Henderson a choice between subsidy or permitting prices to go up in industries confronted with cessation of production when rising war costs make their existance impossible under fixed prices.

Senator O'Mahoney joined Senator Vandenberg (Republican) of Michigan in complaining that the bill failed to prescribe when, how and to whom subsidies were to be paid.

"It seems to me in the light of our experience with some of our bureaucratic friends down the street that we are scarcely any longer justified in relying upon them instead of inserting limitations in the bill," Mr. Vandenberg declared.

As U. S. Talks—

D.C. Occupies Vacant House As Squatter

Tired of dilly-dallying, Commissioner Guy Mason yesterday gave the keys to the little white house in Post Square to District Price Administrator Whitney Leary and told him to move in.

The Federal Housing Administration, which put up the building on District property, was still trying to make up its mind which of its branches it would move into the former Defense Housing registry. It had just about decided to set up a central application office for all District housing authorities there.

The District had been squabbling for weeks with the Federal agency on the question of whose house it was. Yesterday District officials became a bit bored with the formalities and moved in one man, one chair and one desk to establish a sort of squatter sovereignty.

"Possession," said Mason, "is 99 points of the law."

Both parties staked their claims to the prefabricated cottage several weeks ago when the Housing Registry moved across the street to Mellett's Madhouse. The District owns the land, but had given verbal permission to the Federal Government to erect the building for the stated purpose of housing the registry. Now that the registry has moved, the question is what rights the District has in this "fixture."

While the Federal Housing Administration was involved in the usual red tape of "getting four of five groups together to reach a decision," the District quietly made its decision and slipped in.

Leary plans to use his new quarters to house a downtown rationing board, chiefly to handle rationing cases for transients, and to give information to persons who work downtown and find it inconvenient to visit their assigned boards. For any action, however, these workers will have to go to their own boards.

Murray Bolts Miners' Meeting

of the United Steelworkers.

Lewis, it was said, raised the question. Murray, without answering directly, said Lewis himself had set the precedent by holding three positions, presumably referring to the years in which Lewis was C. I. O. chief and chairman of Labor's Non-partisan League as well as president of the miners. He added, moreover, that he became the C. I. O. president unwillingly, at Lewis' instigation, and that Lewis had installed him as chairman of the steelworkers.

Lewis, in reply, was understood to have said there was no comparison because only one of the three positions he had held was a salaried position, namely, the mine union presidency. Murray is holding two salaried jobs, but has announced he would not collect his $18,000 salary as vice president of the U. M. W. The Steelworkers made him president last week at $20,000.

Lewis was reported to have said Murray could continue as vice president of the miners if he complied with all the constitutional requirements, but witnesses did not agree on the implications of that remark, inasmuch as there was no common understanding of where Murray's conduct would begin to contravense the mine union's constitution.

Murray, announcing his intention to leave the hall to keep other engagements, also said he did not want to provoke any disorder. Lewis asked if he wanted to leave and Murray replied he had to leave because of conferences he considered of paramount importance to American labor.

Observers said Lewis, who on Tuesday called Murray his "former friend," took Murray's hand and Murray in exchange clapped Lewis on the shoulder in a parting gesture.

northwest of Kinhwa, after losing 1300 casualties, and prisoners were reported taken in attacks on the Japanese rear north of Kienteh.

(The Japanese, who were claiming two days ago that their troops were storming into Kinhwa, today reported only entering Lanchi.)

From the Burma Road theater in Yunnan province, the Chinese reported the recapture of Nantienmen, south of Lungling on the Burma Road approach to the Salween River.

To the north of the road the Chinese were continuing their pressure around Tengyueh.

With the Chinese gradually forcing the Japanese back from the Salween, deepest advance of their drive from Burma, the impression grew that the 150,000 Japanese troops reported in Burma were intended for use against India and not China.

China Given Lend-Lease Master Pact

By Thomas F. Reynolds

Washington Bureau of Chicago Sun

President Roosevelt yesterday appeared to be completing the third great compact of the war—a binding economic agreement to implement and extend the Atlantic Charter and the declaration by United Nations.

The tremendous scope of the new compact was unfolded when Secretary of State Hull disclosed that the United States has handed China a proposed master agreement under land-lease which would establish lasting postwar ties in the economic and politico-economic field. A similar draft of an agreement was handed to Russia.

Great Britain and the United States already are united by an identical master agreement. Adherence to such compacts by China and Russia in the new move would create an economic bloc without precedent in world history with the United States, Great Britain, Russia and China comprising the cornerstones for a New World economy concurred in by the rest of the United Nations.

Of Tremendous Scope

In its scope, the plan which was beginning to emerge in outline form dwarfs anything yet projected even by the power-hungry dictators of Germany, Italy and Japan. The developments Tuesday and yesterday appear clearly to follow a progression of understandings which are milestones of the fight for liberty in the second World War:

1. The Atlantic Charter—The political and politico-economic statement of principles for which the Allies are fighting.

2. The Declaration by United Nations—The military compact by which the 26 Allies pledge unremitting war against the Axis and promise to sign no separate peace.

3. The Economic Compacts Under Lend-Lease Framework—The separate understandings by which the economies of the victorious United Nations will be welded into a cooperative and collaborating world girdle.

Other Pledges Exchanged

Many others of the United Nations already are signatories with the United States on lend-lease agreements, whereby they exchange pledges of economic collaboration in the future for the aid urgently needed in the moment of war. Prior to signature of the United States-Great Britain agreement on February 23, this country already had signed master agreements with Bolivia, Brazil, Costa Rica, Cuba, Dominican Republic, El Salvador, Haiti, Honduras, Iceland, Netherlands, Nicaragua, Paraguay and Uruguay.

The last report of the lend-lease administration disclosed that master agreements either were being negotiated or were about to be negotiated with Belgium, Chile, Colombia, Czecho-Slovakia, Ecuador, Free France, Greece, Guatemala, Mexico, Norway, Peru, Poland, Turkey, Venezuela and Yugoslavia.

D.C. Policeman Is Exonerated In Shooting

Policeman E. C. Helms, Second Precinct, was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday when a verdict of justifiable homicide was returned in the fatal shooting of William McGregor, Negro, 29, of 315 G Street Northeast.

The shooting occurred March 23 in the 1400 block T Street Northwest, when Helms attempted to arrest William and his brother, George McGregor, 27, for allegedly shooting Policeman Frank Hoffman, Ninth Precinct.

When Helms approached the pair, it was testified, William drew Hoffman's gun from his shirt front, Helms knocked the weapon from his hand and both men dived for it. Helms got possession of the gun and shot Williams in the chest. He died last Saturday at Gallinger Hospital.

The pair and another brother, James, were sought after Hoffman was shot with his own gun in a fight in the Ninth Precinct, March 23, the same day Helms shot William. Hoffman, it was said, was attempting to arrest the three for disorderly conduct.

After shooting Hoffman the fugitives robbed a boarding house operator in the 1300 block T Street Northwest, the jury was told, and were intercepted by Helms while escaping.

Both George and James have been indicted on charges growing out of the shooting of Hoffman. The latter was wounded in the leg and has recovered.

Rubberneck Buses to Stop For Duration Sunday Night

By Gerald G. Gross

Post Staff Writer

How does a $400,000 investment behave when the death rattle is in its throat? At the joyous age of 29, what is it like to be told you have 11 days to live?

To get the answers to these questions, among others, Ye Sightseeing Editor called yesterday on William Bush. A likely subject, Mr. Rush, for a mission of this sort, since he is president of the Gray Line, whose rubberneck buses will exhale their last gas fumes Sunday night.

Frankly, we expected to find Bush slumped despondently over his desk. Or, perhaps, in the garage patting a fender and whispering reverently, "So long, ole Paint your tourist days are over."

Instead, the president of Washington's biggest sightseeing line (27 buses, 8 limousines) was carrying on as usual. In the garage below, mechanics were pounding away as if the season were just beginning, which it is.

Booked Business Cancelled

It's only that this season will die in the bud. Already, Bush explained, $25,000 worth of business which had been booked for June and July has been cancelled.

How he was so unemotionally matter of fact about it we'll never understand, but the line's head went on to say that the 1942 season would have brought in $150,000 in revenue. This notwithstanding the fact that business so far this year is 60 per cent under 1941.

The ODT order of May 20 puts the kibosh on sightseeing buses as of June 1. That means finis for the Gray Line all over the country, not just in Washington. The system has independently owned lines in 40 cities in the United States and Canada. Fifteen hundred buses in all, more than one-half the total number in service.

"Jobs have been found for all of our 80 employes," said Bush. Then he added, grinning: "Everyone's been taken care of except the executives."

Bush May Don Uniform

It would be no surprise if Bush, who has a wife and two small children, put on an Army uniform after the company's affairs are wound up. He estimated that will take 60 days.

F. W. Niles, vice president, secretary and general manager, has been in the sightseeing business here since 1902, when rigs and buggies and fancy horse-drawn coaches were the thing. P. S. Ballou, assistant general manager, has been in the game since 1919. Their future plans are still indefinite.

But lecturers—"And to your right folks, stands the Supreme Court, the world's most imposing marble edifice"—are being placed as hotel clerks, ticket sellers, traffic checkers and in other positions. Drivers and mechanics are having no trouble getting new positions. Same with the clerical help, said Bush.

The Gray Line started out with a single bus on March 4, 1913, when Woodrow Wilson was inaugurated as President for the first time. The founder was the late Louis Bush, father of the incumbent president. In 1932 it was merged with the Royal Blue Line.

The Gray Line as a national association of sightseeing companies had its origin in Washington, Bush said. He is vice president of the coast-to-coast bus hookup which, for all practical purposes, will fade into oblivion Sunday midnight.

Of the company's two garage buildings in the 1200 block of Twenty-third Street Northwest, one has been sold and the other leased. Five buses in the fleet already have been sold. Beginning some time next week, the remainder will be put out to pasture—some on a lot in Bethesda and some on an M Street lot across from the Weather Bureau—until they, too, find new owners.

Farm Students Set to Pitch Into Labor Shortage Battle

Students in 10,000 vocational agricultural departments of the Nation's public schools are preparing to work longer and harder on their home farms so that they can do their share in the wartime farm labor shortage emergency

Among these are 241,000 members of the Future Farmers of America, many of whom are ready to assist in the training of city high school boys who want to spend summer vacations working on farms.

These facts were announced yesterday by Dr. L. H. Dennis, executive secretary of the American Vocational Association, as a result of a cross-sectional survey of farm labor shortage conditions in leading farming States.

War Industry's Needs Cited

The association also reported that two and a half million men and women needed for war producton jobs during the next year will be requested from vocational training schools by Lieut. Col. N. A. Burnell, chief of the Defense Training Branch of the War Production Board's Labor Division.

Meeting this request will mean doubling the annual output of the past two years, according to a report in the current number of the Journal of the Vocational Association, out today.

"The vocational schools can and will meet Colonel Burnell's challenge," said John J. Seidel, president of the association. "Some additional Federal funds will be needed to put more school shops on a 24-hour day, 7-day week basis, but it can be done."

10 Millions for Munitions

Ten million workers will be added to the munitions industries within a year, Col. Burnell declared. He advocates a speed-up through reduction of length of training courses; putting all possible equipment into use; and readjustment of schedules to obtain maximum use of available facilities.

In the District, wartime vocational trends and the outlook in the future for Negro jobholders are under discussion at the second annual vocational guidance conference sponsored by the Southeast House, which opened a three-day session yesterday at 324 Virginia Avenue Southeast.

House Demands $50 Basic Pay

Rankin's motion to insist on the $50 pay scale superseded one by Chairman May of the House Military Affairs Committee to approve conference recommendations. May argued that $50 would become $60 under provisions for a further increase in the case of privates and apprentice seamen serving overseas.

Charges that "politics" tinged the House action were hurled in an hour's warm debate preceding the vote. Both Representative Costello of California and Representative Kilday (Democrat) of Texas who voted against the Rankin motion, contended that service in the Army and Navy cannot be measured in dollars and cents.

"You never can pay our soldiers for their services no matter how much you raise their pay," said Kilday.

Representative Costello told members not to "smear patriotism with the dollar sign" by trying to pay for such patriotism as was shown at Bataan.

Kilday pleaded with members to disregard vote-getting considerations and to support "a proper military system which doesn't give a damn what the consequences will be on election day."

Representative Mott (Republican) of Oregon, as heatedly denied that the issue was political.

Word was passed down through the House that the President probably would veto the entire pay bill if the $50 basic pay provision is enacted, but it failed to halt the House stampede.

In the Senate, with only a third of its membership up against the election gun, leaders hoped to hold the bill to the $42 conference figure, but that would only carry the issue back again to the adamant House. Upshot may be a compromise between $42 and $50.

Five members who originally voted against the Rankin amendment yesterday switched to support of it. They were Representatives Bell (Democrat), of Missouri, and Andrews of New York, Crowther of New York, Hess of Ohio and Rockwell of Colorado (Republicans). Fight for Life

7 Slated To Testify Against Oden

Seven witnesses for the Government are scheduled to take the stand today against Guy E. Oden, 19-year-old former theater usher on his second trial for the fatal shooting last July 19 of his girl friend, Ellen Reed Cannon.

The new trial, which opened yesterday, was granted last October when Defense Attorney James J. Laughlin claimed that Mrs. Helen L. Yates, sister of the 15-year-old victim, had testified falsely regarding her marital status. The resulting reversal of the conviction of first degree murder, handed down by Justice Jesse C. Adkins, is believed unprecedented in District court annals.

Most of yesterday's session was taken up by the testimony of Mrs. Yates in answer to questions by Laughlin who sought to establish that the slain girl's sister had made conflicting statements during the first trial.

Madaline Webb Held in Chair as Bellhop Tells Of Seeing Her Near Where Widow Was Slain

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—After another day of courtroom fireworks both sides rested tonight in the trial of dark-haired Madeline Webb, Oklahoma-born model, her sweetheart Eli Shonbrun, and John D. Cullen on first-degree murder charges in the strangulation of Mrs. Susan Flora Reich, wealthy refugee widow.

Miss Webb, who had burst out with sharp words and tears during her own testimony and that of other witnesses today, had to be restrained in her chair when a bell captain at the Hotel Sutton, where Mrs. Reich's body was found March 5, testified he had seen her in the vicinity of the hotel on the day of the slaying. The bell captain was the last witness called at a night session.

Throughout her questioning Miss Webb vehemently denied being in the hotel suite at the time of the crime. The State charges that she lured Mrs. Reich to the suite.

Shonbrun, avowing his love for the model, declared on the stand that he and Murray Hirschl, his uncle, "murdered the woman alone" and that Miss Webb had nothing to do with it.

Summations by the prosecution and defense attorneys will be heard tomorrow. The case is expected to go to the jury Friday.

The bell captain, Peter Springman, asserted that on the day before Mrs. Reich's body was found he saw Miss Webb, whom he identified from the witness stand, "about four houses away from the hotel."

"She was coming from the hotel and was walking toward Second Avenue," Springman said. "I was returning from lunch and it was about 1:15 p. m."

The prosecution contends that Mrs. Reich was slain at about 1:20 p. m. on March 4, although her body was not discovered until a day later.

Both Miss Webb and Shonbrun muttered angrily during Springman's testimony. Jacques Buitenkant, chief defense counsel, became involved in several clashes with Assistant District Attorney Jacob A. Grumet over Springman's story.

"You are getting impossible!" Grumet said.

"You are!" Buitenkant retorted.

At one point, as Grumet insisted that the witness be allowed to complete an answer to a question, Miss Webb attempted to rise from her chair and exclaimed:

"You gave him the answer!"

She then placed her head on her arms and wept.

Another rebuttal witness, Miss Crystal Cooper, contradicting earlier testimony given by Miss Webb, declared that she went to the Hotel Sutton March 2 in response to a telephone call and talked with Miss Webb.

Under cross-examination yesterday, the model denied that she had ever telephoned and later interviewed at the hotel an applicant for a private secretarial position which the prosecution contended she had offered. Earlier today Grumet asked Miss Webb:

"When you telephoned this girl, weren't you scouting around for a victim?"

Miss Cooper said that she knew Miss Webb at first under the name of "Mrs. Ted Leopold." The State has alleged that Miss Webb and Shonbrun registered at the hotel as "Mr. and Mrs. Ted Leopold."

A third version of the crime was given by another rebuttal witness for the State, Detective Thomas B. Tunney, brother of the former boxing champion, Lieut. Comdr. Gene Tunney.

Tunney quoted Shonbrun as saying in a statement in the district attorney's office, March 11, that Cullen, the almost forgotten third defendant, had been left alone with Mrs. Reich in the hotel suite on March 4. The detective said Shonbrun asserted he left Cullen in the room with Mrs. Reich shortly after she arrived, and went down to the hotel lobby.

"I waited downstairs about 10 or 15 minutes until Cullen came down," Tunney quoted Shonbrun. "He had the ring belonging to the woman, and Cullen said he had to tie her up. I asked him if she was all right and he said yes."

On the stand Monday, Shonbrun declared that he and Hirschl had committed the slaying and that neither Miss Webb nor Cullen was present. Hirschl, the State key witness who also has been indicted for the murder but will be tried separately, had testified that he and the others had plotted the robbery but that neither he nor Miss Webb was at the hotel when the attack on Mrs. Reich occurred.

Cullen was the only one of the three defendants who did not testify.

600 Millions Asked For War Housing

Everybody Talks

Zone, Budget Studies Open To Residents

Two congressional committees yesterday opened their doors to District residents who wanted to talk about changes in the local zoning law to permit boarding and rooming houses in restricted areas or about the need for more money in the District budget.

The House subcommittee hearing witnesses on the proposed zoning change found the opposition growing. Present to give ideas against the measure were: David Lynn, Architect of the Capitol; John Nolen, jr., director of planning for the National Capital Park and Planning Commission; Thomas Settle, executive secretary of the commission; Engineer Commissioner C. W. Kutz, a member of the zoning commission; Leon Pretzfelder, chairman of the zoning committee of the Federation of Citizens' Associations; Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman, executive director of the Washington Housing Association; Mrs. L. B. Wright, representing the Northwest Citizens' Association, and W. E. Hoffheim, representing the Piney Branch Citizens' Association.

Many Attend

Representative Hebert (Democrat) of Louisiana, chairman of the subcommittee, said the testimony had convinced him the zoning commission can handle all problems that may arise without the need for the proposed legislation.

The Senate subcommittee in charge of District appropriations was even more popular, with many witnesses waiting to be heard when it stopped work in late afternoon.

Witnesses included: Henry Austin, president of the Bradbury Heights Citizens' Association, who urged completion of a school for his area and asked that the WPB be authorized to clear priorities on materials for it; William J. Smith, president of the Southeast Council of Citizens Associations, and Frank Randolph, secretary of the council, who appeared in behalf of the Anacostia branch library, asking an appropriation of $28,420 for the year; Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, Mrs. Henry Chandler, Mrs. Basil Manly, and several others appearing in behalf of several welfare and health projects.

A. A. A. Official Appears

Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the Washington branch of the A. A. A., and Harry Wender, executive vice president of the Federation of Citizens Associations, asked that funds be included for reorganization and work of the division of motor vehicles and traffic. The reorganization would cost about $22,000, Cleveland said, but this was denied by the House on grounds that lack of gasoline and rubber would reduce moto rtraffic to a minimum during the coming year.

The A. A. A. manager pointed out that streetcars and buses still run, the town is filled with taxis, and pedestrians have to get around. As an "irreducible minimum," he said, the A. A. A. recommends funds for salary of an associate engineer and a junior engineer to aid in the study of dangerous intersections.

Blackouts have brought an added serious problems to the department, he said, and there is no indication work of the division will be generally lessened.

President Urges Congress to Provide For 1,600,000 Work

By Christine Sadler
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to authorize an additional 600 million dollars for emergency housing to meet the urgent needs of an estimated 1,600,000 persons who will migrate to war jobs in various parts of the country during the fiscal year beginning July 1.

The Chief Executive said the 1,600,000 persons for whom Government housing would be needed included families in which the breadwinner could not afford to maintain two separate living units or where small children made it particularly desirable to keep the family together.

Also, he said, the estimate included many workers who "may not find it feasible to move their families to the locality of their war jobs."

Before the year is over, it is believed, the need to cut the migration to its barest minimum may result in the "freezing" at home of as many families as possible.

Not "Real Houses"

Those permitted to go to the industrial war areas need not expect real houses. Temporary barracks, trailers and tents will be utilized, but permanent buildings and those with an abundance of utilities definitely are out for the duration, according to all WPB calculations.

The authorization asked by the President yesterday, would be added to the Lanham Act funds, under which program Congress already has made available $1,020,000,000 for war housing. Most of this is expended or allocated, however.

"All reasonable resources are being earnestly pursued," he said, to reduce the amount of new housing required by the expansion of war industries. These include conversion of local plants to war purposes, transfer of local workers to war jobs, and drawing upon new sources of local labor supply.

Despite present overcrowding in many industrial areas, existing structures are being counted upon to absorb a large portion of the 1,600,000 war migrants, he said.

"Private enterprise is being relied upon to serve a large proportion of the remaining need, and toward this end Federal legislation has recently been enacting.

D. C. May Not Share

"But beyond these methods there remains the irreducible requirement for a volume of new public construction largely temporary in nature and designed to serve the lower-income brackets of war workers," he said.

Housing officials last night did not believe the Washington area would share in the funds asked, as special legislation is now under consideration for the area. However, 50 million dollars for the metropolitan area has been authorized under the Lanham Act.

Although this amount has been slashed to a total now being debated by Senate and House conferees, the authorization might entitle the area to the full amount, if it should be spent for temporary dormitories, some believed. Erection of permanent family units has been vetoed by the House.

"More than ever in our history," President Roosevelt said in his request to Congress, "we need houses to help win the war."

Presbyterian Assembly Asks Distilleries Be Shut

Milwaukee, May 27 (AP).—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church of the U. S. A., voted today to ask President Roosevelt to close immediately all distilleries and breweries and all establishments for the wholesale and retail distribution of alcoholic beverages for the duration of the war.

Boss'n's Mate

Al Vanderbilt Reports Here To Navy

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT

By Lee Carson
International News Service Staff Writer

Twenty million dollars' worth of boatswain's mate reported for duty here yesterday in the person of young Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt.

Slipping quietly into town disguised in blue without fanfare of race horses, the Nation's No. 1 catch and wealthiest sportsman went immediately to the Navy Department.

Just what his duties will be Vanderbilt did not know, except that it will include a lot of "flunky work" until he goes out to sea. As an enlisted man and noncom, he already has received instructions to salute everything in sight and keep away from officers' hangouts.

Several weks ago the young man, whose hobby of racing sets him back $300,000 annually, enlisted in the Navy. Many months ago Vanderbilt served notice that he was not interested in wangling himself a commission.

Delighted With Rating

With a name like Vanderbilt, he explained, "a fellah" should either enlist or wait for the draft. Accepting a commission under the circumstances he added, would be inviting criticism of the service. As a "fellah" who favors being called "just plain Al," and leading a life minus fuss and feathers, the Vanderbilt scion is delighted with his boatswain's mate rating.

Seven pounds under the minimum weight requirements, Vanderbilt went through the tortures of adding temporary pounds by loading up on bananas and water just before the Navy physical scrutiny. The large bunch of bananas and gallons of water, however, still left him five pounds on the shady side.

The recruiting sergeant turned thumbs down and Al had to try all over again. The second time the Navy relented and waived the five only to discover that without bananas and water, the minus was seven.

Figuring that honesty is the best policy when you're caught with your weight down, Vanderbilt confessed but argued that they had passed him with the fake poundage so why not with the honest count. Two days ago the Navy gave him the high sign to report in Washington, pronto.

Horrifies Fifth Avenue Shop

Horrifying a swank Fifth Avenue establishment dedicated to building shoulders and hiding the paunches of the wealthy, Al asked for a regulation enlisted man's rig. Unprepared for such a turn of events, the shop pleaded frowingly:

"But, Mr. Vanderbilt, we never heard of a boatswain's mate—are you sure you don't mean lieutenant commander?"

At the zero hour, after a hectic hunt all over greater Manhattan, A. G. Vanderbilt finally found a uniform on lower Broadway and put it on without alterations.

With one suit, a pair of summer khaki trousers, one regulation shirt, tie and cap to his illustrious name, the 28-year-old Vanderbilt heir reported to his superior officer yesterday morning.

He was immediately ordered to march to the nearest tailor and have his uniform cut down to size.

If stationed in Washington, the sportsman plans to get "some sort of small flat." For the time being he will hide out in his hotel room. Guest rooms of innumerable mansions in the Capital plus the Vanderbilt's own estate and racing headquarters in nearby Maryland await, but the richest boatswain's mate in the combined navies of the United Nations will live in his single room with an adjoining towel.

Lieut. F. D. Roosevelt Admitted to N. Y. Bar

How Military Police Are Trained

from becoming involved in situations that may end or impair their usefulness as soldiers and cause them periods of great unhappiness.

Beyond that, he must be a criminal investigator, able to help the Army take care of its own internal difficulties without imposing on civilian authorities. He must be trained to direct traffic under the most harassing conditions so he can keep troops and trains moving to and from the front no matter how heavily the roads are loaded. He must be trained to handle prisoners of war and guard vital industrial and military installations.

The Army recognizes the delicacy of the M. P.'s position with relation to his fellow soldiers and has set up its course of military police training accordingly. When he completes his 13 weeks at the replacement center here, the new Army's M. P. will be the best soldier in sight, wherever he is, disciplined, well uniformed, neat, upstanding and sure of himself.

There is a good deal of military ceremony mixed in with the M. P. recruit's training with the aim of accomplishing that result. From his first day here he is involved with formal guard mount and close order drill and reviews and inspections far beyond the portion of the average soldier. There are bands and flags and close formations and the heart-swelling soldierly feeling that goes with them.

Bear in mind that the Military Police Replacement Center was opened only last April 8; that half of its 1900 recruits have been here two weeks, the other half only one. Then go out and watch them pass in review.

Despite their newness to the Army, they keep step and hold their lines and execute eyes right with a snappiness you would not expect in men so new to military matters. If you would like the answer to that, go with their commander and inspect them.

They're A" Mature

As you walk through their opened ranks you are impressed by one thing immediately. That is the fact that these are not boys; they are men in their late 20's and early 30's, big, husky fellows, serious and prideful, with not an unbuttoned pocket or dusty rifle among them. The reason lies in strict selection.

The Military Police component of the new Army doesn't want men under 28, unless they are going to front line outfits; then it will take them as young as 25. They must be not less than 5 feet 9 inches tall and must weigh in proportion to height and age. Their bearing, neatness, discipline, courtesy and tact, ascertained by their histories and by personal interview, are taken strongly into consideration.

But most important of all, they must have an intelligence rating well above the average and, as far as possible, possess experience in legal, police, investigation or traffic-control work.

By now you probably have surmised the Military Police Replacement Center does not always get the sort of men it wants, in the face of those requirements. Its men come to it directly from civil life and some reception centers have not yet caught the idea of what the United States Army, model of 1942, has set out to do in the way of getting itself a corps of military police.

Many are Former Police

In its first two allotments of recruits it got the usual scattering of bartenders, dancers, acrobats and hair dressers. But it also picked up a very respectable proportion of lawyers and trained investigators and policemen. In one company, for instance, are 28 men who were city policemen and detectives, sheriffs and deputies, highway patrolmen, prison, plant and bank guards.

When they reach here they embark on a training course of 13 weeks, at the end of which they are ready to enter Military Police companies and battalions, Prisoner of War companies, Zone of the Interior battalions. They have been taught to defend themselves with rifle, pistol, submachine gun, shotgun, club or bare hands, to take pride in the uniforms they wear and to use their heads as well as their hands.

By constant practice the budding M. P.'s develop their faculties of observation; they are taught criminal identification methods, including fingerprinting, as used in all modern police departments; they get a sound grounding in military law and in civil law as it affects the soldier. Judo, the modern version of jiu-jitsu, is part of their course; they are taught boxing and wrestling, how to use their clubs with convincing but not permanent effect, to fire and care for their weapons.

And all through their course runs the thread of military training in the old manner, training for bearing and discipline and pride in the soldier's profession. They are determined here that the M. P.'s of America's new Army will be examples as well as arbiters of what a soldier should be.

For the rest, they are building in these men an appreciation of their place in the Army's mission of success in battle. There are held up to them examples like that of the hot corner in the last war where a tangle of cross-traffic came under shell fire and the M. P. on traffic duty who was unsnarling it was shot down. They are told how his place was taken immediately by another who also went down in a few minutes and another stepped up to take his places and another and another, until the columns were straightened out and off the roads.

The Cavalry Cooperates

The Cavalry has done much to make operation of the M. P. Replacement Center and Officer Candidate School possible. The replacement center cadres came here from military police outfits in the field, as did many of the officers; 24 officers came from the Provost Marshal General's School at Arlington Cantonment across the Potomac from Washington.

When they got here they moved into buildings turned over to them out of the Cavalry Replacement Center. They use Cavalry bands in their ceremonies. The Cavalry is training half their officer candidates while the other half is going to the Infantry School at Fort Benning, Ga.

After they receive their commissions, new M. P. officers will be sent to the school at Arlington before they are put in command of troops.

Among the 1900 recruits in replacement center training are 30 who were selected by the Adjutant General's Department to be coursiers. When they complete their M. P. training, which is the best they can get in military bearing, discipline, courtesy and the use of their heads, they will be further instructed to fit them for bearing the Army's most important communications.

"Our purpose," they tell you here, "is to develop soldiers thoroughly trained, physically hardened and fit to endure discomfort and hardship; to instill in all a high sense of duty, pride in unselfish service, high ideals of military police procedure, and a discipline which subjects all personal interests to the accomplishment of a common cause."

If you hear a loud Bronx cheer from Private Doaks on that one, it is because Doaks still has a lot to learn.

He will learn, before he shucks his uniform for civvies again, that the M. P. in this war is dedicated to the soldier's welfare. If he has to learn the hard way, that will be Doaks' fault.

FREDERICK R. HUBER, Mgr.

Rev. Mason Named to Aid Coadjutor

The Venerable Rev. W. Roy Mason, D. D., 62, Archdeacon of the Blue Ridge Missionary District of the Episcopal Diocese of Virginia, was elected suffragan bishop of the diocese yesterday during the second day's sessions of the annual diocesan conference at St. Paul's Church in Alexandria.

REV. MASON

The position of suffragan bishop, a newly created office in the diocese, provides an assistant to Coadjutor Bishop Frederick W. Goodwin, who has been overburdened because the diocesan bishop, the Right Rev. Henry St. George Tucker, is kept busy out of the State in his capacity of presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church.

Dr. Mason's consecration as bishop, according to church regulations, must be deferred until the election is ratified by a majority of the Episcopal dioceses throughout the United States.

His election yesterday came after five ballots had been cast without determining the new bishop, since under existing rules of of the diocese the winner must gain a majority vote in the elections conducted for both the clerical group and the laymen.

At the conclusion of the fifth ballot, the Rev. Beverley M. Boyd of Richmond, who ran second to Dr. Mason in the three previous ballots, withdrew his candidacy, and moved that the bishop-elect be chosen by acclamation. The motion was carried without opposition.

Dr. Mason now makes his home at the Blue Ridge Mission, near Charlottesville. After his consecration he will be stationed at diocesan headquarters in Richmond. The bishop-elect is married, has three sons, and two grandchildren. A native of King George County, he has served as archdeacon of the Blue Ridge district since 1928, when he returned to the mission after having served for eight years as rector of Christ Church, Charlottesville.

He attended the College of William and Mary, Williamsburg, Va., and graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in 1904. He later received his doctor of divinity degree from the Alexandria seminary.

U. S. to Parole M. L. Annenberg in June Because of Ill Health

By the Associated Press

M. L. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher, serving a three-year sentence at Lewisburg, Pa., Federal prison after conviction in the largest individual income tax evasion case on record, will be paroled June 11 because of ill health, the Justice Department announced today.

This will cut five months off the so-called "minimum term," since Annenberg, who is 65, was scheduled for release November 11. The full term runs until July 21, 1943, and until that time he will be under supervision of the United States Parole Board.

Annenberg was indicted at Chicago in August, 1939, on a charge of evading $3,238,809 in income taxes from 1933 to 1936, and the bill with penalties and interest totaled $5,548,384. However, Treasury claims for taxes over a longer period were reported to amount to around 12 million dollars and were settled in the spring of 1940 for slightly more than 10 million dollars, to be paid over a seven-year period.

Annenberg's net worth, said by the Government to have increased from $7,858,343 in 1930 to $19,496,308 in 1938, was alleged to have been largely attributable to profits from an international horse race information service.

He will seek the Republican nomination after a campaign by petition and declared that he would run as an Independent if the petitions showed sufficient strength and a party convention failed to recognize this.

Paint Will Make Stockings of Any Shade And Eyebrow Pencil Gives You a Seam

Gone are the days of eyebrow lifting over bare legs. Times and necessity change many things and we quickly learn to accept the change even though we frown on it at first. So don't worry about losing your stockings, girls. You can paint them on, without fear of criticism, and have the same gossamer-sheer effect as nylon or silk.

Your disguised stockings won't be pretty unless they have a smooth, clean basis. For smoothness, simply use generous amounts of hand lotion on your legs after every bath.

One way to get the clean effect is by removing unsightly hair with the use of a wax depilatory. Then you're all set for the shade of hose you like. Spread the cream on with absorbent cotton and rub it smooth with the palm of your hand. The beauty of it is the color won't smudge or rub off, and better still you'll have no runs.

If you want to go all the way, you can have the seam by using an eyebrow pencil. But better not try unless you have someone around with a steady hand to do it for you. (Too bad to spoil a pretty leg with a crooked seam.)

He Can't Walk— But How He Works!

Poplar Bluff, Mo. (AP).—"There's no ration card on courage," says Coburn Conover, 38-year-old cripple who hoes his garden from a wheelchair.

Conover, told by doctors his condition is incurable because of a growth on the spine, planted a garden this season, because "I'm going to have food for my wife and four children."

He planted a young orchard of peach trees, then went into the woods in his wheel chair and cut posts for a fence around his place. His sons helped build the fence.

"I get joy out of working," he says.

Conover, whose ailment started about six years ago, says: "They tell me there's no hope for me—but while there is life, there is hope—and I am hoping, hoping, hoping!"

Vital Statistics Drop

London (AP).—Birth, marriages and deaths declined in England and Wales in 1941, compared with 1940. Last year's figures, with those of 1940 in parentheses, follow: Births 586,778 (607,029), marriages 97,258 (112,087), deaths 534,643 (581,537).

Underground Factories Prove Ideal in Britain

London (INS).—Underground factories are already in use in Britain and it is found that subterranean conditions are as satisfactory as far as the working of the most delicate tools or the health of the workers is concerned.

In one of these factories women make up 61 per cent of the employes and take an equal share of night shifts with men.

Another factory, which will be ready by August, covers several square miles; quarters for married couples, six hostels to accommodate a thousand people and a canteen which will serve 500 persons at a time are being built. This factory—like many others—has been made from a disused quarry and about a million tons of loose stone had to be removed before the layout could be planned.

New Type Nazi Division Said To Be Deficient

By Walter Kerr

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

Moscow.—The German army has sent into battle recently a new type of light infantry division which is considerably weaker in man power and armament than the usual division of 15,000 men, the Russians report, adding that the new military grouping was being used not as a result of a new system of organization, but because of a feverish haste to get men and guns into the field.

While such German formations are still rare at the front, the Russians said they find them increasing. From documents seized after a battle with the German 330th Division, the Russians know exactly what this so-called "light division" consists of.

Like all divisions, it has three infantry and one artillery regiment, but there are only two battalions to an infantry regiment. However, it lacks much of the divisional regimental equipment and the special troops that help to make a division a self-contained fighting force.

A comparison of the battle equipment of a German light division with that of a normal division, as revealed by the documents seized by the Russians, follows:

The light division has only two 105-millimeter howitzers of type 18, instead of the usual 12; 24 light howitzers of type 16, instead of 36; no 75-millimeter field guns, instead of 18; six 50-millimeter antitank guns, whereas the normal division has none as part of its regular equipment; 40 37-millimeter antitank guns instead of 72; 18 heavy and medium trench mortars instead of 54, and 54 light mortars instead of 81.

The light division lacks the normal division's strength in smaller ordnance also, having 72 heavy machine guns instead of 108; 216 light machine guns instead of 324; 54 antitank rifles instead of 81, and 288 submachine guns instead of 432.

The light division goes into battle with this reduced fire power, but also is otherwise handicapped. It is always entirely supplied by military wagons of the models of 1895, and by peasant carts. Trucks and motorcycles are rare.

A battalion of engineers in the light division has no reconnaissance detachment; instead there is only a company of communications troops. There is only one field hospital instead of two. Supply services are reduced by two-thirds.

Nowhere are there special anti-aircraft detachments, although there is antiaircraft equipment in some units of the new division, which has no antitank weapons and whose regimental antitank ordnance is less than usual.

The equipment normally carried by a regiment's third battalion has been discarded altogether in the new light division and has not even been assigned to the division as a whole.

Taxi Men Threaten Strike Here June 1

Union With 62 Members Says It Will Tie-Up Traffic

A general taxicab strike in the District, to begin at 12:01 a. m. June 1, was threatened last night by the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., a union with a membership of 62.

E. A. Glenn, spokesman for the union and former president of the District of Columbia Drivers Mutual Benefit Union, its predecessor, said that he could guarantee that all the cabs in the city would be off the streets next Monday in protest against the new zone system scheduled to go into effect at that time.

"We'll just stay off the streets," Glenn said. "And we will have plenty of pickets to take care of those who don't cooperate with us."

Loss of Rights Seen

"If the drivers do not want to pursue their legal rights, as provided by law, they lose their right to operate as a public utility," Hankin continued.

The PUC moved rapidly yesterday afternoon to "disapprove an application for reconsideration of the PUC taxi zone order," a petition which the cab union filed at the same time it was making public its strike ultimatum.

This petition, labeled "Demands of the Members of the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc., and other taxicab drivers cooperating with the United Taxicab Drivers, Inc." asked for a readjustment of the ordered zone boundaries and for a 30-50-70-90-cent zone scale. A member elected by the taxi industry to sit with the PUC and with the Board of Revocation and Review on all matters concerning cab regulations was strongly requested.

A Congressional act would be necessary to revise the membership of the P. U. C., Hankin pointed out. The membersship of the Revocation Board is also out of the PUC domain. The Board of Commissioners appoints all members of the Revocation Board.

Another Grievance Cited

The taxi union cites as another grievance a supposed 40-cent taxi rate to the new War Department Building at Arlington. As a matter of fact, the official maps for the new zones show no zones designated beyond the District boundaries, except for the National Airport. Whether the airport is in the District or in Virginia is still a matter of discussion, but concessions have been operating there since last summer under District licenses.

Hankin said that although the airport was included for the established fare of 80 cents, the P. U. C. has not yet set any rate for the War Department Building.

The presidents of the major taxi and cab companies could not be reached. An assistant to John M. Royer, jr., president of the Premier Cab Association and of the D. C. Taxi Owners Association, said that although he had noticed "nothing out of the ordinary, Mr. Glenn was the only person to consult about the strike.

Army Won't Interfere

Brig. Gen. Albert Cox said that although Washington is now a military area, the Army would not interfere with the drivers unless there was disorder.

If the cabs simply stay off the street, however, Hankin said that this would not constitute a strike, as there are no regulations on the drivers' hours. The P. U. C. has even furnished the drivers with "Off Duty" signs with which they can legally drive about the streets without picking up any passengers.

Post Square Cop

Whitey Quits Force to Join Coast Guard

DONALD NEY

Officer Donald Ney, for nearly three years as familiar to passers-by on Post Square as the statue of Governor Shepherd, yesterday made his last "turn in" from the police box at Fourteenth and Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

"Whitey," as he is known to the E Street set, resigned from the Metropolitan Police Force to join the United States Coast Guard.

Strictly speaking, Whitey has been in uniforms of one kind and another since 1935, when he began a four-year hitch with the Marine Corps.

He joined the police force three years ago and has been at Fourteenth and the Avenue almost ever since.

He received considerable fame early in 1941 when he reported that bits of coal were responsible for the epidemic of runs in ladies' stockings whenever a high wind blew.

Officer Ney will enlist in the Coast Guard Monday.

Gen. George's Wife Given His D. S. M.

Robert A. Lovett, Assistant Secretary of War for Air, presented yesterday to Mrs. Vera C. George of Redlands, Calif., the Distinguished Service Medal awarded posthumously to her husband, Brig. Gen. Harold H. George, air officer on the staff of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

General George was killed in an airplane accident in Australia a month ago.

Among the persons who witnessed the ceremony in Lovett's office were Mrs. George's son, Robert George, private, first class, and her daughter, Miss Peggy George.

Families Living in Highland Dwellings Will Get Street Repairs but No Arc Lights

Families living in Highland Dwellings, one of the Alley Dwelling Authority's housing projects in Northeast Washington, can count on their streets being fixed—but need not expect street lights, ADA Executive Officer John Ihlder yesterday told Representative Jennings Randolph (Democrat) of West Virginia.

In reply to a query brought on by complaints from residents in the project, Ihlder told the chairman of the House District Committee in a letter that the WPB had denied priorities for street lights.

"The critical material situation has become increasingly serious," he said, "and it is more and more difficult to get priorities."

Paving of Yuma and Atlantic Streets and the Livingston Road access highway to the dwellings was delayed for many reasons which Ihlder explained, included the withdrawal of WPA assistance. Paving crews started to work on May 22, however, he said. Livingston Road facilities may have to remain temporary because "neither the FWA nor the Highway Department has the necessary funds" to prepare that thoroughfare for permanent use, he said.

"Class B. Citizens"

A letter from Mrs. Maria Haidar, published the other day on this page, calls attention to the fact that, despite the Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments, more than one category of citizenship is now implicitly recognized by the Federal Government. Mrs. Haidar complains that it is a settled policy of various Government departments not to employ citizens of foreign origin, no matter how exceptional their qualifications, nor how demonstrable their loyalty to the United States.

This, it seems, applies also to quasi-official agencies such as the American Red Cross. It applies, moreover, to certain parts of the armed services. For example, in the Army Air Corps a minimum of 10 years citizenship is required. Since no recruits over the age of 26 are accepted in the Air Corps, and since the minimum age for naturalization is 18, the effect of this ruling is to exclude all foreign-born applicants.

It may or may not be comforting to Mrs. Haidar to know that it is not only the foreign-born who are victims of discrimination. Birth or naturalization certificates are now required of applicants for employment in most war industries. This sometimes works seriously to the disadvantage of many citizens of old American stock. For in rural communities 40 or 50 years ago vital statistics were imperfectly recorded.

As a larger and larger portion of the economic life of the Nation comes under governmental control, the effect of these arbitrary rulings becomes more and more severe. Thus the status of persons who for one reason or another are excluded from Government employment or industries working on Government contracts is coming to resemble that of the "metics" in the Athenian democracy. These were persons who were permitted to live and trade in Athens on the payment of an annual tax but enjoyed none of the privileges of citizens.

One of the curious paradoxes of this war has been the absence on the part of the people in general of that pronounced xenophobia which marked the last war and the years immediately following it. Today Americans at large are far more tolerant and sympathetic in their attitudes toward their foreign-born neighbors, including those of German and Austrian birth, than is the Government itself.

Machine-Made Judges

Testifying before the Senate Judiciary Committee in opposition to the appointment of Thomas F. Meaney to a Federal judgeship, Governor Edison of New Jersey said: "The people will always be dubious of the quality of justice obtainable from a judge who all his adult life has been a part of and obligated to a sordid political machine." That one sentence sums up the whole case against the Meaney appointment. Specific charges brought against the nominee are sufficiently grave to warrant his rejection if they are substantiated. But it is not necessary for Congress to look beyond the simple fact that anyone who has the backing of the Hague machine is disqualified because he is for that reason suspect in the eyes of honest citizens.

Unwittingly Representative Mary Norton strengthened the case against Mr. Meaney when she called Governor Edison a hypocrite for accepting the support of the Hague machine during the gubernatorial campaign and then turning against the Hague choice for a Federal judgeship. Mrs. Norton's attack, no less than Governor Edison's defense, tacitly implies that the man who gains political office with the help of a party machine is not a free agent. By that same token any judge who owes his appointment to a corrupt political machine will be obligated to show his gratitude for past favors. Clearly the bestowal of favors is not consonant with the even-handed administration of justice.

The United States is today fighting the battle of democracy against its enemies abroad, and democracy stands for equality before the law. That battle could be—and would be—lost at home if the administration of justice were permitted to fall into unworthy hands. Constitutional guarantees of individual rights would not be worth the paper they are written on if the courts of this country were taken over by the henchmen of venal politicians. With a few deplorable exceptions the Federal judiciary has lived up to its high reputation for integrity. That has been due to careful selection of appointees. Congress ought to be jealous of that reputation, and accordingly quick to resist any effort on the part of the Administration to award judgeships as political spoils of office.

Beyond Lend-Lease

The object of our lend-lease aid to the anti-Hitler forces has gone through several metamorphoses. First, it was an effort to keep us out of a shooting war by helping the enemies of Hitlerism. When that effort failed, and we were plunged into war, it became a contribution to the common victory. But now we see lend-lease in process of use as a key to the new order which we hope to establish after the war in concert with our Allies. That object was implicit in the statement of principles to which both the British and ourselves agreed in the lend-lease arrangement of February 23. An effort is now being made to extend those principles to our lend-lease arrangements with Russia and China. The development would be of signal importance. For, if Russia and China should agree, the war aims of the United Nations would have been defined with a clarity which they have heretofore lacked.

The heart of the order which we are seeking to erect in the world is equality in international trade. That does not necessarily mean free trade. But it does mean freer trade, and, more than that, it means the end of discriminations in the commercial relations between nations. Playing favorites in trade relations is the road to war. There must be a free field and no favor if the world community is to live and prosper in peace. Such a credo is the direct opposite of Hitler's New Order and of Japan's "co-prosperity" plan. Instead of independence, there would be dependence. Instead of freedom, there would be dictation. Instead of equality, there would be subordination. Under Hitler's system and under Japan's the nations of the world would have to work according to rules laid down by the victors.

The Atlantic Charter made a tentative approach to a regime of post-war commercial equality. In the fourth item the charter provided for the "enjoyment by all states, great or small, victor or vanquished, of access on equal terms to the trade and raw materials of the world." But the rule was almost nullified by a qualification. That was that such an endeavor should be made "with due respect for existing obligations." The qualification brought to mind several special arrangements in existence among the signatories prior to the war which ran counter to the principles of nondiscrimination. One was the series of Ottawa pacts serving the British Commonwealth exclusively. However, there has been no qualification in President Roosevelt's subsequent references to the fourth item in the Atlantic Charter. And the language of the February 23 agreement with Britain—which, incidentally, was a statement of general principles and still has to be made into a master agreement—likewise omits it.

Lend-lease at its inception was hailed as a tribute to the lesson we learned from our last experience of interallied debts. We decided to obliterate the dollar sign from all aid extended to our friends. Let us be equally understanding in seeking to establish a world order after victory, and realize in action that economic progress is based on reciprocity. To sell, in other words, we must buy. If that lesson is learned from pre-war experience, then the lend-lease arrangement in truth will be worthy of Mr. Churchill's encomium, namely, that it was "the most unsordid act in the whole of recorded history."

Hoarded Dollars

According to the Federal Reserve Board, possibly as much as two billion dollars of the money now in circulation is accounted for by increased hoarding of cash. The board points out that such hoarding does nobody any good, as the hoarder loses the interest he might obtain by investing his money—besides running great risk of loss from theft, fire, etc. Furthermore, his cash in hand is an obligation of the Government, similar in that respect to a Government bond, and equally dependent for its "goodness" upon the credit of the Government. So no extra risk is run by investing cash in bonds, and thereby helping to win the war.

However, these arguments hold good only for American hoarders. There are other types of hoarders who will not be moved by the Reserve Board arguments. They are the Axis powers who have come into possession of hoarded dollars acquired from the people of occupied Europe. Some of this currency is known to have been sent to South American countries to be exchanged for South American currencies, the South Americans in turn shipping dollars back here. As a result, the Treasury is now taking special precautions to trace the origin of currency imports and prevent their utilization by enemy agents. With that end in view customs officials have been instructed to impound temporarily all imports of money, whether American or foreign currency, pending investigation of the legality of shipments. The central banks of South American countries have also been asked to give assurance that currency shipped here has not come from Axis sources.

There is, of course, no way of knowing how much American money hoarded in occupied countries has been seized by Germany and sent abroad. But even inconsiderable amounts would be tremendously useful in financing Axis overseas espionage services. With enemy bank balances and security holdings frozen, hoarded currency affords a means of payment involving minimum risk of detection. So it is easy to understand why the Treasury is taking such extraordinary precautions to circumvent enemy use of hoarded dollars.

Council Of War

The presence in London of the heads of the Army and Navy air forces, the chief of the Service of Supply and other high ranking American military and naval officers has raised to new heights the recurrent hopes that a second land front in Europe will soon be established. This interpretation of the great Anglo-American council of war now taking place in the British capital may or may not be justified.

On the basis of pure logic alone there is undoubtedly much to be said for such a venture regardless of the risks it may involve. The establishment of a second land front would place the German army, weakened by a year of war in Russia, between the jaws of a giant nutcracker—with the Russians pressing on the Reich from the east and Russia's allies squeezing it from the west. But the responsible leaders, fully aware of all the facts of the situation, are alone in a position to determine whether the possible gains would be equal to the probable losses. Certainly with the shipping situation what it is, the invasion of the European continent from the west, useful as it might be on some grounds, might, by forcing a diversion of strength from other fronts to that new front, prove far less productive of benefits than many of the advocates imagine.

However, it is extremely doubtful if the presence in London of so impressive an American war mission would have been made known if the results of their discussions with the British were likely to be purely negative. It is certainly a fair assumption that this council of war is the prelude to action, and action on an ambitious scale. Indeed, the promise of such action has been made recently by such men as Prime Minister Churchill, Gen. George C. Marshall, the British air minister, Sir Archibald Sinclair, and many others. And its initial form has been revealed to the world in the devastating air raids carried out by the R. A. F. recently against such German cities as Luebeck, Rostock and Augsburg.

This aerial offensive against the Reich is certain to increase markedly this coming summer, and will certainly not be confined to the R. A. F. alone. Enthusiasts of air power are convinced that air action, if on a big enough scale, could ultimately cripple Germany, even without an invasion. Whether they are correct in their assumptions or not, it is clear that any weakening of German war power through the destruction of German factories, the dislocation of German transportation lines, and the forced division of the Luftwaffe between the Eastern Front and the West would make an ultimate invasion of the continent easier.

Sunset Symphonies

Those who have heard Washington's Water Gate symphony programs will be cheered to know that enough funds have been collected to assure a full series of concerts this summer. Newcomers may rest assured that a summer treat is in store for them. Gas rationing and the influx of new residents have encouraged more people than ever to use the public parks for relaxation. The summer symphonies will help them ward off the "galloping frustration" which is said to be the prime wartime disease of our Capital City. They afford an exquisite combination of soul refreshing music in a setting of great natural beauty. In rejoicing that these concerts will be presented, we must not forget, however, that the necessary sustaining fund goal has not been reached. Enjoyment of the summer program will be an added goad to make sure that next winter's season will be resumed.

Civilian War Effort

I cannot praise too highly the letter appearing in The Post signed "The Turning Worm." I heartily agree with the writer and would like to suggest that the movie, "Meet John Doe," be revived and some of these Government officials with an exalted idea of their own importance be made to see it and especially the dramatic end. Mob psychology is powerful, but if it becomes a boomerang it is dangerous even in a democracy.

The announcement over the radio, repeated every day at least once, "The War Production Board has ruled that you cannot get tooth paste or shave cream unless you bring an empty tube in exchange," burns me up and seems typical of the "screwball ideas" about which "Turning Worm" is peeved. If tin is really needed and must be saved in packaging various personal and household necessities—let the manufacturer substitute some other material for tin and turn in the raw material, or let the retail dealer ask for a cash deposit which will be returned when the empty tube is turned in. We still continue to cheerfully pay the deposit on bottles in which we get milk, ginger ale or other soft drinks. There is a certain self-discipline in that because we either take care that the bottle is not broken or mislaid or we forfeit the deposit.

And Red Cross knitting. People who cannot knit or who do not have the time to make a garment, take the wool and keep it and forget to turn in the finished garment or what is turned in is so poorly done that it must be ripped out and done over. The Government provides necessary clothing for the men in service so if this is merely for people to feel that they are doing something definite, such activities should be carefully supervised or their energy diverted to pressing needs in remedying social evils close at hand. Give Them Godspeed

One day last week a woman with a son on duty in the South Pacific stood on the corner of Connecticut Avenue and R Street watching a long, grim column of Army trucks laden with men and equipment roaring off to some port of embarkation. The men were cheering and waving to people on the street and to two girls awaiting a car on the landing platform. The pedestrians stared stolidly at these gallant boys without even lifting their hands in greeting, and the two girls indignantly turned their backs on those "fresh boys" whom they did not know. Only the mother of another such soldier waved and called "good luck and goodby" as truck after truck swept past.

What is the matter with America in general and our City of Washington in particular? Those lads, my good fellow citizens and modest maidens, are on their way to certain hardship, privation, war horrors; probable wounds; possible death, that you may continue to live sheltered lives, attend your silly cocktail parties, buy your unnecessary cigarettes and ridiculous hats. Would it have hurt your sophisticated dignities to wave one greeting to those homesick but dauntless men, bound God only knows whither and to what sacrifice—for us stay-at-homes? Wake up, Americans! Show those young patriots in every conceivable way that we do care for them and for what they are doing. "Kiss the boys goodby" if that is all you can do—metaphorically speaking—but give them a cheer and a God-speed on their perilous journey to a more perilous mission! They represent the true America! Before Lasting Peace

Due to the lack of the will of God being done on earth as it is in heaven, man—to whom the good God gave the earth, a beautifully rich, green pasture—has become, despite all of earth's abundance, poor, miserable and helpless. Peace is, we agree, a great need, but peace without victory, we should know by now, will never make for lasting peace among men. To obtain a lasting peace, we should contemplate it on the basis of equality before God, before the bar of justice and in the economic structure. Freedom without equality is a challenge to man who, according to both the old and new dispensation, is born free and equal, to rebel against a freedom that is hindered by prejudice and greed. The will of God could not be done in heaven if the angels, like poor earthly humans, divided themselves into groups and inner-groups such as democrats, communists, fascists and Nazis. Kindly words may assure man for a while that he is free, but only kindly actions and deeds manifested in the economic structure of a nation can convince a man that he is both free and equal before God and man. And this same principle, among nations, shall have to become a triumphant reality before the peace of the world shall hold together. HARRY DANIELS.

Wants Gasoline Facts

I do not have (and have not had) an "X" card. I do use my car in my business and transport two non-paying passengers (Government employes) daily. I am "peeved" about the gasoline rationing because:

1. I am informed, by what I believe to be a fully reliable source, that wells are only being pumped approximately 5 per cent and will have to close down unless the curtail is lifted;

2. That one department (Interior) favors a pipe line while another (I. C. C.) is doing everything possible to prevent it because of fear that the railroads will lose business;

3. That the size pipe advocated for the proposed pipe line can only be manufactured by one firm in the United States; (I wonder who the stockholders are.)

I have found the best way to secure all-out cooperation is to give the people you want cooperation from the full facts, cards on the table, face up.

Isn't it about time that bickering between bureaucratic departments and individuals cease and we are given the facts about gasoline, etc., placing dreams and "planned it that way" on the shelf for a while?

Auto Insurance Rates

Why don't auto insurance companies reduce the cost of accident insurance now that our mileage is greatly cut? Several big British auto insurance companies have reduced premiums 20 per cent.

Last year I drove 16,000 miles. This year I shall drive about 2000 miles. My chances of an accident are greatly diminished. Yet insurance rates are based on outdated risks, on schedules prepared when many more cars were on the highways than now. J. S. H.

P. U. C. Surprises

And so the city of taxation without representation is about to be further imposed upon by additional "surprises" to be sprung upon its inhabitants by the P. U. C. as announced in the columns of your newspaper.

Surprise, No. 1, relating to the alleged 7 square feet of space at present allowed, and allotted per capita, to the standers of its car riders about to be reduced to but 4 square feet. Every time the writer has been compelled to be a stander, at a fare of a dime, he has been forced to squeeze through an already formed dense wall of every variety of the human species, until further progress at the back of the car is a physical impossibility, and there caught, with these human bodies pressed against his own and jolted forward, back and sideways, their breath, coughs and sneezes, in his face, and further buffeted and pushed by those trying to get out and by those trying to get in. This is bad enough while the weather remains fairly cool. But how about it in insufferable heat? As it is, it is already a menace to health and endurance, and any further incursions, as contemplated seems to be a vital matter for the Board of Health to consider.

And how about the percentage of the aged and the physically disabled, so many of which are already finding difficulty in mounting the high steps of the two-step designed cars and buses—evidently designed for athletes?

Surprise, No. 2, on the part of the P. U. C. is the brilliant idea for the discomfort of passengers, reducing of the already too close space between seats, by adding four more, so that only the extremely short-legged shall escape from having sore and injured knees, to avoid which these not so favored by nature have to sit sideways, requiring more space between seats rather than less.

Ration System

No decent American minds making any essential sacrifice for the war effort. Of course that goes for gasoline. But every American will demand that his sacrifice be shared equally by every other American. Thus, holders of A gasoline allotment cards are not comforted by the fact that Price Administrator Henderson seems to think that gas rationing was a great success and that apparently he intends to do nothing very much about the thousands of cheats and chislers (and who doesn't know at least a dozen) who obtained high allotment cards to which they were not in the least entitled. Presumably, to make himself look good, Mr. Henderson proposes to let the illegal holders of B and X cards "get away with it" while the A card folk who tried to coooperate with his ill-conceived system bear the brunt of gasoline curtailment. If that is what Mr. Henderson has in mind, he knows little of human nature if he doesn't realize that public revulsion against the handling of the gas rationing system will seriously impair the effectiveness of any future rationing efforts. To Impress Pedestrians

Would not the additional detail relating to accidents in cases where pedestrians are struck by automobiles, prove beneficial?

"Crossing against signal."
"Crossing in middle of square."
"Crossing diagonally."

It might impress pedestrians with the risks incurred by disregarding regulations. K. S. C.

The Post Impressionist

San Diego Sunday

It was Monday morning, December 8, on Wake Island, and mess call had sounded. The men formed line and marched in to eat a hearty breakfast. That over, the smokes were lighted and the platoons and sections of the defense battalion snapped out of it and turned to. Each detail to its several stations.

The first squad in the first platoon, all big husky men answering to the names of Adams, Brown, Zabrisky, Olson, Johnson, Murphy, Schmidt, Plitt, Deccakos, Melody and Swing, who was the corporal. Sun-tanned they were two shades darker than the khaki they wore. Their home addresses and those of their next of kin were strung out from Pittsburgh to San Francisco and then down the coast of sunny California to San Diego.

The next of kin were most numerous in the last-named city where Point Loma jabs a finger at Old Mexico and the Old Spanish Light sticks up like a hitchhikers thumb to stand watch over sky-blue water. Coronado, North Island, the Strand, the destroyers, the city and harbor and home, blue sky over all.

Five of the men had wives and kids up above the Bay in Old Town and just about now they would be putting on the Sunday dinner.

After dinner the Johnson and Zabrisky kids would go out in the yard and play and Milly and Jo, their dishes done, would be out on the front porch that faced toward North Island to sit and talk about the men in the defense battalion out on Wake, for they would be missing them on Sunday and the conversation would be low-toned and tense in quality.

"Jim, I wonder how the kids and women folks are faring at dinner today," says Herm Zabrisky. "Hope they got our pay roll checks through so they could do their Saturday shopping O. K.," says Jim, and in two minutes they had other matters to think of and plenty to do.

The rockers had stopped their swaying on the front porch and Jo leaning over asks, "heard from Jim lately? Herman didn't have time to write anything when he sent the check I got yesterday."

"Had a letter from him Thursday," says Milly. "The Major has doubled the sentries and placed eight new lookout posts on the west end of the island. Three weeks ago when Kurusu went through on that clipper going east the major noticed him eyeing everything from the plane, and that night Pat started the men digging bomb-proofs and I guess it's been pick and shovel and wheelbarrow ever since."

"The boys can take it though," says Jo, "No time for them to cork off afternoons from now on out; you can't trust those Japs, they are only playing for time or else I'm a liar."

Says Milly almost in a whisper, "The major seems worried about planes though and so do all the other Jireens."

"Monday morning," says Jo, "tell you what I saw when I was hanging up the washing off the corner of the back porch. I'd just hung up the last one of Devvy's diapers and straightened up my blue bungalow apron to pin it on the line when I saw a V. P. Squadron take off heavy like on that westbound North Island runway. I'd of hollered to you, but I had my mouth full of clothespins."

"Bet that was the squadron they had been waiting for on Wake," says Milly.

"Tell you what let's do Milly. Let's put the Sunday clothes on the kids and go over to Ramona's old home and pitch pennies into that old wishing well out in the patio.

"I never was much for wishing, but I'll try it for once. You may have the range on something there Jo."

So Milly and her kids, Henry and Lou Ella and Joe pushing little Devvy in his buggy stepped gaily forth into the bright California sunshine in almost nothing flat and hot-footed the four blocks to the home that used to be Ramonas. They hurried in and back down the walk to the spring. The two children who had walked had trotted gaily along holding their mother's hand, and each being given a penny they scrambled up and hanging over the edge pitched their pennies in and watched them float down. The two mothers dropped theirs, and the score was even—two heads, two tails.

"Now Devvy, take your penny and do like we did for mama," says Jo.

Well, Devvy had four nice white shiny teeth with more on the way, and he said "uh, uh," and began to drool. He spit all over the face of Mr. Lincoln, and then straight in his mouth he shoved the penny.

"No, no," says Jo, "Give mamma the penny, Devvy."

Devvy reached into his mouth, said "yah, yah," and threw the penny crazily so that it hit the wall of the spring, ricocheted and hit the water spinning and drifting down, landing face upward at the bottom.

They all let out a whoop of joy and loudest of the whoops was Devvy's.

"I wish papa was here; it's fun," said Henry.

"I wish Corporal Swing would bring me some lollypops this afternoon," said Lou Ella. Devvy nearly fell into the well as he struggled in his mother's arms and reached downward toward the pennies, and on his penny it seemed a broad whole-souled smile beamed up at them all from the face of the backwoods baby of Kentucky, the man known and loved by the good angels who watch over us all.

On Wake Island it was a busy day and taps. CHARLES H. WRIGHT.

Smokes For Yanks

Anent the drive, "Smokes for the Yanks," which is being waged, I notice by the newspaper a huge quantity has been accumulated. A similar movement was in operation during World War ., yet it is a notorious fact, that nothwithstanding the "smokes" had been bought and paid for before being sent "over there," the Yanks had to dig down in their "jeans," and pay again for them.

It is to be hoped steps will be taken to prevent a similar situation.

Brazilian Defense

Protecting Strategic War Materials

INTENSIFIED SUBMARINE warfare in New World waters, Mexico's swift move toward war and Brazil's increasingly energetic answers to Axis sinkings underline a series of recent warnings by President Roosevelt and others that the Second World War has yet to spread. When you realize that Brazil's bulge is no farther from Africa than San Francisco is from Houston, Tex., the possibility of an Axis attack there is obvious. Japan is invading at greater distances.

But Natal is as close to Africa as Dakar is to Brazil, and the airports that Pan American Airways has built from Miami southward, by way of San Juan, Trinidad and Belem, to Natal, for the hop over to Africa and across it are big ports. The stream of planes that has been ferrying over this route for months can grow to 500 a month—bombers and fighters for the Middle East, North Africa and Russia. To date, Brazil's nearness to Africa is a decided asset for the United Nations.

Brazil's wide range of natural resources includes a list of strategic materials that count heavily in today's battle of production and supply. It is the world's fifth producer of manganese, challenged for hemispheric leadership only by Cuba. It is the New World's only titanium exporter. Fifty per cent of our beryllium imports come from Brazil. It is the most promising New World source of strategic sheet mica and the only hemisphere source of industrial diamonds.

Brazil produces the worlds' only commercial supply of high-grade quartz crystal, absolutely essential in making radios, depth-sounding and range-finding devices, submarine and plane detectors, periscopes and gun sights, to name a few uses. Axis buyers stocked quartz crystal heavily for years until cut off by embargo in mid-1941.

The United States Metals Reserve Corporation has been buying all Brazil's strategic surpluses since June, 1941. The country can produce more than it can move to ports or ship. Seventeen engines, 1000 cars and quantities of rails have been bought from us, financed in part by an Export-Import Bank loan.

Brazilian vegetable oils and fibers are increasingly substituting for critical materials cut off in the Southwest Pacific. Premium prices on rubber are in force to stimulate production in the Amazon Valley. Brazil is shipping millions of pounds of cotton canvas and thousands of pounds of canned beef to the United Nations' armies.

Brazil depends on us for coal, semimanufactured metals, machinery, automobiles, drugs and other supplies necessary to its economy.

Brazil's population, mining and industry are concentrated on the coast below the bulge, and a foothold at Natal would be of great value to the Axis in cutting off this exchange of supplies, if for no other reason. Brazil knows where its life lines run, however, and has been quietly building bigger army posts at Belem, San Luis, Natal, Aracaju and San Salvador, all around the strategic bulge. A group of islands 200 miles off Natal is being extensively fortified.

Brazil has had compulsory military training since 1908 and its reserves include, roughly, all its able-bodied men. As a military factor in hemisphere defense, however, Brazil's army should not be judged only on its number. Our foreign policy since Monroe commits us to aid in repelling invasion from Europe, and an extensive new body of inter-American agreements and practical arrangements for a common hemisphere defense assures that Brazil will not have to meet the thrust alone. In face of the Axis technique of attempting to upset countries from within as a prelude to conquest, the Brazilian army's mission as guarantor of internal stability is as important as that of national defense. Here numbers are no clew.

In this connection, these factors are paramount: In a nation that has strong sectionalisms, the Brazilian army, an organization essentially national in scope, has come to think in terms of national rather than states' interests. It has consistently backed the Vargas government, which is governing on national lines, as opposed to sectionalism. It has actively supported Vargas through a rebellion and two attempted coups, one of them Fascist-inspired.

PART of the Vargas program has been to enlarge the army from 1930's 50,000 to more than 100,000 men. Technical schools have been doubled, barracks modernized and numerous "military villages" put up. Capacity of existing supply factories has been doubled, and six new ones built. We have Army, Navy and Air missions in Brazil and motor and mechanized equipment is moving southward.

Brazil's army is hard-working and keen. It has a notable record of national service in building much-needed roads, railroads and airports in recent years. The strategic value of this work increases every day.

Reserves were called out in strategic areas soon after Pearl Harbor. In Sao Paulo I saw young Brazilians who cannot be spared from day-time jobs taking military instruction on the public square at 10 p. m. They appeared well trained.

Brazil's air force is undergoing rapid expansion. Two hundred military pilots flew over 2 million kilometers of air-mail routes in 1941. A law requiring commercial companies to use Brazilian crews has built up an additional reserve. Three hundred flying cadets are in training at Rio. Brazil has over 1000 sportsman-pilots. The air force has received 30 bombers and other equipment from us.

The sinking of an Axis submarine off Brazil by a United States plane and aid given a Brazilian freighter by a United States patrol ship reveal close cooperation between United States and Brazilian forces in coast defense. Brazil has two battleships, two cruisers, four submarines and four destroyers. Nine additionall destroyers are builidng in Brazilian shipyards.

Brazil's merchant fleet is the hemisphere's fourth largest. Purchase of 14 American ships brought total national tonnage to half a million in 1940. Eight Italian ships were acquired in 1941, four Danish vessels more recently. Six Brazilian ships have gone down and a seventh has been attacked. Brazil has impounded Axis funds for indemnity for these sinkings. The public reaction has been one of extreme anger.

Internal threats against Brazil arise from large German and Japanese populations. Brazil's 250,000 Japanese, about twice the number we have, live mainly in the district around Sao Paulo. The Japanese government encouraged their migration there in the early 1930s to give Japan a source of cheap cotton. They are farmers and servants. At present it is understood that they are under orders from Tokyo to keep still. Beyond spying and sabotage, it is difficult to see what they could do. Brazilian authorities have placed heavy guard at such vital points as the big Cubatao power plant, source of electricity for the great Sao Paulo industrial region.

THE RATIO of German population in Brazil to total population is far lower than in this country, but Brazil's million or more native and immigrant Germans have not been so well assimilated as have ours. The great majority live in the southern state of Santa Catalina, below Sao Paulo. Though most of them are pro-Nazi in sentiment, observers agree that they would hesitate to risk their comfortable position in Brazil's national life unless Hitler were very obviously winning. Over a year ago police drove active plotters to cover and many agents are now in concentration camp on the Ilha das Flores at Rio.

Only last week the Brazil government by establishing a strict control on operations in American dollars within Brazil cut across one of the last remaining pipe lines that the Axis had to Brazil, the power to buy strategic materials through unscrupulous agents who were supplied with American dollars out of the great pool that exists in Europe.

When I was in southern Brazil in December the German-populated sections from which revolt might possibly be feared were heavily garrisoned by Brazilian troops from distant parts of the country. Opinion is that the Nazis would start something there if they could. But it is difficult to see how they could get very far unless Brazil's whole internal situation were breaking up.

At the present the whole trend in Brazil is toward a strengthening rather than a weakening of the internal situation. This trend and the war's effect on it is one of the most significant situations in Latin America today.

History Lesson

By Crane Brinton

Divide And Rule

THERE ARE two old sayings about history which contradict each other very neatly—that history repeats itself, and that all we can learn from history is that we can learn nothing from history. Actually both sayings are nonsense. The complex events we call human history certainly do not repeat themselves with the exactness and simplicity of the phases of the moon or eclipses of the sun, and cannot therefore be predicted in the same way. But to say that we can learn nothing from history because each event, each individuality is unique and unpredictable would be to take leave of common sense. Every "practical" man—farmer, broker, engineer—guides himself by certain expectations based on his experience—that is, on a small fragment of history.

For events on a bigger scale, history does at least supply a sort of form sheet. It will not enable even the most skillful and learned historian of modern times to predict the fate of a single battle, or a single campaign. But a knowledge of history will at least give reasonable grounds for predicting the ultimate result of such a struggle as that in which we are now engaged.

EXPERIENCE—or history—shows that the St. Louis Browns may beat the New York Yankees in a single game. The Browns might even win a series with the Yankees. But over a whole season what we call the odds are very heavy indeed in favor of the Yankees. History shows that the Yankees have finished ahead of the Browns in season after season. True, things might change: the Browns might become a stronger and richer club and the Yankees a weaker and poorer club. But the point is that something new, something obviously different, would have to be brought into the situation.

As things stand, the Allied Nations are a pretty sure long-run victor, though, of course, that victory may be long-delayed, and will certainly be hard-won. In its broad outlines, the current situation is by no means new. An aggressor, Germany, is trying to defeat and swallow up other hitherto independent nations. She has already partly succeeded in this aim, and has acquired in the process a couple of rather distrustful allies, Italy and Japan, and some minor hangers-on like Hungary and Rumania. But by and large the rest of the threatened nations—and this means nowadays not just Europe, but the whole world—have joined together against Germany. Counting the governments in exile and the South American republics as well as the nucleus of the coalition, the United States, the British Empire, Russia and China, the nations enlisted against the Axis have an overwhelming advantage in population, wealth, resources of all kinds. They ought to win.

Ever since the end of the Middle Ages saw the emergence of true, modern nation-states, such coalitions have always succeeded, in the long run, in beating the ambitious aggressors. Otherwise the nations of the world as we know them would not be what they are today. For Charles V of Austria and Spain, Louis XIV and Napoleon I of France, William II of the second German Reich, have all had their try at what we may frankly call world-dominion. Certainly at first sight there is nothing novel enough in Hitler's bid for world-dominion to turn the odds in his favor. The odds are still on the coalition, on the many to beat the few—as long as the many really stick together, as long as the coalition really coalesces.

As long as the many really stick together . . . History shows clearly that one of the main reasons why the aggressor nations have come so close to success in the past lies in the failures of those attacked to stick together. Indeed the one aggressor nation that ever did build an empire out of a large part of the civilized white world worked deliberately to keep its opponents divided. Ancient Roman statesmen for generations followed the famous maxim divide et impera, divide and rule. But most instructive on this point is the experience of the world with Napoleon, who was, until Hitler, by all means the most successful aggressor in modern times.

The record is clear. Beginning with the miraculous victory of the French revolutionary armies at Valmy in 1792 and continuing under the leadership of Napoleon, the aggressive, inventive, unscrupulous and ambitious French made a most remarkable bid for control of Europe, and through Europe the world. Just as the Nazis now talk of a "New Order," so the imperial French used to talk of a "New System" and Napoleon, at St. Helena, regretted the "peace and order I dreamed of for Europe." By 1810 the map of Europe looked as if the French were going to be successful. Imperial France itself was swollen by the direct annexation of Belgium, Holland, the entire North Sea coast of Germany, large parts of northern Italy, and the coast of what is now Jugoslavia. Under Napoleon's own relatives were the rest of Italy, Spain and central and southern Germany. The little countries of Switzerland and Scandinavia were client states of France. Prussia and Austria, beaten and cowed, were allied with the Emperor of France, an alliance on the part of Austria recently cemented by the marriage of the Hapsburg princess, Marie Louise, with Napoleon, whose origin, if not socially quite as low as Hitler's, was certainly far from royal. Russia, though not as much subdued as Austria and Prussia, was nonetheless, in 1810, an ally of France. If you except Turkey, which hardly counted as European in those days, the French were masters of the whole of continental Europe. Only Great Britain, saved by the 21 miles of the Channel, lay outside the triumphant Napoleonic "system." The French were never able to gain on sea the sort of supremacy they won on land.

NOW at the one time or another during the 20 years before the disastrous French expedition to Moscow in 1812, every single one of the nations beaten or browbeaten into the Napoleonic "system" had actually been at war with the French, some of them several times. But until the collapse of Napoleon's grand army in the retreat from Moscow, these nations had never once all stood together against the French. Historians commonly list four or five partial coalitions before the "Grand Coalition" of 1813-1814, which finally did the job of putting an end to the menace of France. The history of these partial and hence ineffective coalitions is always the same: jealousies between the constituent members, divided councils, willingness to listen to French blandishments, desire to gain at the expense of other members of the coalition, by a separate peace or even by an alliance with the common enemy, France. Here is one concrete instance among many. Prussia and Austria, both "German" powers, were so jealous one of the other that, though both were allied against revolutionary France in 1794, and had armies side by side in the Rhineland against France, each commonly set out sentries on all sides for fear of attack by the other. Naturally France found it easy to buy Prussia off in a separate peace in 1795, leaving Austria almost alone on the continent against the French. So, in 1805, Prussia, offered Hanover by Napoleon as a reward for abstention, stayed out of the coalition against the French. Then, after Austerlitz had eliminated the Austrian army, Napoleon turned against lone Prussia, beat her in the debacle of Jena, and deprived her not only of Hanover, but of half of her old territory. It was very simple, and might have gone on until the "system" was established, had not Moscow given Europe courage to get together and stick together.

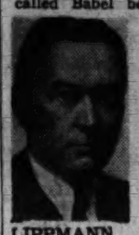
Hitler will go the way of Napoleon and other conquerors unless he produces something new, something they did not have. In spite of what alarmists and prophets of doom have claimed, it does not seem that the Germans have any new method of war, any monopolized weapon, any other material magic that the Allied Nations cannot also use. It does not look as if Hitler's Germans had the gift of making themselves liked by those they conquer, so that the nations voluntarily accept the "New Order." Indeed, in a positive sense the Germans seem rather poor psychologists, quite unable to win over beaten peoples. But the great weapon of Napoleon they have certainly used with skill; in a negative sense they know admirably how to divide. And if they can divide us long enough, they can perhaps learn to make their rule acceptable. If they can play upon such feelings of hostility, dormant or active, as unquestionably exist among their present enemies, if they can sharpen American distrust of Britain, British distrust of America, Irish hatred for their former oppressors, conservative Western fears of Bolshevik Russia, Russian grievances against British Tories—well, the list could be discouragingly long—if they can excite these disruptive forces more successfully than our leaders can quiet such forces, then indeed Hitler may do what no one since the Romans has done for more than a few years; divide and rule. For us the lesson is painfully clear; we must all stick together against Hitler, even if we find some parts of the sticking hard and unpleasant.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Explain It Clearly

OF WASHINGTON talking about gas and rubber it may be said that "the name thereof was called Babel because there the language of the whole earth was confounded." There is no need for all this confusion. It is true, as the Truman committee points out, that it had to go to seven separate agencies to find out about the rubber program. But if it takes seven agencies to deal with the problem—and considering its complexity it may take that many—there is no reason why the seven of them, not to mention the White House when the President is in a playful mood, have to emit separate streams of speeches, interviews, and publicity releases.



LIPPMANN

Since these seven agencies must work together, it is not asking for miracles to suggest that Messrs. Nelson, Jones, Ickes, Eastman, Henderson, Perkins, and Wickard should lock themselves in a room, and stay there living on bread and water until they have agreed on what they are going to ask the people to do about gas and rubber. When they have made up their minds, which ought not to be too difficult, it would not be beneath their dignity, nor would it deprive any of them of their inalienable rights of free speech, if they issued one combined report on the facts and one combined announcement of the Government's policy. For while we are fighting a seven-ocean war, we just haven't the time and energy to struggle with seven publicity machines on the subject of why, with our rubber supply lost to Japan and our Atlantic tankers sunk or driven to port, we cannot go joy-riding as usual.

IT IS no flattery to say that the American people are intelligent enough to understand this problem, and decent enough to do their duty cheerfully when they know what it is. Once it is explained to him, any man who cannot understand the problem is not bright enough to be allowed to operate an automobile; and any man who cheats, when he has been told what is needed, is morally unfit to operate an automobile.

There is no doubt whatever that most of the people will do their part voluntarily, and that they will also compel the minority who for one reason or another are not yet housebroken. Washington has only to remember that "except ye utter by the tongue words easy to be understood, how shall it be known what is spoken? For ye shall speak into the air."

AND THIS reminds us of Congress and that it has a part to play in explaining the problem to the people. The Truman Committee of the Senate has just issued a report based on a long inquiry The first business of Congress is to make up its mind whether the findings of the Truman Committee are correct. If the findings are correct, then Congress has the data needed for making up its mind whether the Administration policy on gas and rubber rationing is sound and adequate. It would then be very desirable if every Senator and Representative made it his business to explain to his own constituents, and as necessary to keep on explaining, the whys and wherefores of the rationing.

IT SEEMS to me, for example, that Senator Vandenberg of Michigan would be doing the work of a United States Senator if, when he himself has studied the problem, he went back to Michigan and explained it to the people of Michigan. That would be better than confusing his constituents by telling them that there are "selfish Eastern demands" for "unnecessary and unwarranted" measures to conserve rubber in Michigan.

For surely representative Government should be a two-way and not a one-way affair. A Senator or a Representative should speak not only for his constitutents but to them as well. So it would be a great service, and highly appreciated, if the Congressmen would do what no Office of Facts and Figures can hope to do, if they would take upon themselves the task of explaining the complicated war measures to the people back home. They authorize these measures. They can find out all about them. They are supposed to understand them, and they can know better than any Administration official or any public relations expert in Washington just what troubles and puzzles the people back home.

THE CONSERVATION of rubber in the country as a whole, and of gas and oil in the Eastern area, is a simple duty which has to be performed by the people themselves. It is easy to explain. It does not require a working knowledge of butadiene and styrene and polymerization and catalytic cracking to make everybody understand why our rubber supply must be scrupulously and rigorously saved up for the absolute necessities of the war.

Reply To An Alibi

This is the season of garden and landscaping trials and tribulations. And those folk who have been having trouble with the landscape gardener who uses the old-time "you-didn't-water-it-enough" alibi should take a tip from Elmer Twitchell.

When a landscape gardener sprang this alibi on Elmer, Mr. Twitchell replied heatedly: "Your conclusion is 100 per cent false. I watered that shrub so faithfully that, if it died from anything, it died from lack of swimming lessons."

Hitch-Hikers, Arise!

Hi—Wanna champion a great cause? I am a hitch-hiker. It looks like a terrible summer. And has anybody thought to do something to lighten the blow so far as I am concerned? Nuh!

Start the ball rolling and see if you can get Leon Henderson or somebody to classify hitch-hikers and give them A, B and X cards. An idea, yes?

I think an A card enough for most hitch-hikers. Here and there you will find a thumber who deserves a B card. Me? I want an X. HITCHIE.

Dear Hi—How come that not one of your bicycle fans has mentioned the Queen of the Roads? I refer to the extra-super-de-luxe-stream-lined-16-cylinder Luthy Special. There was a wheel as was a wheel. She was deep cerise in color, with nickel reinforcements at all joints of the frame and down along the forks. The cranks were S-shaped and she was geared up to 92. Looked as though she was doing 40 miles an hour standing still.

Back home there were only three Luthys in town. The agent had one. Eddie Morgan had one and I rode the other. What a wheel! C. B. FRENCH.

Rules Of Civilized Warfare

IT WILL BE hard for Americans to unlearn some civilized affectations which developed out of sportsmanship, itself an artificial thing, but the sooner we understand as a people and a Nation that there is nothing but our own inhibitions to restrain us from the use of methods we abhor the sooner we will come to evens with the enemy. Our fastidious etiquette in boxing or fist-fighting illustrates the case.

PEGLER

From Camp Meade, Md., comes word of a man who has been mentioned several times recently as a master and teacher of all the dirty tricks that a reasonably strong and agile man with two hands and feet is capable of. Francois Eliscu, described as professor of physical education at New York and Columbia Universities, has been teaching a group of student officers to make use of all their physical equipment, aside from their military weapons, in personal combat and his problem first would seem to me to be to strike off the sentimental handcuffs which restrict Americans and Britons and their offshoots to the observance of a code.

Only after that he may proceed with his instructions.

AMERICANS, by instinct, refrain from kicking in a fight because, according to the code it is not the sporting thing to do. Neither do we scratch, bite, knee, gouge or tramp on the face or abdomen of a man when he is down or clout a potential and probable enemy first lick with a bottle while his hands are at his sides except in the very lowest, and highest saloons. These are false restraints which should be reserved only for formal tests of skill under sporting conditions in which it is understood that rules apply and that he who violates the same is a cad, egad. But that is not fighting and in fighting a man should be allowed, indeed expected, to do his best to win.

Boxing, according to the code and the tradition that hampers all Americans in their rare encounters, is not an effective way of fighting. I knew a flyweight Frenchman who was dying of a wasting disease, the trainer of a team of national amateur French boxing champions, who could lick any man on his squad, including the heavyweight, with an agile kick in the face or blow of the foot, as he called it. This boxing with blows of the foot used to be a recognized sport in France, and many a Frenchman's chin was deftly nudged around to the back of his neck in contests of the kind, but this method has its limitations, too. It forbade the use of the hands which are good weapons, after all, and should be used freely in smooth collaboration with the feet and knees.

Mr. James J. (Square Guy) Johnston, the New York fight manager, once seized a heavyweight friend by the lapels during an argument, and loosened the other's front teeth by battering him repeated blows of great rapidity on the mouth with his skull. The stranglehold, forbidden in wrestling under sporting conditions, should not be rejected and, in open country, the soldier who can find a sizable rock within reach surely serves himself and his country ill if he refrains from tapping a German or Jap stoutly on the skull with same merely because something whispers that it isn't done.

GERMANS in the other war reintroduced the studded war club, as an emphatic and silent weapon which it was until the adoption of the steel helmet, which, of course, rang like a gong and tended to deaden impact. The use of this silencer showed, however, that the Germans had not lost sight of the central idea of fighting, which is to fight and mind no rules but those for safety.

The boxer is pathetic in his restraints and postures in a fight with a man of equal strength operating all-out as the British say. Will Evans, the old American League umpire, learned that one day in Washington, when a challenge passed in a dispute with Ty Cobb, who also fought with abandon and only to win.

Meeting Cobb under the stands after the game according to appointment, Evans, an excellent boxer, struck a picture-attitude and Cobb grabbed him by the necktie, yanked him off balance, drummed his head against a stanchion and won so quickly that Evans had to read about it in the Police Gazette to learn how it happened.

As to diplomacy and international relations I shrink from advising my betters, but as to the rules of civilized warfare, I would adjure them that these exist only in the books and in the imagination of naive civilians. If there is any weapon, however inhuman, that the United States could use to win this war today but isn't using out of respect for the opinions of the Germans, the Japs or posterity, whether the same be gas, fire or any pestilence that could be confined to the enemy, we are victims of over-civilization.

The Germans and Japanese will use any weapon or method which they think will win the war and I trust that we will too. Afterward, of course, we should say they used it first.

D. C. Youth Wins Honors at Parade At West Point

A Washington youth, James B. Newman 3d, was among 15 cadets honored yesterday during the annual Star Parade at the United States Military Academy, it was announced last night.

Young Newman received three awards—a wrist watch, presented by the National Commandery, Military Order of Foreign Wars of the United States, for the highest rating in economics and government; a set of books, presented by the Ladies' Auxiliary, Veterans of Foreign Wars, for the highest rating in ordnance and gunnery, and another set of books presented by the American Bar Association for the highest rating in law.

Rent Ceilings Effective June 1, Landlords Warned

The Office of Price Administration served notice yesterday that rent ceilings would become effective in 20 industrial areas June 1. It said voluntary compliance thus far had been insufficient and warned that unless landlords cooperated, Federal action would be taken to enforce the ceilings.

The 20 rent ceiling areas were notified March 2 to put the ceilings in effect June 1.

In 14 areas, rents were ordered restored to the level of April 1, 1941; four were set back to the level of January 1, 1941, and two to July 1, 1941.

Resident Author Solves Puzzle of Strange Word

Miss Havron Traces History of Cryptic 'Juke;' Feminine Unit to Take Over the Lobbies; Items of News and Gossip of the Theater

SO YOU'VE BEEN WONDERING where the word "juke" came from?

So have we. So have many others, including the Warner Brothers functionaries responsible for the production of "Juke Girl," in which Ann Sheridan, Ronald Reagan, Richard Whorf, Alan Hale, Gene Lockhart, Fuzzy Knight, et al, will be opening on the screen at the Earle tomorrow.

ANN SHERIDAN

Hearing of their perplexity, Miss Laurie Havron, Washington author of "Hurricane Hush," a novel with a Florida background, came to the rescue with a wealth of information turned up on the subject by her research for her book. Wish we could have arranged it to be present at the informal huddle with the drama desks, but a little of the pith of Miss Havron's disclosures has penetrated to this column, anyway.

In her book, Miss Havron explains how the word first appeared in the English language and how to pronounce it.

"In the first place," says she, "the word 'juke' is not slang. It dates back to pre-Revolutionary days and is of African origin. It was born in the turpentine camps of the deep South, where the gathering of the gum was done by African slave labor. They were in the process of learning to translate their tribal language into English. 'Juke' is a name the slave turpentine workers gave to a public-house maintained in the camps for Negroes. The name stuck.

"But with the abolition of slavery, the house and the word fell into the discard. However, it remains a part of the language of the turpentine hands in the deep South to this day. When repeal brought back liquor, the name 'juke' was resurrected and applied to the little roadhouses that lined the highways. From Florida, it gradually spread all over the country.

"That's the origin of the word. The correct spelling is j-u-k-e, pronounced to rhyme with 'took' or 'look.' In the deep South, we call them 'juke-joints.'"

So now you know.

Once the national drive of the theaters for the sale of United States War Bonds and Stamps gets in motion this weekend, it is going to require a pretty tough fiber of sales resistance to avoid buying—if anybody wants to. The D. C. unit of the American Women's Voluntary Services will handle the actual sale of the issues in motion picture lobbies throughout the Capital, come Saturday. Headed by Anita Phipps, president of the District of Columbia Unit, these voluntary workers thus will make a very real contribution to the war effort. Those who will wish to scramble to patronize so charming a sales force, need not hesitate because they haven't the cash in their pockets, handbags, hatbands, stockingtops, or wherever. Special pledge blanks will be available, which, when signed, will call for collection of the bond money at a later date. All Washington theaters are cooperating in this drive, under the D. C. co-chairmanship of John J. Payette, of the Warner Brothers, and Carter T. Barron, of Loew's, Inc.

Another Notable Nibbles

Sam Zimbalist, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer producer, responsible for the film version of Steinbeck's "Tortilla Flat" and other successful films, paused in town long enough yesterday afternoon to be snacked by the Loew interests at a cocktail party in the Carlton at 5:30 by the clock. That being the zero hour for this department on any day, especially Wednesday, we are unable to pass along even a faint transcript of the Zimbalist profundities. What we do know, however, is that "Tortilla Flat" will be coming along to the screen at Loew's Palace in the wake of "My Gal Sal," and with Spencer Tracy, Hedy Lamarr and John Garfield in the costellar roles. If it is a fraction as diverting as the Steinbeck novelette, that will be good enough. Since Mr. Zimbalist made it, the business seems to take on all of the contours of a forgone conclusion.

Summer is now official, by one infallible sign, if not by the almanac, Marshall Hall Park, famous playground down the Potomac, will open for the season on Saturday, Memorial Day. On that day and daily thereafter, the Wilson Line Streamliner Mount Vernon will make regular trips to the popular resort at 10 a. m., and 2 p. m., with a stopover on the nightly moonlight cruise, leaving the wharf at 8:30 p. m.

Catholic University's production of the Leo Brady-Walter Kerr-Ann Ronell topical revue, "Count Me In," just as Washington so enthusiastically proclaimed upon its recent opening on the campus, is "in" for Broadway. It will be produced on the "big time" by no less a master of such things than George Abbott. The Messrs. Brady and Kerr were in conference with him yesterday in New York, smoothing out the final details. The money is in the bank, the cast is being assembled and the piece is beginning to roll. Congratulations all over again to Father Gilbert V. Hartke and all concerned.

Happy Hunting Ground for a Song

Hollywood, Calif., May 27. California's original Indian natives will finally own a last resting place after many years of litigation. Tribes from all over the West will gather at the Auburn Reservation, near Sacramento, July 4, for a great patriotic meeting and to celebrate acquisition of the deed to the Os Sut Burial Grounds. And all through the kindness and sympathy of Bing Crosby.

BING CROSBY

When Bing heard that the tribe was about to lose its ancient burial ground through the sale of an estate, he started doing something about it, and negotiations were carried on through the Rev. Harold Robertson, Baptist missionary, and Father Hynes, Catholic pastor at Auburn. Royalties from Bing's record, "Silent Night," paid for the land.

The cemetery originally was the place where the tribe burned its dead. And in a pit 40 feet beneath the surface are urns containing the ashes of some big chiefs and warriors. Among them are Ma Zug, the general who commanded the Os Sut army which defeated and routed an early invasion of California by Washoes and Piutes from the East, and Oy Te, the chief who signed a treaty for the tribe with the United States Government in 1855.

Reginald Denny, doing a scene for "Sherlock Holmes," came out with his thickest British accent, and Director John Rawlins said, "Come now, Reg, you're not supposed to have attended both Oxford and Cambridge!"

Teresa Wright is going to produce, direct and photograph a picture called "My Honeymoon." She'll make a complete record of her honeymoon with Writer Niven Busch.

Samuel Goldwyn, meanwhile, is looking for another story to co-star Teresa and Gary Cooper, when Bob Hope's picture is finished. "Washington Story," the present title of the Hope film, won't be used, but "He Led With His Chin" might be.

Harry Carey took a day off to help his son celebrate his twenty-first birthday. Way the men celebrated was helping a neighbor brand a flock of cattle. Son, incidentally, is Army-bound.

Since Paramount discovered Anne Shirley's neat gams and is publicizing them plenty in "Lady Bodyguard," she'll really need a bodyguard.

Disney Buys 'Bongo'

Hollywood, May 27 (INS).—Don't believe those stories that Walt Disney is calling off his feature-length cartoons for the duration. On the contrary, he has bought Sinclair Lewis' Nobel Prize-winning short story, "Bongo," which appeared in Cosmopolitan Magazine several years ago. It will follow "Bambi" into production.

WALT DISNEY

"Bongo" is the story of a little bear born in a honky-tonk carnival. He never saw any other bears until a railroad wreck threw him into his natural environment. Of course, the "city slicker," Bongo, has a lot to learn about roughing it, much to the disgust of the mountain bears. Can't you just imagine what Disney will do, turned loose with this cute comedy material?

Ida Lupino again is well enough to think about pictures and a movie she will soon be asked to discuss—"The Horn Blows at Midnight"—nothing to do with "Capt. Horatio Hornblower," C. S. Forrester or Arthur of the Hornblow family. On the contrary, it is a comedy by Jacques Thery, author of "Joan of Paris" and "Love and Kisses Caroline." Mark Hellinger, who has lined this up as one of his coming Warner movies, feels Lupino is particularly well adapted to comedy and so he has asked for her in this movie.

Not only did Franchot assure me there isn't a word of truth in the talk but he said he may sign a term contract at Paramount and, if so, hopes to do a movie with his pretty blonde bride. The contract calls for Tone to make four Para pictures within the next two years. Incidentally, this is his first contract deal since he parted with M-G-M. Hear tell M-G-M also wants Franchot and it's a tess-up between the two companies.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Now that Ethel Butterworth has married Ernie Heyn, friends in Hollywood look to see Charlie Butterworth wed Lois Earl, Pasadena socialite; Betty Grable goes into the hospital again for another wisdom tooth operation; Baroness Rumberg is the house guest of the Walter Pidgeons; Jerry Wald has offered Buddy De Sylva a job to play himself in the Marilyn Miller opus.

Edmond O'Brien and Michele Morgan have discovered each other; Judy Canova broke her finger doing an eccentric dance for "Lazybones." She says all the Red Cross experts on the set were delighted because they could practice on her; Tommy Noonan, Tyrone Power's stand-in and friend, goes into the Army about the time Ty goes into the Navy.

Broadway Bulletins

New York, May 27.

When Groucho Marx returns to Broadway in a play which George S. Kaufman will produce he will forego his desire to appear henceforth only in clean-shaven roles. Groucho believed that he could be just as well known without his painted moustache—but that belief was shattered recently when the Hollywood Caravan went to the White House. Every star in the traveling troupe had been supplied with an invitation card, which was to be presented at the door. Groucho wanted to keep his card as a memento. When the White House guard asked for the card Marx told him: "I'm Groucho Marx" . . . "Your card, please," the guard persisted . . . "But I'm Groucho Marx," was the protest . . . "Oh, no, you're not," said the guard. "Groucho has a mustache."

Margaret Sanger, founder of the birth control movement in this country, has a new granddaughter. The baby's name will be Margaret Sanger . . . The W. C. Fields sequence, which was cut out of Boris Morros' "Tales of Manhattan" because the picture is two long, will be released as a movie short. It shows Fields as an itinerant preacher against alcoholism . . . Rex Tugwell returned to New York last weekend . . . Clark Gable is going to Washington for a conference about his next picture . . . Gasless Sundays will be introduced here on July 1. Except in emergency cases, automobile operators will be asked to forego using their cars on Sundays. Police patrols will help keep the pleasure drivers off the roads.

Spyras Skouras, the new head of Twentieth Century-Fox, went to Washington the other night to receive the official approval of a new caravan to troupe the country . . . It will be composed of American and British war heroes, together with a group of movie stars who now are in the service and who will add a glamour note to he caravan . . . Among those who are expected to be included in this Heroes Cavalcade will be Jimmy Doolittle, Lieut. John Bulkley, Lieut. Comdr. Eddie O'Hare, Corpl. Meyer Levin, who was Colin Kelly's bombardier, and the British fliers who recently scored torpedo hits against the Nazi cruiser.

The speech which Adolf Berle wrote for the convention of the Affiliated Young Democrats was lost in transit. The convention is over, but the speech hasn't been found as yet . . . Paul Lukas, who wagered that he wouldn't appear in the movie version of "Watch on the Rhine," will return to New York for two weeks, after the show closes, and then go to Hollywood to appear in the movie . . . In return for permitting Gary Cooper to work in Paramount's "For Whom the Bell Tolls," Sam Goldwyn obtained the services of Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour for two pictures. Harry Kurnitz is writing the screen plays for the latter films.

Letter from Saroyan: "As soon as this letter is finished I shall begin to write a new play, the second since I left Hollywood. I've got a couple of good characters. The man is a philosopher. He carries a baseball bat because the streets are full of soldiers and he's not sure he oughtn't to be ready for an emergency, too. Finally, a curve is pitched from the entrance of a saloon and he hits a home run with the bases full. While he's running the bases he trips over a young woman who is enjoying an afternoon nap. They get up together and go on running the bases, bringing in two runs instead of one. Then he makes friends with an eagle. Man, what a play."

Moss Hart will begin casting the road company for "Junior Miss" this week. For the title role of the 14-year-old, which is being played on Broadway by the recently married Patricia Peardon, Hart vows: "We're going to start with a married woman, and have no nonsense about it" . . . When the Pulitzer Prize play committee didn't select "Life With Father" for the award three years ago, one of Howard Lindsay's friends bet that the play would last longer than the Pulitzer committee. This year the committee failed to make its annual play award—and "Life With Father" is still running. "You may win," Lindsay told his betting friend at the Stork Club last night. "They're getting discouraged."

David Selznick and Leland Hayward discussed the war in the Pacific, and the distance between San Francisco and Manila. They disagreed about that distance and made wagers . . . Both men appealed to Mervyn Leroy—who had sailed around the world—to settle the bet . . . Leroy began to tabulate: "Let's see, now . . . Wake Island . . . Guam . . ." He wrote some figures on a piece of paper, added them together and announced the sum—"35,000 miles."

Lucky Dog!

Pix

"The Real Glory," revived yesterday on the screen at the Pix Theater as chief feature for the new week, paradoxically, possesses a timeliness today it could not boast three years ago upon the occasion of its first release.

In this Samuel Goldwyn production for United Artists is revealed the genesis of the courage, the stanchness and the heroism that marked the fortitude of the Philippine soldiery in the defense of besieged Bataan. While "The Real Glory" is partially romantic, a little sentimental and occasionally mildly comic, it is at base the story of the emancipation of the fighting men who were to become the Philippine constabulary from old-age superstitions and their welding into a compact, able and resourceful fighting unit.

This transformation is depicted on the screen through the adventures and misadventures of a small garrison in the Philippines at about the time of the Spanish-American War. Love, murder, intrigue and native treachery all have a part in fashioning the thrilling design of a melodrama that bristles with action, stirring climaxes and surprising revelations of human character, both among the whites and the savage Moros.

The principal roles are in conspicuously competent hands. Gary Cooper, Andrea Leeds, David Niven and Reginald Owen are those in the stellar parts. Broderick Crawford, Kay Johnson, Russell Hicks, Vladimir Sokoloff, Benny Inocencio and Tetsu Komai are among those who lend most valuable support.

Augmented by the usual short subjects, "The Real Glory is something to see. More so than ever before, in the light of recent events.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

McNutt Group Weighs Federal Employment

The Federal Government's man power problem is reported to be under consideration by Paul McNutt's Man Power Commission. It is not generally realized, but the commission now has full responsibility for the Government's labor policy. A provision in the executive order that created the commission reads: "Prescribe basic policies governing the filling of the Federal Government's requirements for man power and issue such operating directives as may be necessary." The President formerly issued the directives. What's worrying the commission, briefly, is how to insure the Government competent employes.

By and large the Government is getting competent employes now, but for how long is a real question. The replacement problem has reached a critical stage. In April, the Civil Service Commission made 180,500 placements, an all-time high number. More than half of them were appointed to fill vacancies, the remainder for new jobs. From July 1, 1941 to April 1, 45 per cent of the placements made by the Civil Service Commission were to fill vacancies.

For the 1942 fiscal year that will end on June 30, it is now estimated by commission statisticians that 1,500,000 placements will have been made in the Federal service. Of that figure, 810,000, or 54 per cent, will be made to fill vacancies and 690,000, or 46 per cent, will be new jobs. Those figures should startle you, but if they don't, take into consideration that the Government on July 1 will have approximately 2,100,000 civilian employes . . . that in the 1941 fiscal year only 560,000 placements were made (approximately a million more will be made this year) . . . and that the personnel turnover in 1941 was 18 per cent compared with 54 per cent now. The placement trend is still upward and you can soon expect action by the Man Power Commission to stabilize it.

Experts Rolled

It happened the other day at the War Labor Board. Walter Reuther and James Matles, C. I. O. labor leaders, asked for the use of a mimeograph machine to get out a statement on a WLB decision on pay raises for General Motors employes. A secretary showed them a machine. She turned on the switch but the machine didn't run. She observed that it must be out of order.

"That's all right," said the confident Reuther, "we can fix it. I grew up as a toolmaker and Jim here is an expert electrician. A couple of master mechanics like ourselves can fix anything."

The experts fooled with the machine for awhile. They gave up. Reuther was cranking the machine by hand and Matles was feeding it when the operator returned from lunch. The operator leaned over, picked up the electric plug and attached it. The machine started to run.

Ted Collins, the manager and announcer for Kate Smith, is now a $1-a year man at the Labor Department. He will work on the safety campaign in war plants and a wag suggests that he will soon have Kate Smith singing "Safety Comes Over the Mountain" . . . Civil Service wants radio service men with two and a half years of paid experience to inspect Army radio equipment. Appointees will be stationed at manufacturing plants outside the District. Salary is $2000. Apply at 801 E Street.

A 67-year-old grandmother came here from California recently to visit her son, a Federal employe, and his family. She has never held a job and she took the Civil Service clerical exam as a lark. Yesterday she was offered an appointment at $1440. Now she is thinking seriously about accepting it . . . W. Norman Thompson, administrative assistant at Treasury, says that Treasury cars are now used only for official business, and have been for some time. Treasury sleuths are trying to find out who gave out the story that appeared here yesterday about the Secretary. They think they know. They don't.

Public Health Service is moving to Bethesda. It has lost many of its employes by the transfer. Federal workers who live in Bethesda and vicinity and who would like to transfer to PHS are urged to make application immediately. Clerical people are needed. Make application with Daniel Masterson, chief clerk, or Ray Sawyer, executive assistant to the Surgeon General . . . Federal Works has pooled all official cars in the agency . . . War's Quartermaster Corps is designing a medal for the civilian defense corps.

Walking Is Good!

Harrisburg, Pa., May 27 (A.P.).—State Rationing Administrator T. Elmer Transeau found it no problem at all to rule on one appeal for new tires. The motorist said he needed them to drive into town to get his relief check.

Was the Messenger Surprised?

St. Joseph, Mo., May 27 (A.P.).—A telegram from the War Department came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mayfield today telling them their son, Don, was missing in action on Bataan. But they weren't alarmed—the message was opened by Don himself. He had been on the peninsula in a tank battalion but had been sent home because of illness before Bataan fell.

1. SQUARE DANCING is one of the features of week-night activities at the Y. W. C. A. More than 100 dancers often jam the gym at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest while a real hillbilly band plays

2. SELECTING MUSIC for a dance Tuesday night are Chris Colyer and Bobbie Chase, both of Navy Department. Lending assistance are Sailors Roy Meyer, stationed at the Washington Navy Yard, and Ernest Mitchell,

3 A PICNIC can't be far away when Eleanor Wagar, of the War Department, and Vivian Greene, from Virginia, start preparing lunch boxes. In fact, there'll be one today

Senate Inquiry Set on Slum Clearing Here

Progress made by the Alley Dwelling Authority in clearing up the Capital's slums and in providing war housing will be studied by a Senate District Committee, at the request of Executive Officer John Ihlder.

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, committee chairman, said yesterday he would ask Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland to be chairman of the special subcommittee to study work of the ADA. Other members will be Senators Capper, Burton, Hughes and McCarran.

Ihlder appeared before the committee and asked a thorough study of the ADA's work in order that "Congress be more fully informed as to what it has done, believing that this may be of some value in shaping future legislation."

His appearance follows recent action of the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which Senator McCarran is a member, in slashing requests for ADA funds to $12,000 and in shutting the agency off from an estimated $55,000 annual income in rent payments.

Chairman McCarran confessed that he was not acquainted fully with the ADA program. He said he believed the District committees in Congress should be informed on local matters in order that they could report to other Congressional committees considering legislation affecting the District.

Ihlder's statement to the committee reviewed ADA work from 1937, when $500,000 was appropriated—although three million dollars was asked.

Police Pay Bill Deferred

The Senate committee yesterday deferred action on the bill to raise pay of District firemen and policemen by $300 a year. The District Commissioners will be asked to testify on the measure, possibly next week, it was decided. Rufus Lusk, representing the Washington Taxpayers Association, appeared in opposition to the bill, which has House approval.

Heard in behalf of the proposal were: Paul W. Proctor, chairman of legislation for the D. C. Police Association; John J. Richardson, representing the Firefighters Association, and John L. Werheim, president of the Firemen's Association of the District.

Seven bills were approved by the committee, among them one proposed by Senator McCarran to provide substitution of lethal gas for the electric chair.

Extra Custodial Pay Approved

Another would permit custodial workers in the public schools to receive extra pay for extra work brought on by the war emergency. Another would exempt out-of-town corporations shipping goods into the District from local taxation, when the sale was consummated outside the District. Both have been approved by the House, as have been the three other measures approved:

To fix a uniform license fee of $25 a year for ambulances, to give police officials wider discretion in assigning officers temporarily to the Detective Bureau, and to authorize extension of railroad tracks serving the Navy Yard. The seventh measure approved provided a minor amendment to the law governing retirement of Police Court judges.

Action was deferred on proposals to raise the salary of the Recorder of Deeds from $6400 to $8000; to grant a Federal charter to the United Philippine War Veterans; to extend the name of MacArthur Boulevard into Maryland, and to provide a memorial at Gallinger Hospital to the late Senator George Chamberlain.

Conduit Road, which was renamed MacArthur Boulevard inside the District, runs into Maryland. Although it is on Federal property there, Senator Burton expressed doubt Congress had the right to name a Maryland road.

Man Is Acquitted In Homicide Case

Marcus A. Hall, 31, of 1207 Park Road Northwest, was acquitted by a police court jury yesterday of a charge of negligent homicide in the death of Marie Dines, 69, Negro, of 1129 Girard Street Northwest five days following a traffic accident last September 20.

The victim's death, it was testified, resulted from complications of a leg fracture received when Hall's car struck her at Eleventh and Girard Streets Northwest.

Y. W. C. A. Has a Shangri-La Annex—It's Big Playhouse

Seven floors devoted to the entertainment of lonely strangers could be a Washington annex to Shangri-La—but isn't. It's the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, a grown-up playhouse from its reception hall to its sundeck.

In a city brimming with newcomers, the "Y" and its hospitality are a real boon. Soldiers, sailors, defense workers, secretaries, clerks—all are eligible to participate in the fun, day or night.

Edith J. Rieger, executive secretary to the Business and Professional Women's Department, and her assistants are particularly anxious to provide entertainment and friends for the many Government girls who are working on night shifts.

"If you type at night, then play in the day" is the motto on attractive little propaganda pamphlets, and busy Wednesday sessions provide badminton, swimming, ping pong and shorthand and Spanish classes, geared to taste.

For those with spare evenings hanging heavily on their hands, there is square dancing on Monday, music and "open house" on Tuesday, the Xenos Club for young business girls on Wednesday, the Blue Triangle Club for women from 23 to 30 on Thursday, dancing on Friday and U. S. O. activities over the weekend.

Miss Rieger is expecially proud of the picnics on Thursday, each week set at different spots around the city. Girls see Hains Point, Rock Creek Park, the towpath along the canal above Georgetown and points farther afield, ranging from Glen Echo to the Virginia hills.

Saturdays and Sundays are the Y's busiest times. Three orchestras play on Saturday evening, and the 700 capacity is usually reached long before 9 p. m.

"It's wise to register beforehand for Saturday," Miss Rieger says. "We have games as well as dancing, and there is always a full house."

Comfortable lounges with deep chairs, good reading lights, many pillows and big sofas are scattered throughout the building.

Discussion groups also are popular, with many of the same speakers returning week after week to talk of national and domestic problems—and to be bombarded with questions for an hour or so afterward.

Uniforms, of course, are on all sides.

"We have thousands and thousands of names in our USO files," Miss Rieger says. "We try to provide the boys with things to do and people to meet, no matter when they come in. Weekends, though, find more service men here than girls, although it's still the Young Women's Christian Association."

Police Capture One Who Fled Rockville Jail

BULLETIN

Clifton Yokely, 23, one of three prisoners who escaped Tuesday night from the Rockville jail has been recaptured by police who had kept watch over his home in Germantown, Md., it was reported early today.

Three prisoners who escaped from Rockville Jail Tuesday night after slugging the assistant warden, were still at large early today as police in four States and the District sought to capture them.

Police Chief Andrew M. Newman and Lieut. Theodore Vollten, chief of Montgomery County detectives, took personal charge of the search. Scores of tips and clews were received but all proved false. Early yesterday afternoon it was reported two of the prisoners, including James A. Anderson, 17, had been seen at Chesapeake Beach and were hitch hiking toward Washington. They were also reported seen near Back Lodge.

Anderson was scheduled to go on trial Monday in Hagerstown on a charge of raping a 36-year-old woman near Glen Echo, Md., last February. The other escaped prisoners are Andrew Foster, 21, of Takoma Park, Md., and Clifton Yokley, 23, of near Germantown, Md.

Town Meeting To Be Broadcast From Howard U.

"America's Town Meeting of the Air," radio forum, will be broadcast over the blue network of the National Broadcasting Company tonight from Howard University.

It will be the first time the program has been broadcast from Washington, the local arrangements having been made following an invitation extended by Dr. Mordecai W. Johnson, president of Howard, who will be one of the speakers.

The discussion will be on the topic, "Is There a Basis for Spiritual Unity in the World Today?" and other speakers will include three members of the Howard faculty, Doxey Alfonso Wilkerson, assistant professor of education; Leon A. Ransom, acting dean and professor of law, and Alain LeRoy Locke, professor of philosophy.

Victory Sidelights

District Eagerly Awaiting Memorial Day Parade of Army's New Motorized Equipment

The motorized military equipment of America's new Army will be prominently featured in the eagerly awaited Memorial Day parade which begins at 4 p. m. Saturday, it was announced last night.

In the line of march will be a light pontoon load, containing the materials from which Army Engineers fashion hasty bridges; road building equipment; a water purifier, scout cars, half truck carriers and mobile repair units.

The Quartermaster Corps will exhibit, for the first time a new low-silhouette weapon carrier, and there will be units of combat and reconnaissance cars, cargo and troop carriers and a six-ton cargo carrier. The Coast Artillery detachment in the parade will display searchlights and antiaircraft weapons.

The War Department has invited two veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, said to be the only survivors of the Union Army in the Civil War now residing in Washington, to participate in the parade, but members of the veterans' families said last night they would be unable to take part.

They are Colonel John M. Kline, 4801 Seventh Street Northwest, department commander of the Grand Army of the Potomac, and William F. Dorsey, 3222 Twentieth Street Northeast. Both Colonel Kline, who is 95, and Dorsey, 93, have been intermittently confined to their rooms for the past year or more.

Veterans of the Spanish American War and of the first World War also have been invited to march in the parade.

Light in Blackout Costs Restaurateur $10

Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday ordered the forfeiture of $10 by Carl Cummings, 47, out of a total of $25 collateral placed with the court on a violation committed during Washington's last blackout.

Cummings, it was charged, had left a light burning in his lunchroom at 1245 D Street Northeast during the night of May 12. The case was one of three involving similar violations. The other two were also disposed by forfeitures.

Office Building Wardens to Meet

Volunteers to Run War Bond Booths

Uniformed members of the American Women's Voluntary Services will manage war bond booths in all Washington theater lobbies during Memorial Week, beginning Saturday.

Miss Anita Phipps, president of the District Unit, yesterday asked that all A. W. V. S. volunteers register at headquarters, 1270 Florida Avenue, by Friday of this week—and urged members with uniforms to sign up for the war stamps campaign in the theater.

Countess Eleanor Palffy Addresses B'nai Israel

Four Men Convicted In Files Case

Lone Woman Cleared By Jury on Charges Involving Records Of Civil Service

After deliberating 8 hours and 55 minutes a District Court jury last night found guilty on six counts four of the five defendants indicted for complicity in the illegal removal of confidential files from the offices of the Civil Service Commission.

Katherin Kay, the lone woman defendant, was acquitted.

Judge Called From Home

The four men now face sentence by Justice James W. Morris, who was called from his home at 9 p. m. when the jury reached its verdict. The maximum penalty for each of the six counts is $2000 fine or three years in prison, or both.

Testimony during the three-week trial had revealed a plan to sell lists of Government employes' names to mail business firms throughout the country. The original indictment of the five defendants named 14 counts, but eight were dropped, including a charge of theft.

Sentenced Deferred

After the return of the verdict last night, Justice Morris said he would not pass sentence immediately, but would "study" further the facts in the case. However, he granted a request by attorneys for Camp and Orbach by setting their bail at $1500 each. Haynes asked, for a sentence by tomorrow, the usual day for sentences in District Court, but Justice Morris said he would need more time for consideration.

Visibly distraught as the jury entoned a total of 168 "guilties," including those in polls asked for Crandall and Haynes, Crandall's mother collapsed on a bench when the proceeding was over. After being revived, she sobbed: "I don't know how they could do it when they know he's innocent." Bail for Crandall had been set at $2500.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

McNutt Group Weighs Federal Employment

The Federal Government's man power problem is reported to be under consideration by Paul McNutt's Man Power Commission. It is not generally realized, but the commission now has full responsibility for the Government's labor policy. A provision in the executive order that created the commission reads: "Prescribe basic policies governing the filling of the Federal Government's requirements for man power and issue such operating directives as may be necessary." The President formerly issued the directives. What's worrying the commission, briefly, is how to insure the Government competent employes.

By and large the Government is getting competent employes now, but for how long is a real question. The replacement problem has reached a critical stage. In April, the Civil Service Commission made 180,500 placements, an all-time high number. More than half of them were appointed to fill vacancies, the remainder for new jobs. From July 1, 1941 to April 1, 45 per cent of the placements made by the Civil Service Commission were to fill vacancies.

For the 1942 fiscal year that will end on June 30, it is now estimated by commission statisticians that 1,500,000 placements will have been made in the Federal service. Of that figure, 810,000, or 54 per cent, will be made to fill vacancies and 690,000, or 46 per cent, will be new jobs. Those figures should startle you, but if they don't, take into consideration that the Government on July 1 will have approximately 2,100,000 civilian employes . . . that in the 1941 fiscal year only 560,000 placements were made (approximately a million more will be made this year) . . . and that the personnel turnover in 1941 was 18 per cent compared with 54 per cent now. The placement trend is still upward and you can soon expect action by the Man Power Commission to stabilize it.

Experts Rattled

It happened the other day at the War Labor Board. Walter Reuther and James Matles, C. I. O. labor leaders, asked for the use of a mimeograph machine to get out a statement on a WLB decision on pay raises for General Motors employes. A secretary showed them a machine. She turned on the switch but the machine didn't run. She observed that it must be out of order.

"That's all right," said the confident Reuther, "we can fix it. I grew up as a toolmaker and Jim here is an expert electrician. A couple of master mechanics like ourselves can fix anything."

The experts fooled with the machine for awhile. They gave up. Reuther was cranking the machine by hand and Matles was feeding it when the operator returned from lunch. The operator leaned over, picked up the electric plug and attached it. The machine started to run.

Ted Collins, the manager and announcer for Kate Smith, is now a $1 a year man at the Labor Department. He will work on the safety campaign in war plants and a wag suggests that he will soon have Kate Smith singing "Safety Comes Over the Mountain" . . . Civil Service wants radio service men with two and a half years of paid experience to inspect Army radio equipment. Appointees will be stationed at manufacturing plants outside the District. Salary is $2000. Apply at 801 E Street.

A 67-year-old grandmother came here from California recently to visit her son, a Federal employe, and his family. She has never held a job and she took the Civil Service clerical exam as a lark. Yesterday she was offered an appointment at $1440. Now she is thinking seriously about accepting it . . . W. Norman Thompson, administrative assistant at Treasury, says that Treasury cars are now used only for official business, and have been for some time. Treasury sleuths are trying to find out who gave out the story that appeared here yesterday about the Secretary. They think they know. They don't.

Public Health Service is moving to Bethesda. It has lost many of its employes by the transfer. Federal workers who live in Bethesda and vicinity and who would like to transfer to PHS are urged to make application immediately. Clerical people are needed. Make application with Daniel Masterson, chief clerk, or Ray Sawyer, executive assistant to the Surgeon General . . . Federal Works has pooled all official cars in the agency . . . War's Quartermaster Corps is designing a medal for the civilian defense corps.

Walking Is Good!

Harrisburg, Pa., May 27 (A.P.).—State Rationing Administrator T. Elmer Transeau found it no problem at all to rule on one appeal for new tires. The motorist said he needed them to drive into town to get his relief check.

Was the Messenger Surprised?

St. Joseph, Mo., May 27 (A.P.).—A telegram from the War Department came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Mayfield today telling them their son, Don, was missing in action on Bataan. But they weren't alarmed—the message was opened by Don himself. He had been on the peninsula in a tank battalion but had been sent home because of illness before Bataan fell.

Senate Inquiry Set on Slum Clearing Here

Progress made by the Alley Dwelling Authority in clearing up the Capital's slums and in providing war housing will be studied by a Senate District Committee, at the request of Executive Officer John Ihlder.

Senator McCarran (Democrat) of Nevada, committee chairman, said yesterday he would ask Senator Tydings (Democrat) of Maryland to be chairman of the special subcommittee to study work of the ADA. Other members will be Senators Capper, Burton, Hughes and McCarran.

Ihlder appeared before the committee and asked a thorough study of the ADA's work in order that "Congress be more fully informed as to what it has done, believing that this may be of some value in shaping future legislation."

His appearance follows recent action of the Senate Appropriations Committee, of which Senator McCarran is a member, in slashing requests for ADA funds to $12,000 and in shutting the agency off from an estimated $55,000 annual income in rent payments.

Chairman McCarran confessed that he was not acquainted fully with the ADA program. He said he believed the District committees in Congress should be informed on local matters in order that they could report to other Congressional committees considering legislation affecting the District.

Ihlder's statement to the committee reviewed ADA work from 1937, when $500,000 was appropriated—although three million dollars was asked.

Police Pay Bill Deferred

The Senate committee yesterday deferred action on the bill to raise pay of District firemen and policemen by $300 a year. The District Commissioners will be asked to testify on the measure, possibly next week, it was decided. Rufus Lusk, representing the Washington Taxpayers Association, appeared in opposition to the bill, which has House approval.

Heard in behalf of the proposal were: Paul W. Proctor, chairman of legislation for the D. C. Police Association; John J. Richardson, representing the Firefighters Association, and John L. Werheim, president of the Firemen's Association of the District.

Seven bills were approved by the committee, among them one proposed by Senator McCarran to provide substitution of lethal gas for the electric chair.

Extra Custodial Pay Approved

Another would permit custodial workers in the public schools to receive extra pay for extra work brought on by the war emergency. Another would exempt out-of-town corporations shipping goods into the District from local taxation, when the sale was consummated outside the District. Both have been approved by the House, as have been the three other measures approved:

To fix a uniform license fee of $25 a year for ambulances, to give police officials wider discretion in assigning officers temporarily to the Detective Bureau, and to authorize extension of railroad tracks serving the Navy Yard. The seventh measure approved provided a minor amendment to the law governing retirement of Police Court judges.

Action was deferred on proposals to raise the salary of the Recorder of Deeds from $8400 to $8000; to grant a Federal charter to the United Philippine War Veterans; to extend the name of MacArthur Boulevard into Maryland, and to provide a memorial at Gallinger Hospital to the late Senator George Chamberlain.

Conduit Road, which was renamed MacArthur Boulevard inside the District, runs into Maryland. Although it is on Federal property there, Senator Burton expressed doubt Congress had the right to name a Maryland road.

Man Is Acquitted In Homicide Case

Marcus A. Hall, 31, of 1207 Park Road Northwest, was acquitted by a police court jury yesterday of a charge of negligent homicide in the death of Marie Dines, 60, Negro, of 1129 Girard Street Northwest five days following a traffic accident last September 20.

The victim's death, it was testified, resulted from complications of a leg fracture received when Hall's car struck her at Eleventh and Girard Streets Northwest.

Y. W. C. A. Has a Shangri-La Annex—It's Big Playhouse

Seven floors devoted to the entertainment of lonely strangers could be a Washington annex to Shangri-La—but isn't. It's the Y. W. C. A. at Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest, a grown-up playhouse from its reception hall to its sundeck.

In a city brimming with newcomers, the "Y" and its hospitality are a real boon. Soldiers, sailors, defense workers, secretaries, clerks—all are eligible to participate in the fun, day or night.

Edith J. Rieger, executive secretary to the Business and Professional Women's Department, and her assistants are particularly anxious to provide entertainment and friends for the many Government girls who are working on night shifts.

"If you type at night, then play in the day" is the motto on attractive little propaganda pamphlets, and busy Wednesday sessions provide badminton, swimming, ping pong and shorthand and Spanish classes, geared to taste.

For those with spare evenings hanging heavily on their hands, there is square dancing on Monday, music and "open house" on Tuesday, the Xenos Club for young business girls on Wednesday, the Blue Triangle Club for women from 23 to 30 on Thursday, dancing on Friday and U. S. O. activities over the weekend.

Miss Rieger is expecially proud of the picnics on Thursday, each week set at different spots around the city. Girls see Hains Point, Rock Creek Park, the towpath along the canal above Georgetown and points farther afield, ranging from Glen Echo to the Virginia hills.

Saturdays and Sundays are the Y's busiest times. Three orchestras play on Saturday evening, and the 700 capacity is usually reached long before 9 p. m.

"It's wise to register beforehand for Saturday," Miss Rieger says. "We have games as well as dancing, and there is always a full house."

Comfortable lounges with deep chairs, good reading lights, many pillows and big sofas are scattered throughout the building.

Discussion groups also are popular, with many of the same speakers returning week after week to talk of national and domestic problems—and to be bombarded with questions for an hour or so afterward.

Uniforms, of course, are on all sides.

"We have thousands and thousands of names in our USO files," Miss Rieger says. "We try to provide the boys with things to do and people to meet, no matter when they come in. Weekends, though, find more service men here than girls, although it's still the Young Women's Christian Association."

Police Capture One Who Fled Rockville Jail

BULLETIN

Clifton Yokely, 23, one of three prisoners who escaped Tuesday night from the Rockville jail has been recaptured by police who had kept watch over his home in Germantown, Md., it was reported early today.

Three prisoners who escaped from Rockville Jail Tuesday night after slugging the assistant warden, were still at large early today as police in four States and the District sought to capture them.

Police Chief Andrew M. Newman and Lieut. Theodore Volliten, chief of Montgomery County detectives, took personal charge of the search. Scores of tips and clews were received but all proved false. Early yesterday afternoon it was reported two of the prisoners, including James A. Anderson, 17, had been seen at Chesapeake Beach and were hitch hiking toward Washington. They were also reported seen near Back Lodge.

Anderson was scheduled to go on trial Monday in Hagerstown on a charge of raping a 36-year-old woman near Glen Echo, Md., last February. The other escaped prisoners are Andrew Foster, 21, of Takoma Park, Md., and Clifton Yokley, 23, of near Germantown, Md.

District Eagerly Awaiting Memorial Day Parade of Army's New Motorized Equipment

The motorized military equipment of America's new Army will be prominently featured in the eagerly awaited Memorial Day parade which begins at 4 p. m. Saturday, it was announced last night.

In the line of march will be a light pontoon load, containing the materials from which Army Engineers fashion hasty bridges; road building equipment; a water purifier, scout cars, half truck carriers and mobile repair units.

The Quartermaster Corps will exhibit, for the first time a new low-silhouette weapon carrier, and there will be units of combat and reconnaissance cars, cargo and troop carriers and a six-ton cargo carrier. The Coast Artillery detachment in the parade will display searchlights and antiaircraft weapons.

The War Department has invited two veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic, said to be the only survivors of the Union Army in the Civil War now residing in Washington, to participate in the parade, but members of the veterans' families said last night they would be unable to take part.

They are Colonel John M. Kline, 4801 Seventh Street Northwest, department commander of the Grand Army of the Potomac, and William F. Dorsey, 3222 Twentieth Street Northeast. Both Colonel Kline, who is 95, and Dorsey, 93, have been intermittently confined to their rooms for the past year or more.

Veterans of the Spanish American War and of the first World War also have been invited to march in the parade.

Light in Blackout Costs Restaurateur $10

Judge Walter J. Casey yesterday ordered the forfeiture of $10 by Carl Cummings, 47, out of a total of $25 collateral placed with the court on a violation committed during Washington's last blackout.

Cummings, it was charged, had left a light burning in his lunchroom at 1245 D Street Northeast during the night of May 12. The case was one of three involving similar violations. The other two were also disposed by forfeitures.

Office Building Wardens to Meet

Volunteers to Run War Bond Booths

Uniformed members of the American Women's Voluntary Services will manage war bond booths in all Washington theater lobbies during Memorial Week, beginning Saturday.

Miss Anita Phipps, president of the District Unit, yesterday asked that all A. W. V. S. volunteers register at headquarters, 1270 Florida Avenue, by Friday of this week—and urged members with uniforms to sign up for the war stamps campaign in the theater.

Four Men Convicted In Files Case

Lone Woman Cleared By Jury on Charges Involving Records Of Civil Service

After deliberating 8 hours and 35 minutes a District Court jury last night found guilty on six counts four of the five defendants indicted for complicity in the illegal removal of confidential files from the offices of the Civil Service Commission.

Katherin Kay, the lone woman defendant, was acquitted.

Judge Called From Home

The four men now face sentence by Justice James W. Morris, who was called from his home at 9 p. m. when the jury reached its verdict. The maximum penalty for each of the six counts is $2000 fine or three years in prison, or both.

Testimony during the three-week trial had revealed a plan to sell lists of Government employes' names to mail business firms throughout the country. The original indictment of the five defendants named 14 counts, but eight were dropped, including a charge of theft.

Sentenced Deferred

After the return of the verdict last night, Justice Morris said he would not pass sentence immediately, but would "study" further the facts in the case. However, he granted a request by attorneys for Camp and Orbach by setting their bail at $1500 each. Haynes asked, for a sentence by tomorrow, the usual day for sentences in District Court, but Justice Morris said he would need more time for consideration.

Visibly distraught as the jury entoned a total of 168 "guilties," including those in polls asked for Crandall and Haynes, Crandall's mother collapsed on a bench when the proceeding was over. After being revived, she sobbed: "I don't know how they could do it when they know he's innocent." Bail for Crandall had been set at $2500.

WPB to Permit Flowing Dress For June Bride

By Wide World Features

Uncle Sam is, after all, a sentimental old soul at heart.

As America prepares for a record boom in June brides, the old gentleman with the white whiskers makes it known that she can—just this once—disregard the rigid rules of wartime economy and shoot the works on any kind of wedding gown her little heart desires.

The usually unemotional War Production Board has made three important exceptions in its now famous Order L-85, limiting yardage and styling of current fashions—bridal gowns, maternity dresses and burial gowns. Thus the Government gives carte blanche to the three most important events in any woman's life.

So the American wartime bride may plunge recklessly into flowing trains and floating veils even in this year of wartime economy. If she feels that her wedding will not be a success without a bridal gown with a six-foot train and a skirt using 20 yards of material, that's all right with the WPB. After all, the production chiefs murmur tolerantly, a girl only gets married once—sometimes. Anyway, she only has one first wedding, which calls for veils and orange blossoms.

She also may have as big and beautiful a diamond as her fiance can afford, since the Government restrictions apply only to costume jewelry, and not to precious metals and gems.

She's urged, even, to select as expensive a diamond as possible as a patriotic gesture, so that the price of industrial diamonds for war production may remain low.

Gasless D. C. Rediscovers Backyards

By Jane Driscoll

The Post Fashion Editor

NOW that the swan song has been sung to travel by land, sea and air, (at least for most civilians) Washingtonians are looking to their own back yards, or near, for homemade fun. With a little prying into a city map, it is surprising to discover chances for doing something different within trolley distance.

To name a few types of recreation—there is bicycling around Hains' Point; tennis on town courts; paddling in the Tidal Basin; sailing on the Potomac; swimming in indoor and outdoor pools; golfing at nearby courses, in Rock Creek or at country clubs; and picnicing in Rock Creek or national parks. Boats still ply the Potomac to Mount Vernon. Prices and times of sailing are virtually the same as last year. There is one change—no cameras are allowed on the waterfront. Those who want to use their gasoline rations all at once may go by auto, of course.

What to wear to all of these? The most casual of functional clothes will pass. Slacks would be appropriate for virtually every jaunt except such those to the art gallery and Watergate concerts—unless, of course, you go by canoe. It is a wager that slacks will even be seen in these places—though we are not advocating them.

For those who want to be well dressed on a minimum budget, the California mix-match idea is a solution. Shorts, cardigans, pleated skirts and slacks are all available in butcher rayon that looks like linen. Every piece has hand-picked detail down the sides. Gay colors, such as aqua, powder blue, yellow, beige, fire red and navy are to be found. This type of outfit will go almost any place.

Housecleaning Lore

A soft small brush is convenient to use when cleaning woodwork. Make up warm water soap suds. Dip the brush frequently in this, shake off excess water to prevent spattering and wash over small surfaces at a time. Wipe off soil with cloth, rinse with cloth dipped in clear water and wipe dry. This treatment is quick and helps prevent streaking.

Holiday Palm Beach Outfit

"Lighter than air," might be the credo for women's summer weight Palm Beach outfits. They are cooler this year than ever before. You would never guess that this feminine-looking fabric originally started with men's clothes. Above is a button-down-the-front version shirtwaister that is just right for golf or other sports. Other Palm Beach outfits by Sacony are available in suits, dresses and slack suits. They are packable, too, as wrinkles "hang out" over night

Mary Haworth's Mail

Committed to Mental Hospital by Husband, Woman Is Later Released in Mother's Custody, But Her Mute Melancholy Worsens; Family Seeks Advice

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am writing in the hope that you may be able in some way to help us. The problem concerns my sister, who has been married and has three children. Physically she is of very slight build, and child-bearing may be partially responsible for her present condition. Today she is not in full possession of her mental faculties.

When she was still living with her husband he treated her terribly, beating and generally abusing her. (My mother and I were living with them at the time, and we could neither protect her nor persuade her to leave him.) The youngest child is now 1 year old, and it was just after his birth that the change came over her. Doctors examined her and placed her in a sanitarium for four months, telling us that she was suffering from a serious nervous condition. When she returned home from the sanitarium the doctor advised us that she was not to be excited in any way.

Contrary to this advice, her husband on many occasions deliberately came rushing in, saying excitedly: "I've got to go now. I'm in a terrible hurry." While it may sound silly, the effect upon her was dreadful. She would rush about madly, to no purpose, without accomplishing anything. It is difficult to describe the situation in writing. However, things finally reached a point where she shut herself off from everyone, refusing to speak, eat or take an interest in anything. When she was in this mood her husband would beat her terribly. She would merely tolerate this treatment, in the meantime growing steadily worse. She would sit for hours at a time, staring into space. Sometimes, during the winter, she would stand outside in the cold, until one of the children could persuade her to come inside.

One day, her husband persuaded her to "go for a ride," in company with a neighbor. The ride terminated at a mental hospital in Virginia, with her husband telling her that she was "crazy," and that he was going to leave her there forever. She was there for some time, with her husband never visiting her. Mother and I visited her regularly and she seemed worse on each visit; never violent; just desperately despondent. Finally, mother asked the doctor in charge if she might take her into custody, hoping the change would relieve her depression. The doctor agreed to the suggestion and she is now living with us.

This is the problem: There are she goes out of the house with us and talks rationally. But more often she refuses even to speak with us, and, if she eats at all, eats standing up. On these days we wonder if our efforts are futile. It is heartbreaking to see a dear one in such a condition, and the strain is wearing on my mother. We can't help wondering if it is true, as some people say, that she will never get well. One doctor told us she has something on her mind and, unless she tells someone, will never recover.

Mother is a widow with an income of only $39 a month—just enough to cover the rent. I make only $17 a week, which must cover our other expenses and you can readily see that we cannot afford expensive psychiatric service for my sister. Since she has been in this condition, she has never spoken of her husband or children; and this seems significant, since she was passionately devoted to them before.

Mother has wanted to bring one of the older children to see her, hoping it might help; but they are with their father in Virginia, and he has told mother he will have her arrested for kidnapping if she tries it. Having no knowledge of the law in this regard, mother is afraid to act. Incidentally, the father has custody of the children through no legal action. I guess this about covers the story, and although it is badly told, I hope you will not have too much trouble in grasping the problem. Your answer will be much appreciated by mother and myself.
Sincerely WORRIED.

Situation Requires Analysis by Experts

DEAR WORRIED: Your problem, in essence, is this: How to give your sister the benefit of the finest remedia or alleviative care possible, in the circumstances. Although your intentions obviously are of the best, it is doubtful that you have been doing her any kindness in keeping her with you—when her condition seems to cry urgently for expert institutional treatment.

I have discussed your letter with two nationally known psychiatrists, both famous alike for their humane attitude and brilliant diagnostic skill in prescribing for mentally ill persons. It is their belief that the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia Road Northwest, Washington, D. C. (telephone ADams 1033), will afford you dependable guidance in planning the right program of care for your sister.

Since the Institute caters, primarily, to socially maladjusted rather than to nervously deranged persons, it would be more comfortable for all concerned if you were to make an appointment in advance for consultation with staff psychiatrists about your sister's case. By this means, a time and place can be designated for diagnostic investigation of her condition, that will give maximum privacy to the patient and her family; and, incidentally, shield the Institute's school-age clientele from the heartwringing spectacle of her pitiably defenseless wretchedness.

Perhaps I should explain again (as I have so often) that the Institute of Mental Hygiene supplies the community with a superior quality of psychiatric service, on a free clinic basis to those who need such help and cannot afford to pay the private practitioners' fees. Thus, from the viewpoint both of diagnosis and far-sighted planning, you will be guaranteeing your sister the best scientific care the psychiatric branch of medicine can provide (at public expense), if you turn there for help, and if you follow the suggestions given.

The anguished compassion which prompts you and your mother to want to minister personally to your sister is a worthy sentiment. But the fact that she seems, for the most part, unaware of her surroundings and your tender concern for her, suggests that your stupendously sacrificial investment of loving effort is being made in vain. Since you have wrought no steady improvement in her condition, and could not indefinitely sustain the burden of the present arrangement, you must recognize your responsibility to make other plans for her. And if this means institutional care, do not believe that you are behaving unkindly or selfishly in choosing that course.

While institutional care may not restore her faculties entirely—since there is a possibility that her sickness is progressive—at least it will give you a reasonable chance to keep your own health, and that is as much of an asset to her as to you. So long as you are in good health, she will never lack for a faithful friend. But if you were to break under the strain of trying to keep her at home—and your mother also—her plight would be desolate indeed. She might find herself once more subject to her husband's vicious dictates—with further chapters of unspeakable indignity and suffering opening up to her. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Center Interest On All Walls

Every wall in a living room should have an object of central interest. It may be a single tall piece of furniture, such as a secretary desk; it may be a sofa or studio couch, with height added by pictures or mirrors on the wall.

Piano or radios are natural interest centers, and of course the fireplace is a pivotal point.

Mt. Vernon Timber To Protect Bell

At the closing sesion of the seventy-six annual grand council of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association, it was decided that wood from trees on the Mount Vernon estate would be sent to Philadelphia to be used for the railing around the vault in which the Liberty Bell is to be stored in case of a sudden emergency. The request that Mount Vernon wood be used for this purpose came from George Wharton Pepper of Philadelphia, general counsel of the Mount Vernon Ladies Association.

The council reelected Charles Cecil Wall as superintendent for the coming year. Mr. Wall has been at Mount Vernon for 13 years, the past 5 years as superintendent.

Curry, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Eugene Fugitt, treasurer; Miss Claire E. Brown, registrar, and Mrs. Catherine Hill Hodges, historian.

Dresses Modeled After Crazy-Quilt

Ginny Simms, puttering about that new garden of hers (a very new garden—mostly plans—for the house itself won't be finished until July) looked colorful in a peasant frock made of one of the new patchwork prints. If you haven't seen these, run quick and look. They are exactly like old-fashioned crazy quilts, the helter-skelter pieces sewn together with a blanket stitch.

Though Ginny's dress isn't pieces at all, but a print to look like pieces, it may give you ideas on how to make something from practically nothing. Incidentally, Ginny wears a sunbonnet with the frock, because she insists it is still the most practical garden hat yet invented.

Wartime Housewife Must Become 'Handyman' About House

Present calls on national resources demand great care be given by the homemaker to household furnishings. Maryland University's senior coeds take the curtailment of merchandise in genuine manner, learning to conserve equipment by being their own handymen. Miss Martha Rainalter (left) tacks cream antique leatherette fabric on to dining room chair to give it new life. Miss Doris Clements (below) handyman for Home Management House, solders broken door knob, since metals have become a need in defense manufacturing

Maryland University Coeds Are Learning To Make Home Repairs; Can Now Manage Dripping Faucets, Sagging Doors

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Household Editor

THE HANDYMAN is going to be the "feller who won't be stumped" when the doorknob wobbles off, or the radio dial slips a vertebra. And no doubt it is the homemaker who will be the "handyman" to come to the rescue and repair those household ailments.

Martha Ellyn

We must all recognize that the things we now possess are going to have to do us for the duration in most instances, what with new restrictions being made constantly. If you don't know how to go about repairing such things as broken doorknobs, screen breaks and sagging doors, take a lesson from the senior co-eds, Home Management Class, College of Home Economics, Maryland University, who have many prescriptions for ailing household equipment.

The students of this class learn, while living for five weeks during their senior year in the practice house, about marketing, laundering, cleaning, cooking, entertaining and all the phases of a home life unit. But this year the home management course has been revamped to fit our changing life. Miss Marie Mount, dean of the College of Home Economics, feels that the college girls' courses should be adjusted to fit them for war-time conditions, particularly household economy.

As practiced at Maryland University, household economy means special care of equipment of home furnishings on hand; conservation of time and energy as well as material; careful expenditure of the food dollar. In this way Miss Mount believes that the students can become more efficient, resourceful and practical, and so be better able to cope with household emergencies that will arise in war times.

Efficient Resourceful

Under the guidance of Mrs. Curry N. Kapels, Advisor, Home Management House, this year's seniors have also learned about the "breakdowns" that can occur in household machinery, and what procedure to follow to put the item back into circulation.

A dripping faucet is an annoyance. But it is nothing to get into a stew about, for usually a new washer will stop the dripping. While repairing a dripping faucet recently, it occurred to me that there are many household ills that can be adjusted by the homemaker if she would acquaint herself with home remedies. So I asked two students, Miss Doris Clements, Cheverly Md., and Miss Martha Rainalter, Cumberland, Md., of this home management class what they had learned about the respiratory system of a house.

Their findings are just what the doctor would order for minor ailments—home remedies. Doris Clements was put into the role of "handyman" of the practice house. She has been doing all the jobs the man of the house would ordinarily do. Anyone who keeps house knows of the irritations of sagging bureau drawers, of clothes hamper hinges that lose their "grip," of screen door fasteners that get wiggly, of doorknobs that break off. These were all activities of the project Doris has been mastering.

Doris' Repairs Cost $2.23

The following are the activities with a total cost of $2.23 for the repairs that Doris made while working on her handyman project: Soldering two broken doorknobs; replacement of bottoms in 10 bureau and desk drawers; replacement of four knobs on drawers; repair of clothes hamper hinge; new fasteners on two screen doors.

Martha Rainalter, majoring in clothing and textiles, included in her project the reupholstering of ten dining-room chairs with cream antique leatherette fabric. The cost of the material for this project was $3.

Anyone who wants to learn to be a handyman can find excellent guidance in books which show the easiest, most economical and efficient way, such as "The Household Handbook" by Helen C. Wright; "The Home Owner's Handbook," by C. B. Smith, and "America's Housekeeping Book," compiled by the New York Herald-Tribune Institute under the direction of Eloise Davison.

In "America's Housekeeping Book" is a section, "Repairs the Amateur Can Make," that gives suggestions on tools for tinkering, doors and windows, refinishing and repairing furniture, miscellaneous tinkering jobs, and painting. These chapters give illustrations as well as telling the way to make the repairs.

Average Diet Needs Changes, But Not Many

By Ida Jean Kain

WE switched from kerosene to kilowatts with lightning speed. We were delighted to trade the back porch pump for chromium-plated taps and to change from washtub to bathtub bathing. We've snatched at every modern improvement that has ever come our way—with the exception of nutrition.

On that score, most of you are inclined to argue that what was good enough for your grandfather is good enough for you. He never heard of a vitamin, was never sick a day in his life, and lived to be 90.

Good Old Days

He may never have heard of a vitamin. But if he lived that long, you can be sure he got his share. Back in the "good old days" people were not so refined about their eating. They had coarse whole grain cereal and bread and ate very little sugar. For sweetening they used sorghum and heavy brown sugar. The family kept a cow and everybody had milk to drink. And they grew their own vegetables—and ate them.

But you could'nt keep the next generation down on the farm. At about the same time they moved to town, the machinery that refined flour, sugar and cereal was brought out and it took the punch out of the average diet.

And then what? We began to find out about deficiency diseases. And these brought hte vitamins to light. It's 30 years now that the scientists have nown what is good for you. But instead of accepting nutrition as you have the other improvements, you still have to be resold on the idea practcally every day in the week. You are inclined to resent the very idea that anyone should try to make a change in your food habits.

Food Habits Inherited

The reason you are so stubborn about it is easily seen. You didn't inherit your food habits from your grandfather. You inherited them from your mother a.. father, who learned to like refined foods. You imagine nutriton takes all the fun out of eating.

The faster you get over that notion the longer you will live. There are really very few changes that have to be made in the average diet to turn it into a good one. But these are extremely important.

Make a habit of taking 100 per cent whole wheat bread and cereals or the enriched kind. See to it that you get a green leafy or a yellow vegetable every day in addition to potatoes. Go back to drinking at least one pint of mlk a day, and have a citrus fruit or juice every day. These, along with the other protective foods—meat, meat organs or fish, an egg, a green salad and dairy products—should be the mainstay of your daily menus.

Wanderlust Club Gives Yearly Banquet

THE WANDERLUST TRAVEL CLUB held its annual banquet last night at 7:30 o'clock at Hayden Farm, Silver Spring, Md. The theme was "See Washington," and the program featured ideas for stay-at-home vacations and in town sightseeing for those who remain in the city because of war conditions, gas rationing, essential employment, and other factors.

The purpose was to bring out in serious and humorous ways, Washington's own undiscovered charm and overlooked attractions for the benefit of those who have neglected hometown resources. Particular stress was placed upon the appropriateness and practicality of making the most of local opportunities this year and becoming acquainted with the perhaps unfamiliar "World's Greatest National Capital."

Toastmistress was Miss Dagmar Christensen. Honorary members who were guests included Mrs. Nell Smith, president of the American Pen Women's League; Mrs. Laura Waters, head of the Waters Travel Service; and Mrs. Ridgely Chapline, member of the National Society of Women Geographers.

As the main part of the program, Mrs. Chapline showed her motion pictures, "Around the Seasons in Washington." The program included a "Capital Quizz" in which all club members took part, and the singing of the Travel Club song. Chairman of dinner arrangements were Mrs. Freddie Balthis, assisted by Misses Marion and Irma Weiser.

Miss Carol Arnold, club president, conducted the intallation of new officers at the conclusion of the program. Incoming officers are Miss Frances Fox, president; Miss Mary Sue Callicott, vice president; Miss Martha Keough, recording secretary, and Miss Dorothy Shepherd, relected treasurer.

Outgoing officers are Miss Carol Arnold, president; Miss May Hickey, vice president and editor of Lusty News; Miss Winifred Ing, corresponding secretary, and Miss Margaret Williamson, recording secretary. Committee chairman have been Mrs. Freddie Balthis and Mrs. Martha Keough, and Misses Ann Wetteroth, Alice Matthews, and Dorothy Bowers.

Blue and Cyclamen

Hollywood, Calif.—Lunching at the Hollywood Brown Derby, Irene Manning, lovely Warner Bros. songstress of "Yankee Doodle Dandy," looked extremely smart in a powder-blue wool suit and cyclamen accessories. The fitted jacket of the suit featured a rounded shoulder yoke and edgings at the front closing and pockets piped in cyclamen.

Wartime White

Hollywood, Calif.—Ann Sheridan, dining at the Mocambo, wore her new wartime-white dress—so called because no chlorine bleach is used in the material, thus making it a creamy white. Ann's was a wool crepe with deep-armholed sleeves and side panels to the hem line of cocoa brown. Her brown turban was accented at the back with three gardenias.

Miss Corbin Entertains Informally for Miss Mitchell; Connallys Being Widely Feted

"ESTA ES SU CASA" (this is your house) is a sentence scrawled across one pink wall of the Mexican bar at the Wyoming Avenue home of Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Clifford Lee Corbin . . . and a number of guests took it literally when they stopped in yesterday for the "after 6 o'clock" get-together given by Miss Dolly Corbin and made themselves at home for well over two hours.

The party was in honor of Miss Ann Mitchell, who with her mother, Mrs. J. T. H. Mitchell, recently arrived from Palm Beach. Primarily a younger set gathering, the company included just enough oldsters to add an authentic Capital flavor, and more than the usual quota of young Army and Navy officers. Miss Corbin received wherever she happened to be. Her mother, Mrs. Corbin, and Mrs. Charles O. Bruce, the former Edythe Corbin, also helped to greet the guests. New and handsome faces, smiling above uniforms, seemed to be all over the place. Half a dozen clustered around the hostess, Ann Mitchell, Kitty Hill and Natalie Keeney Phillips . . . Mrs. Mitchell observed that scores of her friends were in Washington for the duration and that she felt more at home here than at her real home in Greenwich, Conn. . . . Robert Portner said that he would report for Army duty on Monday. . . . "How does your garden grow?" somebody asked George Renchard when he and Mrs. Renchard came in. "Never better," he replied. "I've just come from there." . . . Among others dropping in for the pleasant party were Mr. and Mrs. Van Lear Black (he's with OPA), Denys Smith, Robert C. Waggaman and at least a couple of dozen more.

Connallys Have Housing Problem

Senator and Mrs. Tom Connally are faced with a housing situation quite out of line with the usual complaints you hear around Washington . . . Instead of not being able to find a place in which to live—they have two . . . For some time, the Senator has been at home in a spacious eleventh-floor apartment at the La Salle . . . After disposing of her house on Nineteenth Street several months ago, the former Mrs. Morris Sheppard moved into a room at the Wardman Park.

Senator Connally

Now arises A Problem . . . The Senator loves his skyward domicile, but his bride loathes elevators . . . Walking up that many flights is entirely out of the question . . . So-o-o, for the time being, Mrs. Connally is keeping her second-floor room at the Wardman Park, and the Senator's address is still The La Salle . . . Chances are, he and his wife will be buying a house before long.

Meanwhile, parties a-plenty are piling up, in honor of the newlyweds. Mrs. George Mesta will give a dinner for them at the Sulgrave Club tomorrow night. William Lea, of Orange, Tex., was host at a dinner for the couple on Monday evening at the Raleigh. Mrs. Roy Miller gathered in a small company for luncheon in honor for Mrs. Connally yesterday. Last night, however, the Senator and his bride passed up parties in favor of the circus; in fact, they had already obtained tickets before Col. James W. Flanagan, their old friend from Canada, blew into town and invited them to dine with him at the Mayflower . . . "Just can't run the risk of being late to the circus," was what the Senator said, in effect, when he turned down the invitation. As he sees it—Washington dinners you have always with you, but the circus comes but once a year . . .

Mrs. Connally

Two New Hats in Political Ring

Purely political: Looks as if at least two "faces" that have been familiar ones at the Department of the Interior for some time will be looking out on vast throngs of prospective voters in the next few months. Any day now, you can expect to see the announcement that Assistant Secretary of the Interior Oscar Chapman has thrown his hat into the senatorial race in Colorado. . . . He knows politics, and particularly Colorado politics, from away back, having been campaign manager of the late Senator Costigan. Besides, he's to have as an active helper his attractive wife, who has been brushing up on her Spanish all winter so she could take to the stump and talk to Spanish-speaking voters in those parts in their own language. . . . Also out to make time with the voters is John J. Dempsey, the Undersecretary of the Interior, who is running for the Governorship of his home State, New Mexico. . . . Friends of the Dempseys here are torn between the hope that Jack gets what he wants and the desire to have him and his attractive wife stay on in Washington.

Mme. Pastoriza Honored by Mme. Espaillat

Popular Senora de Pastoriza, wife of the former Minister of the Dominican Republic, Andres Pastoriza, was the guest of honor at a 6 to 8 o'clock party at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday afternoon at which Mme. Ulises Espaillat was hostess.

About 60 guests, largely from diplomatic and residential circles, dropped in during the afternoon to say hello to Senora de Pastoriza, who has been visiting here for several weeks. On Monday she will attend the graduation of her daughter, Senorita Matilde Pastoriza, from Arlington Hall, and that same day she and her attractive daughter will entrain for New York. After spending a few weeks in New York, they will return to their home in Santa Domingo.

Among those in the late afternoon gathering yesterday were the Turkish Ambassador and Mme. Ertegun, the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, the Guatemalan Minister and Senora de Recinos, the Minister of Honduras and Senora de Caceres, the Dominican Minister and Senora de Troncoso, the First Secretary of the Dominican Legation, Dr. Julio Vega Batlle, Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Senora de Munilla, whose husband, Col. Felipe Munilla, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, is out of town; the Counselor of the Cuban Embassy, Dr. Vicente Valdes Rodriguez and many others.

Mrs. Robert Gives Dinner; Takes Guests to Circus

Dinner, followed by a visit to the circus, was on schedule for guests of Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert last night. Entertaining in honor of Mr. and Mrs. John Ringling North and Henry North, Mrs. Robert was hostess at dinner at the 1925 F Street Club. Later the company went on to the circus.

In the party were Assistant Attorney-General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold, Admiral and Mrs. George Pettengill, William McEvoy, Mr. and Mrs. Drew Pearson, Tom Johnson (who lent Mrs. Robert the much-publicized "jeep," which has now been turned back to the Army) and Prince and Princess Alexis Zalewski of Poland who are guests of the Norths on their private car.

Mr. Robert, who is away on a business trip, is expected to return to Washington today, and this afternoon he and Mrs. Robert will entertain at a cocktail party in honor of Mr. and Mrs. North.

Mrs. Dorothy Ward To Fete Mrs. Watson

Mrs. Dorothy Lee Ward, who returned to her Washington home last week after spending the winter in Miami Beach, will entertain at a luncheon today in honor of Mrs. Kenneth Watson, who will leave soon to join her husband in New York.

Among the guests will be Representative Katherine Byron, Mrs. M. Robert Guggenheim, Baroness Stackleberg, Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Mrs. Carlos Nagel, Mrs. Lee Murphy, Mrs. Royce Powell, Mrs. W. Newbold Walmsley, Mrs. Richard Cutts, Mrs. Jack Opie 3d, Countess Cassini, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. McCeney Werlich and Miss Betty Hynes.

Mrs. Ward, who plans to remain in the Capital through the summer, is busy refurnishing the fourth floor of her home for four "victory guests"—all young men in the Air Corps. Mrs. Ward is planning a garden party for them in the near future.

Feers Give Afternoon Party In Honor of the Hostess

By Elizabeth Henney

The party was really in honor of the hostess, because, as she explained, she has just become a junior in medical college and having passed all her examinations, simply had to celebrate. And there was no prouder person in the place yesterday than the host, Edward A. Feer, Counselor of the Swiss Legation, who beamed at his clever young wife all afternoon.

Technically a 5:30 to 7:30 affair, guests found the hospitality so warming and the weather so fine, that they lingered long after official closing time.

Receiving informally, as did her husband, wherever she happened to be, Mme. Feer wore a blue and white spring print frock, fashioned with short sleeves and a V neckline. With it she wore swung by a woven gold chain from her neck, an enormous topaz, in a sunburst setting of gold, a family heirloom piece.

Mme. Marc Peter, wife of the former Minister of Switzerland, was among the early arrivals, and explained that her husband, who has been appointed an international delegate to the Red Cross, had just left a few hours before for Texas, where he will inspect camps for the Red Cross.

Another early arrival who lingered on was Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the present Minister of Switzerland, who was recalling with a friend the days when they were Girl Scouts together in Washington in the famous Troop 8 whose captain was Mrs. Herbert Hoover. Mme. Bruggmann, at that time Miss Mary Wallace, was the daughter of a Cabinet officer, Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, and sister of another Henry Wallace, who was to fill his father's post before going on to the Vice Presidency.

The Fletcher Warrens of the State Department were receiving congratulations and bon voyage on all sides, upon his recent appointment as assistant to Arthur Bliss Lane, who will be our envoy to Bogota, Colombia. They are expecting to leave at practically any moment.

Still others in the party were Mme. Kleijn Molekamp, wife of the Commercial Counselor of the Netherlands Legation; Mme. Cervenka, wife of the Counselor of the Czecho-Slovakian Legation; Dr. Vladimir Rybar, Counselor of the Yugoslavian Legation; Mrs. Merchant Mahoney, wife of the Counselor of the Canadian Legation; Wallace Murray of the State Department; H. Charles Spruks of the State Department, and many more.

A wreath will be placed on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier by Chapeau Departmental Virginia McCarthy, and six other wreaths will be laid for deceased members by partners of the salon. Ten ushers will be furnished by the salon, as has been customary in the past.

Special donations were voted on at the last meeting of the local Eight and Forty to the national organization—$10 toward the May Day fund, $5 for the special project fund and $5 toward the National Jewish Hospital, which fund is used throughout the Nation for child welfare work. This is the fund from which $1000 is taken and donated to the American Legion, and is called the Jewel Box.

Mrs. Dorothy B. Harper, partnership chairman, and her committee, will be the hostesses to the nine new members at the annual wreck, to be held at the Legion Home on Saturday, June 6. Festivities will open with a friendship dinner at 6 o'clock.

The District of Columbia Salon announces that Chapeau Departmental Mrs. McCarthy will serve as national page, having been one of the first five States to reach its membership quota.

The annual Marche Departementale of the local Eight and Forty will be held at the American Legion Clubhouse on Sunday, August 23. The customary two-day session will be dispensed with for the convenience of the partners. The Marche will commence at 2:30 p. m. Mrs. Allen Louise Warren, Chapeau National Passe, will be the general chairman of the convention.

Home Tourists Will Know Their City

HOW WELL do you know Washington? Can you name the places to know as glibly as the sightseeing guides? The Wanderlust Travel Club intends that its members shall become familiar with the Nation's Capital. Tuesday evening at the club's annual banquet, 7:30 o'clock at Hayden Farm, Silver Spring, Md., the program featured ideas for a stay-at-home vacation.

Purpose of the program is to bring out in serious and humorous ways, Washington's own undiscovered or overlooked attractions. Now that gas rationing, essential employment make stay-at-home vacations most practical, the club puts particular stress upon the desirability of learning the city this summer.

As a main part of the evening's program, Mrs. Ridgely Chapline, members of the National Society of Woman Geographers, showed her motion pictures, "Around the Seasons in Washington." Also, the program included a Capital quizz in which all club members participated, and the singing of the travel song.

At the conclusion of the program, Miss Carol Arnold, club president, installed new officers. Miss Frances Fox was installed as president and Miss Mary Sue Callicott as vice president.

Girls Today Have More Opportunity to Serve In War Work, Gunston Hall Principal Says

LIKE the school girls of World War 1, college students today are rallying eagerly to war work. Only difference between then and now is that there is now a broader field for young women. So remarked Miss Mary B. Kerr, principal of Gunston Hall School, who will be a popular figure at the school's golden jubilee celebration Saturday through Tuesday June 2.

Referring to the reaction of the present day schoolgirl toward the war Miss Kerr said. "On December 8, the first question each girl posed was 'What can I do to help?' I recall that was the same question college girls asked at the outbreak of World War 1. The urgent desire to serve, to participate in vital activity is the same, but the girls have more opportunities than their mothers."

Miss Mary B. Kerr

Miss Kerr smiles when anyone asks her that much debated question: What do you think of the young people today?

To this one she replied: "Why they are very like young girls since time began, only a little finer, more honest. Also, they look at life more realistically and are more eager to take advantage of whatever opportunities come their way."

It is difficult to realize how many more openings there are for girls today than in World War 1, according to Miss Kerr, who added, "Unless you actually struggled with that man-made world back at the turn of the century."

Despite the present trend to regimentation in education, this educator still believes that accent should be on individual training.

Miss Kerr came to Gunston Hall in 1912 as a teacher. Later she became coprincipal and now is principal of the school.

Mrs. Daniel Entertains Pen Women

GAY, bright colored dresses of the guests rivaled the brillance of variegated flowers yesterday when Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel entertained members of the D. C. National League of American Pen Women. The fete—a gala lawn party was held at the hostess' home near Rock Creek Park.

Guests of honor were: Mrs. Victoria Faber Stevenson, who will serve as national president of the National League of American Pen Women, and the retiring president, Mrs. E. Richard Gasch. Mrs. Stevenson held the same office for 1934-36. Also sharing honors were: Mrs. William Walter (Nelle Van D.) Smith, newly elected president of the D. C. branch and Mrs. H. Lyle Campbell, the retiring president.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel

Mrs. Daniel, a member of the league, is popular in club circles. Now director of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, she also has served as president of the District Federation.

Delectable ices, tea, coffee and cakes were served in the dining room, which was decorated with red roses, white peonies and blue iris. Further carrying out the patriotic motif, Mrs. Daniel wore a blue and white print frock and a red corsage.

Assisting at the tea table were the following league members: Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mrs. Jesse W. Nicholson, past president of the Chevy Chase Branch of the league, and Mrs. Edgar B. Meritt.

Also, Mrs. Charles Cleveland Tyler, Mrs. Thomas Cajigas, Mrs. Theodore H. Tiller, Mrs. Leroy W. Tilton, Mrs. William W. Scott, Mrs. Ida Elaine James, Mrs. Arthur Seaton, Mrs. Merle Lyon, Mrs. Minnie L. Briggs, Mrs. Bruce Baird and Mrs. Eva Grant Marshall.

D. A. R. Turns Over Rooms to Red Cross

GETTING DOWN to practicalities in its wartime program, the National Society, Daughters of the American Revolution turned over two large conference rooms to the American Red Cross yesterday, according to announcement by Mrs. William H. Pouch, president general.

One of the rooms turned over was the national board room, second floor of Memorial Continental Hall, which was released by the State of Connecticut. The other room released for Red Cross activities is the national officers clubroom, second floor, Administration Building.

Last summer when the Red Cross was starting to expand its activities, the D. A. R. turned over the spacious corridors of Constitution Hall to office workers. The corridors and the lounge were occupied until the Red Cross obtained other quarters for its enlarged forces.

The D. A. R. War Relief Service Center, located in Memorial Continental Hall, under the direction of the District of Columbia D. A. R., with Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, State chairman of American Red Cross Committee in charge, will be open each Tuesday and Thursday evening, until 9 o'clock for women Government workers who desire to assist in Red Cross work; and also for those who would like to drop in for the relaxation of reading or writing.

A POEM in tribute to the late Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, who was active in the poetry group of the American Association of University Women, has been written by Louise Hovde Mortensen, a member of the group. Dr. Smith died unexpectedly Friday of a heart attack. Mrs. Mortensen's poem follows:

DR. CARRIE WEAVER SMITH

Dr. Smith is dead, they said, and yet to me
The words fall strange upon my ears today;
Last week I heard her talk of poesy,
The surge and thunder of the Odyssey,
A conflict there, she said, between the war
Which draws men from their homes to slay and kill,
And woman's love which draws them back once more
To love and peaceful arts and so fulfill
The plan. Now she has met Persephone,
And wanders with the poets of the past;
Greek bard and English poet both agree
And bid her welcome to their dark repast

They will not leave her in the dark to roam
Whose spirit-haunted bookshop was their home

Democratic Club Session Postponed

Although the Chevy Chase Women's Democratic Club had scheduled a meeting for Monday night June 1, at the home of Mrs. Edwin A. Merrit, president of the club, the event has been postponed until a later date.

Blue Triangle Club To Give Play

IF YOU work for the Government you know all about this standing in line business:

To eat!
To get on a bus!
To get your pay check cashed!
To get into the wash room!
To see your favorite movie stars on the screen!

It's just one line after another, and members of the Blue Triangle Club of the Y. W. C. A. are presenting an original playlet entitled "The Line of Your Life" at its closing banquet tonight in Barker Hall. The skit satirizes the more hectic side of a business girl's routine as she battles her way from line to line in her daily living. The dialogue was written by Miss Emma Humphrey and Miss May Kesmodel, and the playlet will be directed by Lucile Bockhold, the chairman of the banquet committee.

Another feature of the evening's program will be the installation of the new Blue Triangle Club officers. These are:

MISSION TO MOSCOW
BY THE FORMER U. S. AMBASSADOR TO RUSSIA
JOSEPH E. DAVIES
A record of confidential dispatches to the State Department, official and personal correspondence, diary and journal entries, including notes and comment up to October, 1941.

THE GREATEST CRISIS in world history is now taking place. Important key to that crisis is Soviet Russia. And the key to Soviet Russia is "Mission to Moscow," written by former U. S. Ambassador to the U. S. S. R., Joseph E. Davies.

"Mission to Moscow" unlocks the secrets of confidential State Department dispatches, Embassy diaries and off-the-record letters to President Roosevelt. It tells why the Russians have been able to take everything Hitler could throw against them and come back fighting to shatter the legend of Nazi invincibility. It answers our most vital questions—Does the Soviet Union keep its obligations as a nation? Is it an ally we can trust after the war?

The timeliness of the topic and the unquestionable authority of the writer have made "Mission to Moscow" a continued best-seller throughout America. And now, The Washington Post is making "Mission to Moscow" available to all its readers. Starting Monday, June 8, The Post will publish the complete book in serial form. Be sure to read it.

Spending Your Vacation at Home?

Ways Still Available to Sight See; Historic Home Tour Scheduled

(Because of wartime restrictions on gasoline, annual leave and—just around the corner—train and bus travel, stay-at-home vacations may be the rule here this summer. This is the fifth in a series by Mr. Kelly describing recreational opportunities in the Capital's own backyard.)

By Edward J. Kelly

Administrative Officer, National Capital Parks

The annual tour of historic Colonial homes in Alexandria, scheduled for June 6, focuses attention on the Capital's environs as fair game for the sightseeing vacationer.

True, the sightseeing bus will be retired on June 1 for the duration, by orders of the Office of Defense Transport. Between buses and streetcars, however, ways are still available to take in outlying points of interest, as well as those in the District.

For example, a bus line will carry you direct from downtown Washington to Mount Vernon. Trips leave from the A. B. & W. terminal at Tenth and D Streets Northwest at scheduled intervals throughout the day. The route traverses the George Washington Memorial Parkway, beautifully landscaped with plant materials native to the region and favorites of George and Martha Washington.

Mrs. Henry Seay on the steps of her colonial home, 305 Cameron Street.

The highway passes the ruins of Abingdon, birthplace of Nellie Custis; Wellington Villa, former home of Tobias Lear, secretary and political adviser to President Washington, and many other places of historic interest before arriving at America's No. 1 patriotic shrine, Mount Vernon.

Returning by bus, stop off in historic Alexandria, founded in 1748, and spend an hour strolling around. the brick sidewalks that will carry you past Christ Church, where Washington and, later, Robert E. Lee, worshiped; the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier of the American Revolution; Carlyle House; Ramsey House, and a hundred other places of architectural charm and historic interest, were laid by Hessian prisoners during the American Revolution. The quaint homes facing on the cobblestoned streets which dip down to the waterfront remind you that the seafaring men who built them sailed the seven seas to bring back the cargoes which once made Alexandria a port of world importance.

Gadsby's Tavern furnished Washington with quarters to recruit the brigade which he led on his ill-fated move against Fort Duquesne as a young, red-jacketed lieutenant serving the redoubtable Braddock. Leadbeater's Drug Store, patronized by the Washingtons, the Lees, the Fitzgeralds, the Fairfaxes, the Masons, and the hundreds of Alexandria patriots whose descendants still make their homes in the community, is preserved as a museum typifying the old apothecary shops which fulfilled a duty to Americans of an earlier day.

Returning to Washington by easy stages do not fail to stop over at the Washington National Airport. The bus will deliver you to the door of the Airport Building, and there is no better show in Washington than here. Statesmen, foreign diplomats, Hollywood stars, leaders in sports and business, the arts and science pour in and out of the gates which guard the arriving and departing planes.

It is cool and pleasant on the shaded balcony overlooking the runways every afternoon, and if the commercial lines do not hold all your interest, there is always a parade of service planes at the Anacostia Naval Air Station and the Army's Bolling Field, just across the river. There is only one restriction—no cameras—but plenty for your eyes to see.

If you are a good traveler you might be able to crowd a visit to Arlington National Cemetery and Lee Mansion National Memorial.

AT CAMP TYSON, Tenn., men are being trained today to sail and repair the huge cigar-shaped gas bags which are flown as an aerial stockade against attacking bombers. Here is the Barrage Balloon Training Center of the Army. Anchored and controlled by a single, steel cable attached to a motor-driven winch, the balloons are flown above essential harbors, power plants, bridges, rail terminals, industrial centers and overseas bases. Held at low altitudes, they can be released to great heights in a few minutes to prevent enemy planes from bombing at low altitudes. Stations May Be Out of Gas This Weekend

Whether you hold an "X" card, a "B-3" card or even the lowly "A" card, you may find your neighborhood gasoline dealer may not be able to supply you with gasoline over Memorial Day and Sunday.

Service station operators reported last night that the situation looks "bad," and Harry Wainwright, of the Gasoline Dealers Association, said some motorists might have to "shop around" before they found a station with full tanks.

Officials of the American Automobile Association and the Keystone Automobile Club said their surveys showed that some stations already are restricting gasoline sales, and some will be out entirely by Sunday.

Replenishment Next Week

Since the War Production Board has limited each dealer to 50 per cent of normal supplies, in 10-day periods, acute conditions have existed since the order went into effect, said Wainwright. This Sunday ends the 10-day gas period, and many stations will not be able to get additional gasoline before Monday or Tuesday, he pointed out.

However, Wainwright said, there is nothing alarming about the situation. Many operators have all the gas they can sell, while some stations will be virtually dry.

In this connection, M. E. Edlavitch, operating the Atlantic Garage and Service Stations, asserted last night that his four stations "were bubbling over with gas." I would like to sell 20,000 to 30,000 gallons of gas before Monday, so I can get my new quota," he said.

The situation was more alarming at stations servicing commercial vehicles than at those catering to the passenger car trade, it was said.

A survey by the Keystone Club, Manager George E. Keneipp stated, showed that some dealers have set up a daily quota plan, selling a certain amount each day, and no more when that limit was reached. Others are considering it, he added. If the plan were adopted for the entire city, it would make for more equitable distribution, he pointed out.

Indianans Issue Statement

Swamped with expressions of extreme criticism prompted by reports that gasoline rationing was being seriously considered for the Middle West, Republican Congressional members from Indiana, issued a statement yesterday, deploring the proposed edict.

"In the last few months," said the statement, "reports have been coming out of Washington to the effect that gasoline rationing, which has been imposed on 17 Eastern States because of shipping facilities on the Atlantic Coast, is to be extended to the Middle West. To many of us this seems rather strange when it is considered that there is a most plentiful supply of gasoline available in that area. Our supplies in the Middle West come principally by pipelines. They are not in any difficulty.

"Rationing should go no further than is necessary to enable us to put forth our peak war effort, and to guarantee equitable distribution of essential commodities in those areas where the demand is greater than the available supply."

Adding his voice to the protests, Senator Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin, told the Senate yesterday there was no need for gasoline rationing in the Midwest and called for a straightforward account of the Nation's war situation.

"We should think twice before attempting to do anything drastic with respect to rationing gasoline in areas in which gasoline is plentiful and also is not needed in the war effort," he asserted.

Relief for the oil-less East was seen yesterday when the Rules Committee of the House ordered two hours' debate today and then a vote on the bill to provide for an oil pipeline and a barge canal across Florida and for improvement and extension of the Gulf Coast inland waterway.

Lives Believed Saved by Fire On Normandie

By John Elliott

Copyright by New York Tribune Inc.

The fire that resulted in the capsizing of the 79,000-ton U. S. S. Lafayette, formerly the Normandie, in New York Harbor on February 9 was really a blessing in disguise, according to a report submitted to the Senate yesterday by its Naval Affairs Committee.

If the original intention of converting this French liner into a troopship had been carried successfully to completon, the committee found, the lives of 15,000 American soldiers might have been lost at sea owing to the well known instability of the vessel. The finding of the Senate Investigating Committee was especially interesting in view of the decision taken by the Navy last week to proceed with the salvaging of the Normandie, which now lies in the mud at Pier 88 in New York Harbor.

"There is prima facie evidence to give rise to the thought that the ship's construction, lack of compartmentation, and known instability made it inadvisable to use the vessel for a transport upon which the lives and safety of 15,000 American boys on any voyage were dependent," the Senate report stated.

Bureau of Ships Blamed

The report gave rise to a demand on the floor of the Senate that its Naval Affairs Committee inquire as to whether or not it is expedient to proceed with the task of salvaging the Normandie.

The Senate also took immediate cognizance of the report by confirming without a dissenting voice the nomination of Adolphus Andrews, commander of the "Eastern sea front," to be a vice admiral. The committee found that this naval officer had no responsibility for the burning of the French liner. Admiral Andrews was the commanding officer of the Third Naval District when that distaster occurred.

The report blamed specifically the Navy Bureau of Ships in Washington for the Normandie disaster, stating that it had ordered the work of converting the big liner into a troop ship to be rushed to completion by February 14 so that she could sail to Boston on the following day. This order was issued, it said, over the strong protests of Capt. Clayton M. Simmers, district material officer, and Capt. Robert G. Coman, her prospective commander.

"Unreasonable Limitations"

On this subject the Senate report said in scathing terms that "the work was unduly accelerated through decisions made by the United States Navy Bureau of Ships in Washington by persons in authority who were not on the scene, who had no personal knowledge of the work entailed, yet placed unreasonable time limitations on those charged with the actual burden of doing the work and in the face of advice to the contrary by subordinate Navy officers who were on the scene and fully acquainted with the difficulties involved."

The result of this decision in Washington, according to the committee's finding, was that "in order to keep pace with the order, the contractor was compelled to employ additional workmen hastily, particularly fire watchers, most of whom had no experience for the type of work which they were to perform and little or no time for specific training in their duties."

Layman Held Who Performed Major Operatons Successfully

By the Associated Press

Chico, Calif., May 27.—A former convict, without medical training, who posed his way into a high position on a hospital staff and successfully performed major operations, pleaded guilty today to practicing medicine without a license.

The 47-year-old man then was arrested on a charge of having concealed weapons in violation of California's gun law and was held in lieu of $5000 bail.

Listed as Arthur Osborne Phillips, he was identified by Special State Officer Joseph W. Williams, as having prison records in Georgia, Alabama, Maryland, Idaho, New York and Pennsylvania.

Williams said Phillips, posing as Dr. James Herman Phillips, had fooled both doctors and patients with his ability to perform abdominal operations, unassisted, during the two months he has been assistant chief surgeon on the Enloe Hospital in Chico

Williams' suspicions were aroused by Phillips' practice of initialing his prescriptions. California law requires the doctor's full name.

Williams said Phillips operated with credentials belonging to Dr. James Herman Phillips, former Army surgeon now in a Tennessee hospital. He obtained these by pretending he was the real Dr. Phillips and claiming he had lost the documents, Williams asserted.

Phillips who came to Chico only two months ago, was earning $250 a month as a hospital doctor and rapidly developing a private practice.

New Zealand's Aid Stressed

The extremely important position of New Zealand in Allied strategy was stressed last night when Walter Nash, Minister from that country, told University of Chicago alumni club members that if Japan annexed the country one fourth of Britain's food supply would be cut off. "But," he added, determinedly, "it would be Japan's greatest problem to make the citizens of New Zealand produce for them anything near the amount they now produce."

He hit an ominous note when, in describing the natural beauty and geographical advantages of New Zealand in travel pamphlet style, he mentioned the countless beaches that now offer themselves for pleasure would be grand invasion points for tanks and barges.

Before leaving the subject of New Zealand's war position, Nash emphasized that the New Zealanders were fighting as a sovereign nation.

Severely contrasted to his discussion of the war was the Minister's description of New Zealand's living conditions and social security plan. He told of the free hospitalization and free maternity care that everyone enjoys in the country, and of the thoroughly effective and satisfying social security plan which took care of the people comfortably when they reached 60.

In concluding his talk he gave further proof of New Zealand's "steadiness within" when he revealed that all commodities were at the prewar level.

Officers elected at the club meeting, which was held in the Kennedy-Warren and presided over by James O. Murdock, were Robert Todd McKinlay, president; Elva Marquard, John Fisher and W. M. Gewehr, vice presidents; Mrs. C. D. Blachly, secretary; Gertrude Lewis, treasurer, and Archibold Blake, assistant treasurer.

Ex-Policeman Owen Cooney's Funeral Today,

Funeral services for Owen Cooney, who during his lifetime served as a policeman in both his native Ireland and the United States, will be held at 10 a. m. today in St. Anthony's Church, Twelfth and Monroe Streets Northeast. Burial will be in Holy Rood Cemetery.

Mr. Cooney, who was 89, died Tuesday at Soldiers' Home Hospital, where he had been a patient for one year.

He was born in Ireland and on reaching manhood joined the British army and served several years in Egypt as a cavalryman. Later he was a policeman in Dublin and then, in his early 30's, came to this country and enlisted in the United States Army and served four years at Fort Myer.

Shortly after his discharge in 1891, he joined the Metropolitan police force and remained with that body until his retirement in 1917 as a private. He spent most of his police career at the Third Precinct but, for a short time, was attached to the Ninth.

His wife, the former Margaret Kelly also was a native of Ireland.

School Board Vetoes Khaki Cadet Uniform

Despite the war and the prospective increased cost of their blue uniforms, local high school cadets will not shift to khaki, the Board of Education ruled yesterday.

Little advantage would be gained by the change, a committee on student activities decided. The proposal before them was whether or not a khaki outfit, costing slightly less than $11 should be ordered to replace the blue dress uniforms. Estimates were made that the cost of present blue uniforms will be $7 to $8 more next year, or in the case of officers, about $33.

Board members believed that from 200 to 300 blue uniforms must be purchased at the new rate, and felt that the shift to khaki, while having its advantages in calisthenics and extended order drills, would have to be bought by a much larger group of cadets, who already have their blues.

Another proposal before a board committee was a relaxation of board rules to permit duly authorized civilian defense committees to stage benefit programs in school buildings and grounds to raise funds for civilian defense paraphanalia.

A second was a change in the set up of the school budget to reduce the number of appropriations from more than 30 to seven.

Family, Child Welfare Units Plan Activity

Washington leaders in family and child welfare work took stock of their problems yesterday and resolved to redouble efforts to solve them.

Meeting jointly at the Y. W. C. A., the family and child welfare divisions of the Council of Social Agencies adopted a resolution opposing a ceiling on public assistance grants to needy families.

Such limitations are "unfair and restrictive," the meeting was told by Conrad Van Hyning, director of the Board of Public Welfare.

Members of the two groups heard of increasing need for doctors, nurses and case workers in children's institutions; a critical shortage of foster homes, and mounting demands by working mothers seeking day nursery service for their children at prices they can afford to pay.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel and Mrs. Henry P. Chandler presided jointly over the meeting. Speakers included Mrs. William Kittle, president of the Council of Social Agencies; William Corley, American Legion, and committee chairmen who presented progress reports.

Mrs. Alice Senton was elected vice chairman of the child welfare division. To head the legislation and children-in-homes committees, Miss Alice Padgett and Mrs. J. C. Freeland, respectively, were elected.

Mrs. Helen Weir Martin was elected vice chairman of the family welfare division; Mrs. Mary Henderson Graham, chairman of the intake committee, and Dr. J. Lowery Fendrich, chairman of the legislation committee.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The brutal fact is that all over the baseball circuit the major league ball games for Army-Navy relief are flopping like the hammiest act, only more painfully. The vision of big crowds and a $375,000 haul for dependents of service men with 16 benefit games as the medium is now exposed as pretty dreamy wishful thinking.

POVICH

Only in Brooklyn, where Larry MacPhail sold the park out and dumped $60,000 into the coffers of the fund have the games been a financial success. The absolute nadir was plumbed the other day when only 3300 fans turned out for the game with Pittsburgh dedicated to the fund by the Phillies. That one was a sorry joke on the noble motives of the program.

Washington's benefit-game crowd of 9300 which spilled $9825 into the fund was no reason, either, for pride-taking, and at Cleveland the other day the "take" from the Indians-White Sox game was only $9300, with but 7959 fans in the park. Boston flopped, too, where only 12,000 fans saw its Relief Fund game with the Athletics. A quick summation shows that five games have netted the fund only $95,000, with the one Brooklyn-Giants game accounting for nearly 60 per cent of that total.

MacPhail did a whale of a job in his promotion, but apparently he gave the other clubs a false idea of what to expect. They didn't take into account the fact that MacPhail's game was backed by all of his promotional genius, that what he had to work with was the great natural rivalry of the Dodgers and Giants in a town that is baseball crazy. Nevertheless, he went out and hustled tickets to assure the success of his game.

Charity Angle Is Worn Out

Apparently the other clubs announced their benefit games and then rested on the announcement, expecting the public to flock to their ball parks. A charity angle has long since been working out as a crowd lure. It has been done to death. The only way to sell tickets to a charity affair is to sell tickets, unless you are promoting a supernatural attraction.

Washington's game with the Yankees which drew only 9600 to the stadium on a Saturday with Buck Newsom pitching was a horrible flop from the standpoint of a financial promotion. The Army, Navy and Marine bands gave the affair color otherwise unpurchaseable, but it was little better than a normal Saturday crowd that turned out. With a fair attraction on their hands, the men who managed the affair got the least out of it with their fine show of inertia.

It never was very clear whether Clark Griffith or the Army-Navy people were promoting the show. Anyway, a $100 investment in a press agent would have been returned tenfold. Any wildcat promoter, with such a show in his lap, would have filled the park by energetic promotion which means button-holing of customers and organizations and selling tickets in lots of 100 and up, not in driblets as was done.

"The Washington flop was no reflection on the Washington public," said one gent who seemed to talk very logically. "The man on the street wouldn't object to giving a buck-ten for Army-Navy relief if somebody asked him for it, but he may not have felt like going to all the trouble of sitting through a ball game to make his contribution. There were no tickets on sale downtown, and he had to go to the ball park if he wanted to help the fund. They made it too inconvenient to contribute."

MacPhail Is Alone as Promoter

The slim crowd was no indication either that Washington or any of the other towns where the game flopped is not charity-minded. Charity drives have been piling up on the citizenry since China war relief got under way in 1936, and it has been easy to square one's conscience with contributions to any one of dozens of relief funds. It has gotten to the point where personal solicitation is needed to assure the success of any drive.

The motives of the big league clubs in dedicating one home game each to the relief fund were noble and generous enough, but major league baseball men are notoriously poor promoters. In fact they are rank reactionaries lacking a showmanship touch except in the case of MacPhail, who is firstly a promoter and secondly a baseball man. Baseball hasn't scraped the surface of profits that would accrue if the club owners were publicity wise, like MacPhail. A charity affair in their hands is in poor hands.

Somebody in Washington missed the boat last Saturday. Where was Kate Smith? Her presence at home plate leading the crowd in the Star-Spangled Banner would have meant thousands of additional dollars for the fund. An invitation was all she probably needed to come back to her home town with her tremendous fame and crowd-drawing voice. Her name on the guest list would have outshone all the gold braid of the Army-Navy big shots who did get front row seats. Katy would have barred the door to any financial flop.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, May 27.—The papers said that Fred Fitzsimmons' final game was a short appearance earlier this season against Pittsburgh, and that he was knocked out of the box but wasn't charged with the defeat.

CONSIDINE

Baseball won't remember Fred's swansong that way, old Fred's last real appearance was great. It was dramatic. And he went down swinging, as he had always pitched and as he will always play any game. It was the third game of the 1941 World Series. He had huffed and puffed and blown the mighty Yankees down for seven innings. He had a 1-1 tie in his fat paws, and he was pitching against Marius Russo—a kid who used to save his nickels painstakingly to get enough money to sit in a bleacher seat at the Polo Grounds and watch Fred pitch when Fred was in his prime.

He looked like a winner. If either pitcher blew up, you knew that it wasn't going to be old Fitz. He'd throw them up there at the Gordons, Kellers, DiMags, Dickeys and Henrichs even if he had to throw his arm with the ball. He had never won a World Series game, though he had played in two such classics as a member of the Giants. He had lost a crusher in 1933 to the Senators, and a true heartbreaker in 1936 when he knocked down a savage grounder to the box and then couldn't run fast enough on his chubby old legs to make a play on the speedy Jake Powell at home plate. Jake was the winning run for the Yanks that day.

Now he was getting another crack at another and equally great Yankee team. It was strictly on borrowed time. Five years ago Bill Terry sent him and a chunk of cash to the Dodgers for the forgotten Tom Baker. Fitz was washed up. He was 36. He had done the Giants a lot of good, but he ran out of steam . . . TERRY DECIDED.

You older readers know how it hurts a bloke to be called or even subtly stamped "finished." Well, old Fitz felt the same. It made him hopping mad. He told his new manager, Burleigh Grimes, that he had a lot of life left in the old knuckler, and by gosh he'd prove it if they gave him a chance. They did. He won his first start—against the Giants, sweetly enough—and kept winning. Last year, deep into his borrowed time, he won 16 games. And he got another crack at the Yanks in a World Series. He was in his forty-first year.

It was a stirring, touching job he turned in against those overpowering Yankee sluggers. For a long time that afternoon at Ebbets Field—with the crowd cheering his every pitch and yelling for him when he bounced off the field with that cocky walk at the ends of innings—it looked as if old Fitz was going to lick the Yanks and put the Brooks back in the running.

Then it happened. Young Russo leaned his frame and his big bat against one of old Fitz's hard ones and slapped it as hard as he could swing. The ball was a white hot streak from the point where it left the bat to the place where it struck Fitz on the leg with a shocking force. Cut down by the drive, the old guy nevertheless managed to scramble after the ball and threw out Russo.

That was all. He cursed his luck, with silent misery, and presently walked off the field. At least at first it was a walk. When he got near the bench he hobbled, because that was the only thing the leg could do, and wiped his hand across his wet full face. The tragedy of it all hit the crowd all at once. There suddenly was no partisanship in stands that had been hotly biased. Friend and foe stood up silently to watch the old guy go away. An I. N. P. shot, photographed from the third base side of the field, shows Fred's back about to disappear into his dugout. . . . The true end of his active baseball road. The pictures show the faces of fans behind the Dodger dugout. It is an arresting and poignant study in expressions. Near the top of the picture a black-haired woman bites her lip in dismay. A fan or two appauds the plucky old baseball battler, but most of the faces seem too shocked to applaud. Mrs. Fitzsimmons, sitting in the first row, is bent over—her face in her hands. Their grown daughter has her arm around her mother.

That was Fitz's real last ball game, last play. That was the punch line. Throwing Russo out, hobbling around on his blasted leg, was the sharply etched and fitting epitaph on a fine baseball career.

The Yankees won that game—but they couldn't beat old Fitz. Please forget the tired little epilogue against the Pirates this year. When old Fitz went out he went with class.

Atlantic City, May 27.—Samuel Jackson Snead drew the toughest asignment among the big timers in the first round of the P. G. A. championship at Seaview today and he answered it in traditional Snead fashion. The native Virginian used hs 6-year-old driver to perfection, blasted irons dead to the pin and putted like a master to crush Sammy Byrd, 7 and 6, finishing with five birdies in a row.

Byrd, the former ball player, was in a hot scoring streak and was the sentimental tournament favorite of the seashore fans. He made a match of it for 22 holes, but Snead poured it on from there on home and when the match ended on the thirtieth green Sammy was nine under par. He was 68 in the morning and had par for a 67 in the afternoon.

The entire field made up the greatest group of parbusters in the first round history of the 25-year-old tournament. Every match was won with golf par or better and all were over before the thirtysixth hole, including the ones where defending Champion Vic Ghezzi and two-time titlist Denny Shute were counted out.

Game Is "Rusty"

Rusty was the word for Corporal Ghezzi's golf as he wasted a three-hole morning lead against Jimmy Demaret by losing four holes in a row and finally lost out, 4 and 3. Demaret was two under par but that wasn't particularly good here today and the multi-colored dresser from Detroit took advantage of the champion's lapses for most of his winning holes.

Shute was the victim of the P. G. A. president, Ed Dudley, who is creating quite a stir in this championship, the silver anniversary affair and probably the last for a few years. Dudley simply took an early lead and held it, alternating between two, three and four up and finally winning, 3 and 2, one under par.

Ky Laffoon, the part Indian from Miami, Okla., tied the P. G. A. record for one-sided matches when he gave Iowa's Vic Bass what the pros call a short haul. The match was over on the seventh green in the afternoon, Laffoon winning 12 and 11 and boasting an eight-under par total for the day. He played the par 36 bay nine in 31 in the morning and 32 in the afternoon, needling the pins with sharpshooting accuracy which threatens to give Benny Hogan trouble tomorrow.

Thomson Loses

The favorites fared rather well f r the first of the 36-hole match play rounds. Ghezzi's defeat was forecast by most while Shute was well off his old time form. The only other big name to bow out in surprise fashion was long-hitter, make that wild hiter, Jimmy Thomson, who couldn't cope with Joe Kirkwood, the veteran trick shot artist, and lost 3 and 2, although Kirkwood was just even par, Journeyman's golf today.

Craig Wood, the blond National Open titlist from Mamaroneck, N. Y., has yet to produce the day's best round, but he's getting better and better and advancing rather quietly with what has been the best combined scoring to date. He qualified with four straight 35's and today had three straight 34's and was on the way to another when he

Army Defeats Navy in Four Sports; Middies Win in Golf

2 Meet Records Fall as Cadets Edge Out Middies

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., May 27.—Two Army-Navy track meet records fell today as the West Pointers won the hottest cinder clash in 16 inter-service competitions, edging the Middies, 63 2-3 to 62 1-3.

The Greylegs, victors in every meet except one in the last two years, were forced to wait until the final event, the broad jump, to secure victory.

The squads divided record-breaking honors, Army's 440-yard runner, Jack Morris, turning in a 49.7 quarter-mile, topping the former mark by one-tenth of a second. Navy's Charley Hayen, running the most sensational race of the day, flashed from behind to take the half-mile run in 1:54.2 shattering the old record by seven seconds.

Navy's Jackie Tingle captured both events, winning the 100 in 9.8 and the 220 in 21.9.

Fans Not Safe At Belmont Park, County Charges

By the Associated Press

Mineola, N. Y., May 27.—Col. Edward C. O. Thomas, director of civilian protection of Nassau County, said tonight that he had warned officials of Belmont Race Track that they have failed to take "proper precautions for the protection of lives" at the park.

Reporting that he had outlined the complaint in a letter to Marshall Cassidy, track official, Colonel Thomas set the compliance deadline for June 1 "until which time I shall defer action."

Col. Thomas charged that medical facilities were "non-existent," air-raid wardens were "untrained and unauthorized," the grandstand shelter was "a hazard," the entire raid protection system was "grossly inadequate," and reports by track officials on work that supposedly had been done were "misleading."

Cassidy expressed surprise at the letter and commented "we'll be only too happy to take any steps that they insist we take."

Army Takes Lacrosse Game From Navy, 6-5

Copyright by Herald-Tribune

West Point, N. Y., May 27.—A five-goal surge in the last period gave Army a 6-5 Lacrosse victory over Navy in the best attended of three Army-Navy contests here this afternoon.

Keith Canella and John Hoyt outdistanced Lee Scherer and Roger Spreen in the No. 2 doubles, 6—3, 4—6, 9—7, to earn Army a 5—4 tennis victory, but the Middies won the golf match on the Tuxedo County Club course by that same score, 5-4.

Navy held a comfortable 3-1 lead going into the final period of the Lacrosse game, but two goals by Al Reinert and one each by Jim Cobb, Bill Criss and Jim Waler assured the victory for Army. It was the

Guckeyson Stars As Baseballers Win, 10-3, Before 4000

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, May 27.—Two big innings enabled Army's baseball team to trounce Navy, 10 to 3, today, for their twenty-first victory in the thirty-fifth game of the interservice series.

With approximately 4000 fans looking on, the Cadets broke up a pitchers' duel between Navy's Phil Hurt and Greyleg Bob Whitlow by pouncing on the Middie righthander for five runs in the fifth. They continued the attack against Southpaw Jack Davis, who hurled the sixth, smashing four more runs across.

Bill Guckeyson, Army outfielder, a former University of Maryland athlete, led the ruinous attack, clouting triples in both the fifth and sixth rounds. His second three-bagger came after Davis loaded the bases on walks.

Shortstop Warren McNamara tallied two Middie runs, and clouted a homer in the eighth. He tied the score in the third when he walked, took third on First Baseman Fritz Hansen's single and came home on George Watson's fly to right.

Despite the setback, Navy finished the season with 13 triumphs and 4 defeats. Army's victory gave

Bonham Sets Down A's, 8 to 3

A's Limited to 7 Hits as Yankees' Star Gains Seventh Straight Victory

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—Ernest (Tiny) Bonham, this year's pitching marvel of the major leagues, chalked up his seventh successive triumph today as the world champion New York Yankees toyed with the Philadelphia Athletics to win 8 to 3.

The huge right-hander pitched seven-hit ball without apparent exertion, after his comrades gave him the margin of victory with a five-run splurge in the fourth inning.

The crowd of 6703 fans had anticipated seeing the undefeated star hurl his fifth shutout, but the Athletics stabbed a run across in the second inning to break a string of 15 scoreless innings for Bonham. It was the first time he had been scored on in Yankee Stadium this year.

Before today the big fellow had pitched 49 scoreless frames in the total of 53 innings that he had worked this season, and he looked good enough in the first chapter today to administer another whitewashing. But in the second stanza Dee Miles drove a liner into left center for a triple and scored when Elmer Valo grounded out.

Score Twice First

The Yanks had pounded two runs across in the first inning on a walk to Frank Crosetti, singles by Buddy Hassett and Tom Henrich and DiMaggio's infield out.

Philadelphia tied the score in the fourth when Pete Suder doubled and Miles singled, but in the last half of the same frame the champions crashed through for five runs. After two were out, Phil Rizzuto singled, Bonham walked, Crosetti singled for one run and Hassett for another. Then Henrich slammed his fourth homer into the rightfield stand for three tallies.

In the next inning Tex Shirley replaced Fred Caligiuri and was tapped for the Yanks' final run on singles by Charley Keller, Joe Gordon and Rizzuto.

The A's other run came in the ninth on a double by Dick Siebert, an infield out and a long fly by Valo.

Bonham did not give a single base on balls, making his total issue of passes five in seven games.

Buckeyes, Illini To Give Cleveland 1st Big Ten Game

By the Associated Press

Columbus, Ohio, May 27.—For the first time in history, Cleveland will be the site of a Western Conference football game next November 14 when Ohio State and Illinois stage their traditional contest in the sixth city's municipal stadium.

The game, originally scheduled in the Illinois Memorial Stadium, was shifted to Cleveland today at a conference between Douglas R. Mills, Illini athletic chief, and L. W. St. John, Buckeye sports director. The transfer was made after addition of a game with the Great Lakes Naval Training Station gave Illinois six home contests.

Ten per cent of the gross receipts, the athletics directors said, would be donated to the Army and Navy Relief Funds.

While the November 14 contest will be on a foreign field, so far as the Western Conference is concerned, it will remain a "home game" for Illinois, with the Illini officials retaining control over the entire setup.

Nats' Veteran Shelled In Sixth; 2 Errors By Pofahl and Wild Pitch Aid Scoring

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Griffith Stadium was light last night, and so was the Nats' hitting. Their three-game winning streak got the six-hit treatment from Oscar Judd, Red Sox left-hander, and came to a convulsive end with Boston banging out a 10-to-1 victory.

Seventeen thousand fans descended on the stadium for the season's first night game here and saw Buck Newsom fail for the fourth time to win his fifth game of the season. He was belted out of the box in the sixth inning.

The bleacher throng was shirt-sleeved in deference to the warmth of the evening. The $130,0000 illuminating system and Judd had something in common during the evening. They were both making light of the Nats. Washington didn't escape the ignominy of a shutout until one was out in the ninth inning, and then only by grace of a wild throw by Joe Cronin.

Judd Is Pretty Good

The 31-year-old Judd, who served a long sentence in the minors before being plucked from Louisville by the Red Sox last season, didn't give up a hit until Mickey Vernon singled in the fifth, nor allow a Washington base runner to set foot on third until the ninth. Five of the six Washington hits were singles.

The Red Sox belted Newsom, Alex Carrasquel and Abner Cathey for 13-hits, three of them by the aptly-named Johnny Pesky who figured in all four of Boston's scoring innings.

The Boston club found the Nats a soft touch for a bunting attack, and laid down no fewer than five. Between third baseman Bobby Estalella and the Washington pitchers, the Nats messed up all five bunts, four of which went for hits.

Big Newsom, who won his fourth victory of the season four starts ago, and has beaten nobody since, was in trouble from the start. He steadied and pitched three hitless innings after the Red Sox scored twice in the first, but they swatted him for six hits in the fifth and sixth innings to clinch the game.

Pofahl Boots Two

Shortstop Jimmy Pofahl was no help to Newsom in the first inning, but Big Buck invited his own trouble by walkng DiMaggia and pitching a single to Pesky before getting anybody out. He disposed of Fox on a pop-up, but Ted Williams socked him for a single that scored DiMaggia. Pofahl then messed up Cronin's double-play line drive and Pesky scored. Pofahl made a second consecutive boot on Doerr's grounder to fill the bases, but Repass happily started a double

Nats to Try Again Tonight; Wynn To Face Wagner

The Griffith Stadium lights will be turned on again tonight in a setting that will make big league history of a mild sort—a second consecutive night game in the park. It will be the Nats versus the Red Sox again.

For this engagement, Manager Bucky Harris has Early Wynn ready, a token of renewed faith in the rookie right-hander who has pitched good ball despite three straight defeats.

Dodgers Score 3 in Ninth Off Tobin, Defeat Braves, 4 to 1

Wyatt Gives Up 5 Hits; Sisti Homers

Boston Now Trails League-Leaders by Six Games; Herman Starts With Homer

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—The Brooklyn Dodgers broke Jim Tobin's handcuffs in the ninth inning today and slapped the veteran right-hander for three runs to break a tie and belt the Boston Braves 4 to 1 before a crowd of 10,265.

This last-inning outburst powered by singles by Ducky Medwick and Pinchhitter Pete Reiser and a booming triple by Mickey Owen, gave Whitey Wyatt the decision over Tobin, who tossed a seven-hitter.

Wyatt gave up only five hits and the only loss he suffered was one of prestige when Sibby Sisti connected for his fourth homer of the year in the third inning for the Braves only run. This marked the first time the Bostons managed to score on Whitey in 47 successive innings.

The victory stretched the Dodgers' National League lead to six full games and dropped the Braves to third place a trifle behind the Cardinals.

Herman Homers

Billy Herman started the ball rolling in the first inning by clouting his first homer of the year. Sisti's round-tripper tied it up in the third, and from there through the eighth, Wyatt and Tobin had a lot of fun with the batters.

Opening the ninth, Dolph Camilli worked Tobin for a walk and Dixie Walker sacrificed him along. Medwick scratched a hit back of second to put runners on first and third, and Reiser's pinch-single promptly pushed the tie-breaking tally across. Owen then drilled one into right center for three bases to send two unnecessary runs home and give Wyatt his third victory against one defeat for the campaign. For Tobin, it was six losses compared to five wins.

Tom Hughes Succeeds Mulcahy As Phil's Hard Luck Pitcher

Youngster With 'World of Stuff' Just Can't Overcome a Plague of Bad Breaks

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 27.—Now that Hugh Mulcahy is in the Army, youthful Tommy Hughes is the hard-luck pitcher of the hard-luck Phils.

The right-hander has won only one game this season while losing six. At least half the setbacks resulted from bad breaks. Last year he captured 9 and lost 14.

Bad breaks also plagued "Big Mul," first major league player inducted into the Army.

He always hurled great ball for the Phils, but on most occasions an error or a misjudged fly that fell for a hit cheated him of victory. He lost 12 consecutive games in the latter part of the 1940 campaign, finishing with 13 won and 22 lost.

Loses to Steal of Home

Hughes gave up only two hits in nine innings against the Braves in his first start this season. Unfortunately Danny Murtaugh slipped while trying to steal home in the ninth and the Phils only tied the score at 1-1. In the tenth the Braves got three singles for a run and a 2-to-1 victory.

Next time out, Hughes, an Ashley, Pa., youth, twirled a seven-hitter against the Giants, but lost 3-0 to Southpaw Dave Koslo. The Phils left 15 runners stranded in these two games.

Hughes also lost to Brooklyn and Chicago before winning a 4-to-3 game against Boston on May 10. But the jinx returned when he faced the Cubs in May 15 and lost a 2-to-1 game because of an error and a misjudged fly. The Reds beat him on May 20 and on May 23 the Braves knocked him out in the ninth to tie the score at 5-5, although the Phils came back to win, 6-5.

"But he's coming along, though," declared Manager Hans Lobert. "He's got a world of stuff."

Reds Smash Cubs, 10 to 1, In Relief Game

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 27.—As the second portion of a double-header with all receipts going to Army and Navy relief, Cincinnati's Reds this afternoon walloped the Chicago Cubs 10 to 1, before a crowd of 9,966, which paid $10,455.27.

In the first game, which was played following induction into the Navy of Franklin Barr, 19-year-old Watseka (Ill.) youth, the Great Lakes Naval Training Station team defeated Camp Grant's soldiers, 4 to 1.

In the second game, the Reds smashed over seven runs in the fourth inning to knock out Paul Erickson and win easily while Bucky Walters was scoring his fourth triumph of the season with a seven-hit performance.

The Reds made a total of 13 hits, including Gerry Walker's second homer of the season, which came with bases loaded in the fourth and settled the issue. Five other hits rattled off Cincinnati bats in the same inning.

Browns Down Tigers Behind Niggeling, 5-2

By International News Service

St. Louis, May 27.—Johnny Niggeling notched a 5-to-2 victory over the Detroit Tigers today, giving the St. Louis Browns the better of a three-game series, two games to one.

Niggerling scattered ten hits. Walt Judnich's infield hit, Chet Laabs' triple and the old squeeze play with Rick Ferrell bunting, gave the Browns a lead they never lost in the fourth after the Tigers had scored first in the second.

Judnich homered in the seventh. Charley Gehringer making his first appearance for Detroit since he was brought out of retirement, batted for Eric McNair, but the best he could do was a short fly to right field.

Giants Score Over Phillies At Night, 6-2

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 27.—Bob Carpenter effectively handcuffed the Phils tonight as the New York Giants dambasted the veteran Si Johnson and Tommy Hughes to take a 6-2 decision under the lights.

Although the Phils outhit the Giants nine to eight, the New Yorkers bunched their bingles and held the upper hand throughout.

The Giants scored twice in the second when Johnny Mize opened with a single. Bab Barna walked, Harry Danning sacrificed and Mize came home on Bill Jurges' fly to center. Barna followed him across the plate when Nick Witek hit safely. In the fifth, Witek, who had forced Jurges, counted when Al Glossop let Bill Werber's double-play grounder go through him.

They added another in the following inning after Barna walked, went to third on Danning's single and came home on Jurges' long fly.

Hughes took over the pitching in the seventh and was welcomed by Manager Mel Ott's sharp safety to center. Mize followed suit and Barna brought Ott home, Mize scoring later while Bobby Bragan was starting a double play on Danning's roller.

The Phils' first tally was largely due to Danny Litwhiler, who tripled in the fourth and crossed the plate on Glossop's fly. Singles by Danny Murtaugh and Nick Etten, plus Litwhiler's fly to center, netted the other run in the eighth.

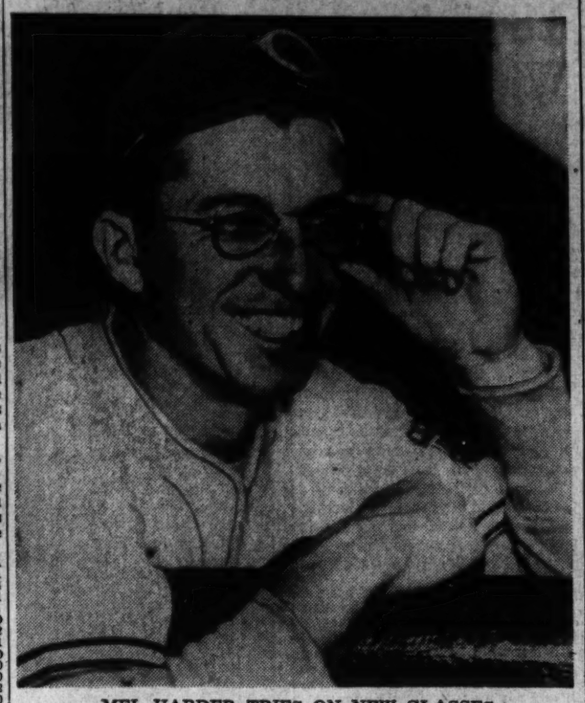
Harder Finds Glasses Cure Night Game Mound Problems



MEL HARDER TRIES ON NEW GLASSES

Star Cleveland Pitcher Was Missing Too Many Catcher's Signs; Now Willing After Dark

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 27.—Move over, Bill Dietrich, Dizzy Trout and Walter Masterson. Mel Harder, the Cleveland curve ball artist, is joining the brigade of the spectacled pitchers.

He missed so many of his catcher's signs, and the plate was so dim in a night game at St. Louis two years ago that Mel decided to do something about it. The time came last night against the Chicago White Sox.

The 32-year-old right-hander donned the spectacles he's been using for reading and the movies. The catcher and the plate emerged from that floodlight haze, but Harder walked into the dugout in the ninth with the comment:

"I might as well take off these cheaters. They know me. I'm still the guy who loses ball games, 1 to 0."

But it didn't happen. The Indians rallied for two runs and Mel's third win against three losses—two of them by heart breaking 1 to 0 counts.

"I couldn't pitch at all at night without them," Harder commented today. "I knew if I didn't wear them I wouldn't be able to see anything because of my astigmatism."

Now he has ordered the shatter-proof kind and plans to try them in a day game. Mel isn't certain he needs glasses with the better illumination provided by sunlight, but he's in the mood to experiment.

That makes two new things about Harder. Over the winter, he underwent an elbow operation which seems to have restored the old zip to his pitching arm. If time proves it has, the Feller-less, second-place Indians can well use the canny Harder who once made a habit of turning in 20 wins a season.

Chisox Collect 17 Hits, Defeat Indians, 9-7

By International News Service

Cleveland, May 27.—Although the Cleveland Indians hit three home runs, the Chicago White Sox finally outslugged them today to win, 9 to 7.

The Sox set a season's batting record for themselves by making 17 hits that included four for Joe Kuhel. Kuhel hit a home run with two men on that almost matched the run output of the Indian homer hitters. Jim Bagby, Roy Weatherly and Les Fleming homered for the Indians but the first two came with the bases empty and the last one with one on.

Speiser Hurls 1-Hitter as Eastern High Downs Coolidge, 4-1

McGinnis' Blow Lone Hit of Game

Winners Smash 4-Game Losing Streak; Speiser Fans 5 Batters

One-hit pitching by "Wee" Speiser, its clever right-hander, put Eastern High's nine back in the win column yesterday after four straight losses in the interhigh series. Coolidge was the victim by a 4-1 count in a seven-inning affair at Eastern.

Speiser, in handing the Colts their fifth loss in a row, was never in trouble. No more than one man reached first in any inning, and only two reached third as the curveballer fanned five and gave up only one base on balls.

The Colts got their only run in the fifth when they were already two runs behind, and Eastern took insurance with single runs in the sixth and seventh. The lone hit off Speiser came in the second off McGinnis' bat.

Meanwhile Jiggs Simpson and Dave Sherman paced a Tide attack that netted nine safeties off Hymie Alpert, a converted catcher. Each of the stars collected three hits, a triple in the third marking Simpson's effort.

Cards Whip Pirates, 5-3; Take Second

By International News Service

Pittsburgh, May 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals moved into second place in the National League by nosing out the Pirates today, 5 to 3.

Martin Marion's single with two out and Stan Musial on third in the eighth inning provided the winning margin. The Cards then added an insurance run when DiMaggio allowed Marion's drive to go through his legs, Marion scoring all the way from first on the error.

Three of the Card runs were unearned. The defeat was the fourth straight for the Pirates and Rip Sewell was charged with his fourth defeat.

Van Robay's three-bagger to right scored two runs for the Pirates in the sixth inning, tied the game and kayoed Murray Dickson. Howard Krist replaced him, but he too was removed in the seventh when two singles and a walk to Fletcher loaded the sacks with one out.

John Beazley came in, retired Elliott on a pop fly and fanned Phelps. He received credit for the victory.

Special Dispatch to The Post

Quantico, Va., May 27.—Soldiers from Camp Lee invaded this stronghold of the Leathernecks today and made off with a 6-5 victory over the Quantico Marines nine. A two-run rally in the ninth inning decided the issue, with a single by Jack Sanford, formerly of the Nats, driving in the clincher. It was Sanford's second hit of the game.

The first Camp Lee run of the inning was tripled home by Nowak, former pitcher with New Orleans, who also was the winning hurler after relieving Perenchio in the sixth.

Quantico threatened in the bottom half of the ninth but a circus catch by Right Fielder Hall of a towering drive by Frank Reagan, former University of Pennsylvana All-America halfback, prevented trouble.

Ray Robinson, Servo Fight In N.Y. Tonight

By the Associated Press

New York, May 27.—The winning streak of 120 straight fights that Ray Robinson has put together runs smack into the battler the Harlem skinny man respects more than any other in the welterweight division tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

This little fellow is Marius Severino, know to the trade as Marty Servo. He's a baby-faced kid out of Schnectady, a cousin of former lightweight Champion Le Ambers and a pretty fair country flailer in his own right.

In their first meeting, he came closer to putting a period onto Ray's string than any other fighter the Harlem Hammer has met, and since then "Sugah" has declined the issue of a return bout on two separate occasions. Meantime Servo, who previously served a three-year National Guard hitch, enlisted in the Coast Guard.

Bout Is 10-Rounds

The current punch-party is a 10-rounder and the thing is so "hot" in these parts that Promoter Mike Jacobs joyfully expects some 15,000 of the faithful and a gross gate within shouting distance of the $40,000 mark by the time they go to the post at 10 p. m. (E. W. T.).

Riding along on a victory run of 89 amateur and 31 pro outings, Robinson is a 1 to 4 favorite for this shindig. This corner tabs him to win the decision, in spite of Servo's move-in-and-belt style which figures to be just what the doctor would not order for Ray.

Robinson's a tall, bony Negro, with speed that he turns on and off like his grin and a punch with either hand that is the closest thing to a can of ether you can imagine. Anyway, the results are the same.

Ray was to have had a go at Red Cochrane's welterweight title long ago, but something always popped up. Recently it has been the Navy, to which Red is attached.

Last September 25, Robinson tangled with Servo in Philadelphia, and that time Marty carried a 46-straight winning string of his own into the ring. Going into the tenth round, it was as close as the buttons on your vest. Then Ray turned it o.. and finished on top by a whisker with his last-round rally. They were signed for a return bout in the Quaker City, but after agreeing to it. Ray came down with grip. When he recovered he wanted no part of the go.

Servo contends he had only recently recovered from an illness the night of their first tea party, and wasn't in top shape. This time, he's threatening things to the up-town string bean and they're not pretty.

Charlotte Hall Beats N. T. S. Nine by 8 to 2

Frank Cady of the losers pounded out a single, double and triple in four trips to take batting honors. Shortstop Harvey's two singles in four tries topped the winners' attack.

Nearly Left at Post, Peace Day Wins Charles Town Feature

Weber Rides Victor; Pays $24.20 Price

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 27.—Almost left at the post and a trailer in the early stages, P. M. Dunkle's Peace Day turned on the heat in the closing three furlongs and won the Ashby Gap Purse, featuring the midweek program here. The 4-year-old daughter of Peace Chance and Summer Day forged to the finish line under Jockey Wayne Weber's handling a length and a half in advance of Mrs. William Lynch's Bronx II. The latter was a neck in front of Norman Corbin's Brazen Hussy, the favorite in the field of seven going seven furlongs.

It was to the tune of a $24.20 win mutuel that Peace Day turned in her remarkable race. She was clocked in 1.28 over the first real fast track in more than a week.

The defeat of the favored Brazen Hussy can be chalked up to Dottie, one of the longshots in the field. Dottie set a swift pace and Brazen Hussy, which runs best in front, wore herself down trying to catch the leader. When the real test came, Brazen Hussy was through. Jockey Weber did not hustle Peace Day when the filly dwelt right after the start. He moved in on the rail to save ground and when the front runners faded, he took Peace Day through on the inside and kept her to the whip to the end.

Bronx II, outrun early, rallied to Jockey Herb Claggett's handling in the stretch and closed fastest of all to catch the tiring Brazen Hussy.

The victory was a welcome one for Jockey Weber who received word just before he went to the post that he had been fined $25 for failure to keep his mount, Discobolo, straight in the stretch run. Discobolo finished third to Mrs. N. E. Stanton's Butterman, well ridden by Jockey Danny Scocca, the Washington boy. The second horse to the $6.20 shot was Highland Song, owned by C. E. George, of Washington.

Jockey Sammy Palumbo made the daily double, paying $17, a personal proposition. He won the second race with Showabal, owned by Mrs. H. Bowyer, and came back in the third race to pilot Edward Brining's Marandan to victory. Jockey Carson Kirk, Silver Spring, Md., boy, rode two winners on the card. He brought Saint Pyrewick and Grouchy home, both for Owner D. H. Tabler, of Charles Town.

N. Y. Central's Gross Up 26% In Four Months

Operating revenues of the New York Central increased 26 per cent the first four months this year, President F. E. Williamson said yesterday, and "it can be expected the volume of business during the remainder of the year will be substantial."

He told the annual stockholders' meeting in Albany, however, that the net income of $7,385,000 for the four-month period represented an increase of only about 8 per cent due to the fact that the benefit of increased rates (passenger and frieght) affected only a portion of the period, whereas the increased wage rates (to employes) and other costs affected the entire period.

Operating revenues of $447,789,655 last year were 20.85 per cent more than 1940, with freight traffic showing the greatest gain. Net income, after all deductions, was $26,245,562, the largest in the last 11 years. Tax accruals amounted to $43,411,829, an increase of $9,935,810 or 73.98 per cent over the previous year.

Rubber Study Issued

In view of the dominating role in the news now played by rubber, Smith, Barney & Co. have issued a timely study prepared by Charles Kennard of the firm. The study presents a comprehensive picture of the overall rubber situation in an effort to clarify much if the confusion now existing.

It shows that, according to the last figures given by Leon Henderson, even after a cut in allocations of 25 per cent, requirements for military and essential civilian purposes of the United Nations will be at least 700,000 tons a year, and that such requirements do not include a single pound of rubber for the civilian passenger automobile.

Stocks of rubber and the remaining sources of supply are analyzed and a detailed discussion is given of the various types of synthetic rubber, of the program for the construction of synthetic rubber plants, and of the time schedule and costs of such program.

NEW OFFICERS of the District Bankers Association as elected yesterday at the closing session of the annual convention, at the Columbia Country Club

By Malcolm G. Douglas
Post Staff Writer

A five-point program designed to aid the Government in prosecuting the war was outlined yesterday in resolutions adopted at the final session of the convention of the District of Columbia Bankers Association at the Columbia Country Club.

Financial aid to the war effort would be made through (1) encouraging thrift and discouraging needless spending; (2) push the sale of war bonds and stamps, and tax anticipation notes; (3) subscribe to Treasury issues suitable for banks; (4) help maintain broad and dependable markets for Government securities, and (5) by financing war industries, both in plant expansions and current operations.

At the annual election of officers John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, was named president of the association; A. Scott Offut, vice president of the City Bank, first vice president; Sidney A. Taliaferro, vice president and trust officer of Riggs National Bank, second vice president; Bruce Baird, president of National Savings & Trust Co., third vice president; Albert S. Gately, executive vice president of Lincoln National Bank, treasurer; Frank J. Hogan, general counsel, and Donald W. Larson, secretary.

A. B. A. Aides Named

Officers in the American Bankers Association representing the District of Columbia are Wilmer J. Waller, member of the A. B. A. nominating committee, and Rutherford J. Dooley, alternate member. Mr. Waller is vice president and cashier of Hamilton National Bank, and Mr. Dooley, vice president and cashier of National Bank of Washington.

Local vice presidents for the four bank divisions of the A. B. A. were named as follows: National Bank, W. T. Vandoren, vice president and cashier of Liberty National Bank; trust division, John Saul, executive vice president of American Security & Trust Co.; savings, J. M. Rountree, vice president of Security Savings & Commercial Bank, and State bank, Francis E. Robey, cashier of Bank of Commerce & Savings.

The Council of Administration for the District for the ensuing year will consist of: President Reilly, First Vice President Offut, Second Vice President Taliaferro, Third Vice President Baird, Treasurer Gatley, and retiring President T. Stanley Holland; and Charles H. Doing, vice president, of Washington Loan & Trust Co.; Willard G. Barker, president of Morris Plan Bank; A. M. McLachlen, vice president and treasurer, of McLachlen Banking Corporation; Ord Preston, president of Union Trust Co., and Stanley D. Willis, trust officers of National Metropolitan Bank.

At the final morning session, John M. Christie, president, Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, reported on his administration, stating that while enrollment of members had declined during the past year, it had been a satisfactory one for the chapter, and thanked the association for its support.

"No Funds" was the topic of a spiritualistic address by the Rev. John J. Reilly, director of the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

President Reilly of the association, who serves for the coming year, was born November 1, 1901. He is a native of Washington and attended Business High School, where he received a scholarship to Georgetown University Law School. He received his degree of bachelor of laws in 1924. For ten years he was an official of the Washington Association of Credit Men, and in 1925 elected secretary-manager and counsel for its adjustment bureau. On March 1, 1931, he was elected a vice president of the former Federal American National Bank & Trust Co. Following the bank recess in 1933, he was appointed a receiver of that institution and the Chevy Chase Savings Bank by the Comptroller of the Currency.

500 Attend Dinner

Special guests and their wives seated at the speaker's table included Lanier P. McLachlen, president, Washington Board of Trade; D. J. Needham, general counsel, American Bankers Association; Dr. Harold Stonier, executive manager, also of the American Association; George H. Keesee, Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond; William H. Donovan, assistant general counsel, District Bankers Association; Preston Delano, Comptroller of the Currency; Lawrence Clayton, assistant to the Chairman, Board of Governors, Federal Reserve System; Constantine Brown, foreign news analyst, and Father Reilly, of the Shrine of the Immaculate Conception.

Oil States Rap Nationwide Gas Rationing Plan

By the Associated Press

Tulsa, Okla., May 27.—From the petroleum industry's land of plenty came a groundswell of protests this week against the proposition of Nation-wide rationing of gasoline.

The wisdom of denying gasoline to motorists in States where storage tanks are filled and overflowing was questioned by Governors and Congressmen and by many executives of the oil industry so vitally affected.

There was no apparent selfishness or lack of patriotism in the wave of indignation that swept across the country following the War Production Board's announcement that such rationing soon would be placed in effect. There was merely a desire to know if such a movement bearing strongly upon the economic life of almost every man, woman and child in the Nation was a necessity step toward winning the war.

Foes Ask Hearing

Such a plan, the industry insisted, should not be tried without complete knowledge of all that is involved. To that end, opponents of the program asked that it be deferred until they were given a chance to be heard.

While the WPB reported that Nation-wide gasoline rationing was necessary as a tire-conservation measure. State officials and oil men doubted if the disastrous effects on the industry and the inconvenience to the people would be justified by the saving in rubber.

A resolution approved by a group of oil executives in a meeting here declared, in fact, that such a move would retard rather than speed the war effort.

By-Products Cited

For example, they pointed out, the fuels and lubricating oils essential to the war machines, as well as some of the ingredients of explosives and synthetic rubber, cannot be produced without manufacturing gasoline in the same refining process.

Already, though, there is so much gasoline in storage in some States that refineries have been forced to close, and if sales to motorists are restricted, the gasoline will have to be burned for lack of additional storage space.

The refiner complains that gasoline is his chief money product and unless he can sell what he produces, he will operate at a loss. Fuel oils which are manufactured for the armed forces, he says, bring less than the cost of production, because peacetime prices still prevail in the face of greatly increased operating costs.

An "Asinine" Protest

And so it goes back to the crude oil producer, who argues that rationing will force him to curtail production or shut down his wells, and to the State governments, which will be hurt by the loss in oil production taxes.

But dark as the picture is painted, most oil men have proclaimed their intention of co-operating in any move which will aid the war effort, regardless of its disastrous effects on their own business.

They describe Nation-wide gasoline rationing, however, as "silly" and "asinine" and before it is accepted graciously they insist upon being convinced that it is essential to victory.

Philip Morris & Co. Preferred Is Offered

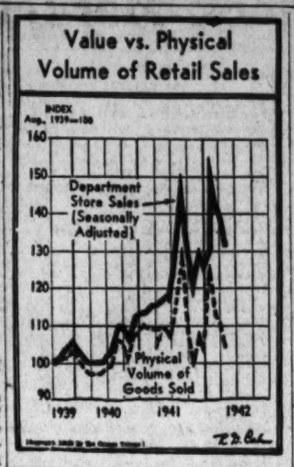
New York, May 27 (AP).—Public offering was made today of 17,609 shares of Philip Morris & Co. 4½ per cent cumulative preferred stock at 102 a share by a banking group headed by Lehman Brothers.

The stock represented the remainder of 49,666 shares offered but not taken by stockholders or otherwise disposed of during the subscription period which began May 16 and ended last Monday.

The same group also offered six million dollars of the company's 20-year 3 per cent debentures at 102. Proceeds from the financing will be used to pay off bank loans and add to working capital.

Todd Cuts Dividend

New York, May 27 (AP).—Directors to Todd Shipyards Corporation have declared a dividend of 50 cents a share, payable June 15 to holders of record June 1. In March this year the company paid a dividend of $1.50 a share and a payment of this amount was made in June last year.



Meat Packers Warned of Price Evasions

By the Associated Press

Price Administrator Leon Henderson yesterday warned the meat packing industry against reported evasions of the general price ceiling order.

Henderson said that "ignorance—professed or actual—of the provisions of the regulation" would not be accepted by the Office of Price Administration as an excuse for violations, and persons failing to comply would subject themselves to "prosecution for the maximum penalties provided."

Field reports and numerous inquiries reaching Washington have indicated that some persons in the industry have informed the trade that selling prices would be the same for different classes of purchasers, Henderson said. In other words, the same price has been charged for local deliveries as for deliveries to purchasers at a great distance.

This is in direct violation of the price order, Henderson said. Another reported form of violation was charging for inferior grades the prescribed "highest March" price for better grades of the same cut.

The Price Administrator noted that in some instances abnormal sales were made in March, which did not reflect the differentials usually given to purchasers of a certain class, and that in some cases sellers have taken advantage of such unrepresentative transactions in an effort to eliminate customary price differentials.

If this practice should continue, Henderson said, OPA would find it necessary to establish a system of fixed differentials, or to revise downward the level of maximum prices in the meat industry "in order to correct the price rise which is the real effect of disregarding price differentials which prevailed in the past."

Late Earnings Statements

Gliddden Co., manufacturers of paints and food products, reported $1,118,049 net profit on sales of $41,697,088 for the six months ended April 30, against $1,033,811 on sales of $28,191,314 for the same period a year earlier.

Remington Rand, Inc., reported for the year ended March 31 net profit of $6,190,998, equal to $3.07 a share on the common stock. This compared with $4,263,249, or $2.17 a share, in the preceding fiscal year.

Walworth Co and subsidiaries, manufacturers of valves and fittings, reported net profit for the first quarter was $304,820, equal to 22 cents a common share, against $427,775, or 30 cents a common in the like period of 1941. Profit before provision for income taxes was set at $2,689,601 for the 1942 quarter against $742,743 in the 1941 period.

Bulge in Auto Sales Flattens On New Threat

By David J. Wilkie
Wide World Automotive Editor

Detroit, May 27.—Extension of the gasoline rationing program in the interest of tire conservation, according to automobile industry authorities, will mean the elimination of an additional large number of car retailers.

The fuel rationing already affects something like 30 per cent of the Nation's passenger car owners. Extended to every one of the more than 29 million passenger vehicle operators it will mean a sharp reduction in repair and maintenance work and consequently further curtail dealer income, these experts assert.

According to trade reports the bulge in new-car sales that followed the recent easing of restrictions by the Office of Price Administration has been brought to a practical standstill by reiteration of plans to curtail car use by limiting gasoline purchases, probably around July 1. The same advices present a gloomy picture of used car sales in most sections.

When the possibility of car requisitioning first was advanced some trade sources expressed the belief that older models in dealers' possession might be taken over before privately owned vehicles would be affected. Trade sources now suggest that since reduction of car usage is the objective there is little likelihood that vehicles on dealer floors or lots would be taken over first.

In this motor-minded Capital of the Nation's automobile industry talk of tire scarcity and fuel rationing that would limit privately-owned car operation has brought varying reactions. There has been no disposition to question the shortage of rubber and the impossibility of replacing tires, but everybody would like to do so.

There has been concern in official quarters, however, lest a fuel rationing program as rigid as that effected in the Eastern States be invoked here and cripple transportation of war factory workers expected to number in excess of one million by the end of the year.

Power Production Shows More Than Seasonal Climb

New York, May 27 (AP).—The Edison Electric Institute reported today power production in the week ended May 23 was 3,379,985,000 kilowatt-hours, .7 of 1 per cent more than for the previous week and compared with 2,040,029,000 kilowatt-hours in the corresponding week a year ago.

The Pacific Coast continued to lead other regions in the size of advances over '941 with a gain of 19.2 per cent, the Southern States following with 15.4 per cent.

Other regional increases from a year ago were New England 9 per cent, Midatlantic 8.2, Central Industrial 9, West Central 8.2, and Rocky Mountain 4.6.

The more-than-seasonal increase lifted the Associated Press index of power production to 158.9 per cent of the 1929-20 average compared with 158.7 the previous week and 144.4 a year ago.

Philadelphia, May 27 (AP).—The Baldwin Locomotive Works announced today the dollar value of orders taken in April was $106,698,933, compared with $7,668,545 for April, 1941.

The month's bookings, the company said, brought the total for the first quarter to $222,095,358, compared with $30,506,880 for the same period last year. The figures covered Baldwin and wholly owned subsidiaries.

'Plastic' and 'Light Metal' Age Near for U. S., Says Arnold

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 27.—America may be on the verge of a new industrial "plastic" and "light metal" age of high production and low prices, says Thurman Arnold.

"The war is going to operate like a purge," the trust-busting Assistant United States Attorney General declared in an article in the Saturday Evening Post which appeared today.

"Expanding production (after the war) is going to go on in all basic materials at once and also in transportation. Surpluses will force their way into consumers' hands. The red blood of price competition is going to flow freely again after the war."

Asserting that monopolies had been broken by the Nation's wartime needs, Arnold envisaged:

Huge production of magnesium—a light metal which he said would make airplanes, automobiles and trains lighter, stronger and cheaper.

Better fuel—gasoline with a higher than 100-octane rating "a reality within the year" and providing many more miles to the gallon."

Wider use of plastics—possibly an all-plastic automobile body, and plastic window panes provided research can overcome a tendency of plastics to show scratches.

"The consumer's dollar," wrote Arnold, "is going to be worth more after the war than it ever was before and the farmer's products can be traded for more manufactured products than ever before."

Arnold declared there was no need for thinking that an economic depression would follow the war.

If the war wold last five years, he said, there will be a vast consumer market to soak up production.

"There will be a five years' supply of automobiles to produce—which means 25 million automobiles. There will be the need to convert fabricating plants in order to satisfy this conumers' need. There will be the savings created by war bonds sold to consumers. And to meet all this demand there will be the greatest supply of basic materials—rubber, metals, plastics—that the country has ever known.

If these materials are not cornered by private groups, nothing can stop American industry from working overtime to meet that demand."

American Telephone & Telegraph owns 1,489,596 of the 1,500,000 outstanding common shares of Illinois Bell. Income of the parent company from Illinois Bell in the June quarter will be reduced $372,399 from that received in the March quarter.

Player Hurt, Marketmen Win

Taken to Hospital, Player Is Not in Serious Condition; Cameo Nine Wins

Jack Remington, third baseman for the Center Market nine of the Post-Industrial Baseball League, narrowly escaped serious injury yesterday when struck in the head by a ball pitched by Warren Erhardt of the H. & J. Construction team. Center Market won, 8-6.

Before the eyes of his young wife, Remington failed to duck a fast ball and crumpled in his tracks. He was taken to Emergency Hospital where it was reported no fracture nor concussion was suffered but he would be retained overnight for observation.

Meantime Cameo Furniture, the league leader, maintained its lead over the second-place Center Marketmen, by defeating Little Tavern, 6-3, as Printz gave up only five hits and blanked the foe until the sixth.

Center Market clinched its victory with a six-run outburst in the first inning off Watt. It added a final two runs in the seventh which offset a pair of tallies the battling Construction team shoved over in the ninth.

ARLINGTON

The Marge's Beauty Salon girls won the flag in the Arlington Ladies League with a 13-game margin over Bauserman's Service. Virginia Wright was top average girl in the league with 103. In the handicap tournament the winner was Dorothy Lee with 352 followed by Margaret McVain's 333, Katherine Hans' 325 and Jackie Polaski's high game of 123.

TAKOMA

The Takoma Recreation mixed league had its inaugural last night at Bill Gartrell's alleys with Manager Gartrell himself teaming with Jimmie Harding to gain most of the honors, the former with a 340 set and the latter with highs of 118-333. Snead's Brilliant Golf Routs Byrd, 7 and 6, in P. G. A.

blasted big Rod Munday out, 5 and 4. If you've seen the Seaview course you will be duly impressed by the fact that Wood played 32 holes today without a five. All threes and fours, with an occasional deuce.

The two boys with the big reputations had little trouble getting by today, Byron Nelson, who'se been in the finals for the past three years, winning once, had one bad nine, but ousted Harry Nettlebladt, 5 and 3, finishing four under par. Benny Hogan, Hershey's big money winner for three straight years, won three of the first four holes from bronzed Benny Loving, now from Massachusetts, and was getting better as he let Loving have it on the thirtieth green with four-under-par shooting, 7 and 6.

Gibson Third

Third to Snead and Laffoon among those who shellacked Seaview's reputed par and the opposition today was Leland Gibson of Kansas City, who didn't feel like walking the last nine and drubbed Texan Jimmy Gauntt, 10 and 9. Gibson, if you please, was seven under par, finishing with a 40-foot putt for an eagle three, and he'd like to repeat it against Craig Wood tomorrow.

Medalist Harry Cooper suffered a natural let-down in the morning against Mike Turnesa and found himself three down, but after lunch Turnesa was out to lunch and Cooper breezed in on the thirty-fifth with a 3-and-1 margin, second closest match of the day.

Tommy Harmon put out Host Pro Bruce Coltart in a local surprise. Willie Goggin came from behind to beat Billy Burke's kid brother, Eddie, Tony Penna outlasted Jimmy Hines, Jim Turnesa routed Dutch Harrison and Jug McSpaden, a fine match play golfer, was too much for Sammy Parks. Lloyd Mangrum, a semifinalist last year, finally beat his one-time boss, Dick Metz, 6 and 5, after turning the first nine 7 up and leading 8 up at the halfway mark.

The 16 first-round winners posted a combined total of 61 under par. The losers all collected $100 for their qualifying efforts.

Snead meets Willie Goggin tomorrow in one of the feature matches. Sammy, who wants to win this one before entering the Navy next week, would like to pick up his string of five straight birdies which ended the match today. All his putts were under 15 feet for the subpar efforts, and for the day he had 11 birdies, most of them fairly short but usable putts.

Norfolk Nine To Meet Army Stars June 14

By the Associated Press

Norfolk, Va., May 27.—The star-studded Norfolk Naval Training Station baseball team, coasting along with 33 victories and four defeats, will battle an all-star Army team at the Polo Grounds in New York on Sunday, June 14, it was announced tonight.

This contest is one of three such games which will be played by the sailors in which proceeds will benefit the Army and Navy Relief Funds.

The Tars will meet Baltimore of the International League on June 10, while on June 21 they go to Washington, where they mix with the soldiers of Camp Lee for the fourth time this season. The sailors have won two of their games with the soldiers, while Camp Lee salvaged the other encounter, played at Richmond last Sunday.

Norfolk boasts such stars as Freddie Hutchinson, the $50,000 hurler of the Detroit Tigers; Vincent Smith, reserve catcher last season with the Pittsburgh Pirates; Mel Prebisch of the Boston Braves, Sam Chapman, the batting ace of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Jim Carlin of the Philadelphia Phils.

The Army team which will oppose the sailors at the historical Polo Grounds likewise is composed of former big-leaguers. Among them are big Hank Greenberg of Detroit, Buddie Lewis and Cecil Travis of the Washington Senators, Hugh Mulcahy, the "hard luck"-famous mound star of the Philadelphia Phillies; Porter Vaughan of the Athletics, who holds a victory over the sailors; Clarence Campbell of the Cleveland Indians, Jack Sanford of Washington and Zeke Bonura of the New York Giants.

Newsom, Nats Beaten By Red Sox

play on Finney's smash.

They didn't get another hit off Newsom until the fifth, and then they got three, and a pair of runs. Judd himself singled through the box, and with one out Pesky singled to right. Fox forced Pesky for the second out, and Newsom appeared to be getting out of trouble but his control became unhinged and a wild pitch scored Judd from third. Williams, with a three-and-two count, singled through the box for the second run of the inning.

Bunts Are Discombobulating

The Red Sox suddenly switched to a bunting attack in the sixth. After Finney walked, Conroy astonished Estalella with a bunt and beat it out. Judd, who catches on quickly, also bunted and it went for a hit when Newsom overran the ball, filling the bases. Estalella took DiMaggio's grounder to cut off a run with a throw to the plate but the pesky Pesky singled to left, drove two runs in and Newsom out. Carrasquel got the pitching job and his first act was to pitch a looping single to Fox which scored the third and fourth runs of the inning.

In the eighth they touched up Carrasquel for two more with their fourth and fifth safe bunts of the night, and improved their lead to 10-0.

The Nats meanwhile couldn't get up a gallop with their bats. They had four hits going into the ninth inning, and two of them belonged to Vernon. In the ninth Estalella doubled against the center-field wall and stayed on second while Evans was beating out a hit to Cronin. Repass grounded to Cronin whose throw to second went into right field and Estalella scored. But Pofahl popped up and Pinchhitter Bruce Campbell grounded out and the Nats' valiant attempt to tie the score fell nine runs short.

Maryland Teams To Try Grid-Eye, Yardage Gauge

The Grid-eye, an invention of H. B. Lamar of this city to more accurately gauge football yardage, will be in use for the feature of two intrasquad games to be presented by Clark Shaughnessy's University of Maryland teams Saturday at College Park.

Lamar, former Western High and George Washington gridder, said that he has applied for a patent on his invention which, he says, has been gaining favor with coaches in the East and South. It was used last fall in Richmond for the Tobacco Bowl game between D. C. All-Stars, picked by The Post, and a Richmond high school eleven.

DeGaulle's Bid For Recognition Again Is Rejected

Secretary of State Hull again rejected yesterday a bid for Gen. Charles de Gaulle, leader of the Free French movement, for political recognition by the United States.

Hull said the main objective of the United Nations was to carry forward the military phases as expeditiously as possible with a view to achieving victory. He recalled previous statements in which it was made clear that the United States regards the De Gaulle commission as the symbol of French resistance to the Axis, but that the future government of France should be determined by the French people themselves once they are liberated and able to express their own choice.

The communications system of Martinique, including radio, telephone and cable facilities, is now under discussion in conversations which are continuing between Rear Admiral John H. Hoover, commander of the Caribbean Sea front, and Admiral Georges Robert, French high commissioner at Martinique, the Secretary disclosed. Strict control over communications is regarded as extremely important to prevent Axis propaganda from being circulated among the Latin-American countries, thereby impairing the security of the Western Hemisphere.

Veteran Printers See Brobyn's California Films

Pictures made by Walter J. Brobyn during the District Commissioners' tour two years ago to California were shown by him yesterday at a meeting of Columbia Typographical Union 101 Association of Veteran Union Printers, in Pythian Temple, 1012 Ninth Street Northwest.

He was introduced by William T. Martin, chairman of the entertainment committee, who announced that plans for a tour to Colorado, which was to have been made this summer by the Tourist Club, had been canceled because of the war. Martin, who arranged yesterday's program as a means of celebrating his seventy-third birthday anniversary, presented Brobyn with a tripod and screen on behalf of the A. V. U. P.

President John Dickman, sr., presided over yesterday's business session during which Walter T. Roche was elected secretary to fill the vacancy created by the death of H. M. Barnhart.

This is part of a May Week celebration.

Dr. E. Franklin Frazier, head of the university department of sociology, and Mme. Lillian Evanti, internationally known soprano, will also participate. An exhibit of Latin-American and Negro art will follow the program, in the Library art museum.

Davis Backs Bill To Guard Emblem Of Red Cross

Copyright by Chicago Sun

Red Cross Chairman Norman H. Davis yesterday told the House Foreign Affairs Committee that commercial use of the Red Cross emblem undermines the morale and unity of the American people and interferes with proper performance of duties of the Red Cross organization.

Testifying in support of the bill which would protect the Red Cross emblem and name from commercial use, Davis declared that they should be used only by the Army and Naval forces, and by National Red Cross societies.

"Use of the Red Cross emblem for commercial purposes makes it easy for one desiring to undermine morale and unity among the people, particularly in wartime, to spread rumors about the Red Cross such as that the Red Cross is selling articles that are contributed for free distribution for relief purposes, or that the Red Cross is receiving a commission from, or participation in the profits from the sale of these advertised products," Davis testified. "The commercial use of the emblem tends to cheapen it, and weakens the respect in which it is held."

Permission to make copies of the books was granted by Dr. Hu Shih, the Chinese Ambassador. Venezuelan Cabinet Will Be Reorganized

Caracas, May 27 (INS).—The entire Venezuelan cabinet resigned tonight, but the action was seen merely as a move to give President Medina an opportunity to reorganize his government as he sees fit.

It was believed that he would reappoint most of its members, including Foreign Minister Caracciolo Parra Perez, who will visit the United States next week. In addition to the cabinet, the governor of the federal district and the President's secretary also submitted their resignations.

HIGHLIGHTS

ARCH McDONALD

WJSV Sportscaster

8:00

Hear "Thirty Cents a Mile," a true and humorous story of the old West, of how love conquers a bad man and collects the reward on a mileage basis.

8:30

That master musician and arranger Raymond Scott puts on a real music show called "Powerhouse." This one is really clicking with the music sophisticates.

Two old favorites: Major Bowes and his amateurs in the first half hour and Edward G. Robinson's "Big Town," with an international flavor, in the second.

(And of course at 11 I do my own little show with music and McDonaldisms. Have a listen then, won'tcha?)

Grin and Bear It

By Lichty

"Chief Big Bear patriotic—gettum squaw—raisum victory garden."

Listen! with Glynn

Less than three months ago pretty, teen-age Vera Barton checked into the C. B. S. Studios in New York to make an unannounced network debut as star of her own program, "Songs in the Mood of Love," which is heard every Tuesday and Thursday evening over WJSV at 6:30.

Vera's throaty contralto voice brought visions of an exotic personality, and the unknown newcomer ever since has been beseiged with calls to appear at service camp entertainments, make phonograph records, head a Nationwide campaign to promote feminine fashions and pose for photographs.

So it was that all these offers led to the revelation that the rising young star had never had a singing lesson, but had been training for years to become a professional dancer. The abrupt about-face in her career plans was purely accidental.

In the Bartons' 14-room home in Brooklyn there is a microphone-equipped music corner in the basement playroom, which is something of a community center for the music-loving friends of the neighborhood.

One evening a talent scout was among the family guests who heard Vera singing as her sister, Virginia, played an unusual arrangement of a popular song. He suggested that they make a recording for him, and a few days later a radio contract changed Vera's professional career from dancing to singing. One of New York's leading voice coaches now supervises Vera's study, but she insists that Virginia's arrangements be used on all her programs.

Contract Bridge

A little trouble about the bidding of this hand is reported by R. J. B. The cards:

◇ A K J 4
♣ K 7 6 4

SOUTH
◇ Q 10 9
♣ J 8 3

"We call for an opening of two on four and a half quick tricks," says R. J. B. "North said two diamonds South two spades, to which North responded two no trump. South contends the no-trump bid was entirely wrong and would have justified her passing; however, she did bid three no trump, which closed the bidding. We should like to know your opinion of the above bidding and how you think the hand should have been bid."

Four and a half honor tricks are usually too few to make a forcing two-bid unless freak distribution is held.

Once a forcing two-bid is made, however, it must be respected, and the bidding should be continued by the partners until game is reached.

Two no trump is really the only bid North can make after opening two diamonds, and South is incorrect in her criticism. Normally, a player with South's hand, hearing a two-bid from his partner, would not be satisfied to stop at less than a slam.

We would choose a one-bid for North's original call, the bidding developing something like this:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	1 ♠	Pass
2 NT	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
3 NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Scheduled Flights At D. C. Airport Cut to 90 a Day

The war effort is having a profound effect on traffic at the Washington National Airport, a survey showed yesterday.

The big air lines had been running 198 schedules daily at the airport; that meant a plane was coming in or taking off every seven minutes in the day. Then came the order whereby the air lines were required to transfer a substantial part of their transports to the Army. Sixty schedules had been eliminated by yesterday.

"By June 1," said Airport Manager John Groves, "the schedules will be down to about 90—a reduction of more than half."

Manager Groves said that because of the gasoline and tire situation, there also had been a substantial drop in public attendance at the airport. He estimated the decline at about one-third. Since the airport opened last June, approximately three million persons have visited the airport, adjudged the finest in the world, and 600,000 of those have paid ten cents to go through the turnstiles for a view from balconies.

It does seem as if a chap around two should have his own room. A place where he can play seriously . . . without grown-ups telling him he gets into everything. A place that expresses his personality . . . where the furniture is just the right size for him . . . and the crib and the chest and the costumer 'n everything match. If I had a room like that I'd take pride in keeping it neat. Guess I'd better talk to Mom and convince her we ought to shop in the Infants' Furniture Department, Second Floor, The Hecht Co.
